FINDS IT ALL AT DEARBORN

Exclaims That Ford Has Even Brought Real Jersey Clay and Stump of Menlo Park Elm.

FINALLY SITS IN OLD CHAIR

Onlookers Stand Apart in Silence, Leaving Him for the Moment Alone With His Memories.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 20.—An old man drank today at the well of youth and lived again the hours of his budding genius.

Tom Edison of Menlo Park walked this afternoon on the same clay which saw the birth of the incandescent lamp. Erected upon it were the same buildings.

He stared, chuckled and trembled. There are not many who can recapture youth or have it resurrected for them. But to him it was brought back today as he watched, a bit tremulously, the dress rehearsal at Dearborn for the jubilee program tomorrow.

The eyes which the years have failed to dim clouded suspiciously at times as the magnitude of the celebration was borne in upon him while he walked again through the buildings on the very soil he trod at Menlo Park fifty years ago when he gave the electric lamp to the world.

Amazed to Find Dirt Authentic.

As he looked upon the scene he turned repeatedly to the others in the party, Mrs. Edison, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Firestone and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, excitedly exclaiming at the faithfulness of the reproduction before him.

"I wouldn't have believed it," he said again and again. "It's amazing."

Then scuffing the earth with his toe and turning to Mr. Firestone, he added: "Why, Henry's even got the damn New Jersey clay here."

It was true. Mr. Ford had shipped to Dearborn seven carloads of the soil of Menlo Park, so that even the dirt underfoot might be authentic.

Mr. and Mrs. Edison and the rest of the party spent Sunday morning going through Greenfield, Mr. Ford's Early American village, and through the reconstruction of Menlo Park. They had seen it yesterday when the inventor arrived for the celebration, which is bringing President Hoover and an imposing list of great names to the golden jubilee of light.

But Mr. Edison wished to look at it again, more thoroughly, "to see if Henry didn't forget something somewhere," as he expressed it.

Horses and Oxen in Rehearsal.

As they drove through Greenfield the place hummed with activity. Workmen were putting the finishing touches to the stage properties which will figure in tomorrow's ceremonies.

Oxen and horses were being put through their paces so they shall not upset the decorum of the carefully planned scenes. Horses nowadays are not so familiar with oxen as they were a century or so ago, and the hundred-odd horses which are kept at Greenfield to draw the coaches, hacks, carryalls, phaetons and buggies of the village had to be stage trained not to shy at the sight of a pair of placid cattle hitched to a creaking old wagon.

Mr. Edison chuckled at the sight and made sly jokes to "Henry" about it. But his great interest naturally was Menlo Park.

When he got out of the automobile which brought the party from the Ford residence his face glowed. He was having a grand time. That was as apparent from his appearance as from his remarks.

"They won't let us smoke," he said, turning to Mr. Firestone with what looked suspiciously like a wink anent Mr. Ford's aversion to tobacco, "and my wife won't let me chew," at which he spat with the vigor of an old-time teamster and took another nibble at the plug he drew from his pocket. He chuckled like a mischievous boy.

When the little party began the stroll through Menlo Park Mrs. Edison sought to button her husband's overcoat. He pulled away like the boy who objects to his mother's appearance with a muffler.

"I'm all right," he protested. "I can take care of myself. I'm just as young as I was when I worked there in the old laboratory," nodding toward one of the buildings.

His wife sighed and let him have his own way.

Recognizes Stump of Old Elm.

"Look there!" Mr. Edison had forgotten about the overcoat incident and was walking briskly off. "There's the old place the General Electric used to have, Harvey" (this to Mr. Firestone). "It used to be a photographic studio before they got it. And there's the boarding house just like it stood.

"And by golly it Henry hasn't

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford will receive tomorrow a talking doll made in 1889 by Thomas A. Edison, who is their guest at Dearborn, Mich., in connection with the fiftieth anniversary of his invention of the incandescent lamp. The doll is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. John Ott. Mr. Ott, who is the inventor's personal laboratory assistant and has been in his employ since 1876, took the doll west.

The toy contains a metal record on which is the verse "Mary had a little lamb." When it is wound up the doll talks as distinctly as it did forty years ago. It is an application of Mr. Edison's phonograph idea and similar dolls were manufactured by the thousands here and abroad many years ago.

The verse was spoken by Mary Amerault, who is still in Mr. Edison's employ in West Orange. The doll was dressed and "rejuvenated" by Mr. and Mrs. Ott, according to Mrs. Ford's taste.

HOOVER SPEEDS WEST ON FOUR-DAY TRIP

He Will Deliver First Speech at Edison Celebration at Dearborn, Mich., Tonight.

TO VOYAGE DOWN THE OHIO

By The Associated Press.

ABOARD PRESIDENT HOOVER'S TRAIN EN ROUTE TO DETROIT, Oct. 20.—Bound on a mission to emphasize American achievement and domestic development, President Hoover is traveling into the Middle West tonight on his first long trip since he took office.

Tomorrow night at Dearborn, Mich., he will pay a tribute to Thomas A. Edison and American inventive genius in the celebration there of the fiftieth anniversary of Edison's discovery of the incandescent electric lamp.

Tuesday and Wednesday at Cincinnati and at Louisville the President will acclaim the progress made in the building up of the nation's inland waterway system by the completion of canalization of the Ohio River from Pittsburgh to Cairo, Ill.

Before attending the Edison ceremonies at Dearborn the President will be welcomed to the city and to Michigan by Mayor Lodge and Governor Green at a public reception in the Plaza. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford.

To Make Three Speeches.

Of the President's three speeches, that to be made at Louisville Wednesday night is being awaited with the keenest interest, since it has been announced that he will discuss the progress and future possibilities of inland waterway development.

On his voyage down the Ohio River from Cincinnati to Louisville on a river steamer the President will have an opportunity of visualizing what the development of the river means to that section of the country. The President's boat will leave Cincinnati Tuesday afternoon after Mr. Hoover has dedicated a monument in Eden Park commemorating the development of the river. On the way to Louisville the steamer will stop at Madison, Ind., for the President to be greeted by Governor Leslie of Indiana and a delegation of citizens.

All three of the President's speeches will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast hook-up of the National Broadcasting Company. The Dearborn speech will begin at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening, Eastern Standard Time; that at Cincinnati at 10:30 o'clock, Central Standard Time, Tuesday morning, and that at Louisville at 8:30 o'clock, Central Standard Time, Wednesday evening.

WATSON ASKS SPEED ON TARIFF AS VITAL TO STABLE BUSINESS

COALITION NOW IN CONTROL

SOME DEMOCRATS UNEASY

Simmons, However, Predicts House Will Accept Amended Bill and Hoover Will Sign It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Declaring that delay in enactment of a tariff bill was slowing down business and injuring prosperity, Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate, pleaded today for expedition in the Chamber and urged all forces to consider the pending bill with fairness and a national outlook, to the end that the West and the East would obtain adequate protection and business might continue its onward progress.

He said that the business man was hesitating to make heavy commitments until economic conditions were stabilized by a new tariff law. He saw in the New York stock market break at the end of the week one reaction that might be charged to Senate inability to hasten the passage of the bill.

Senator Watson said that developments of the past few days indicated that the Senate would dispose of the tariff measure by the middle of next month, refer it to conference and adjourn by Thanksgiving, with the prospects of final passage of a tariff bill by Congress early in the year.

"When the Senate this week takes up tariff rates it is to be hoped that the East and West, regardless of the location, will look at this economic bill in a national way," Senator Watson said.

Urge Viewpoint of Industry Also.

"The industrial East must see the necessity of ample protection to farm products in order that agriculture may improve its condition and take its rightful place in the economic scheme of the nation.

"It is equally necessary that the West shall readjust its point of view and permit the industrial rates to be raised to meet any conditions that have followed the post-war reconstruction period. It should be most apparent to the farmer that his prosperity is dependent upon the power of the East.

"If industry is injured and lack of employment arises in the industrial States, the West's best and richest customers in the home market will disappear.

"The interest of the nation is at stake in the tariff. It has been conceived to aid the entire nation and maintain the present prosperity and high wage scale. I urge all factions to approach the legislation in a patriotic way and work out a bill that will be satisfactory to all interests, and at the same time maintain the consistent Republican policy of protection.

"It is quite evident that business is becoming somewhat disturbed by the long delay in the passage of the tariff bill. If this delay is continued at great length it will certainly seriously injure business conditions in the United States, as it already has had a slowing down in business ventures.

"It is earnestly hoped and desired that Senators will view this question in its national aspect and repress their desires to obtain benefits only for their sections and speedily pass a bill that will be beneficial to the nation as a whole."

Republican Leaders More Optimistic.

Senator Watson, while viewing the situation as almost hopeless early last week, feeling then that the bill might be defeated in the Senate, no longer believes that it will meet that fate. It is his opinion, besides the

Indian Summer Sends Throngs to Beaches; Balmy Breezes Follow Close on Record Cold

Indian Summer, officially due with the entrance of the sun into Scorpio on Oct. 23, arrived three days ahead of time yesterday to give the city and vicinity a cloudless day of warmth tempered by light southwest winds. In contrast to the record cold of last Friday, when the temperature dropped to 34 degrees, following a snow flurry on Thursday morning, the temperature crowded close to 70 yesterday, and was never lower than 51 degrees.

Weather conditions throughout the day were "nearly ideal," Dr. James H. Kimball of the weather bureau said last night. He added that the next four weeks should see many similar days, but that he could not predict an immediate continuation of the perfect weather at present.

Crowds of almost midsummer size made Autumn traffic records over suburban highways. In Westchester County crowds nearly equaling those of the hottest days of Summer were reported by the traffic police. Hundreds of picnic parties gathered under the trees near the Kensico and Cornell Dam reservoirs, an 35,000 cars passed over the Bronx River and Sawmill River parkways, and 10,000 persons visited Playland at Rye Beach.

Other thousands took advantage of the clear, mild day to visit Atlantic City and Asbury Park. At both beaches a few bathers were reported. The 50,000 persons who visited Long Beach caused the reopening of many concessions that have been boarded up for the past month.

In the city itself all parks and the wide midtown avenues were crowded with Sunday strollers. Those who walked in Central Park found the leaves assuming the proper colors to serve as Winter's calling cards, but no hint of Winter in the air.

SIX CHILDREN KILLED WITH FATHER BY GAS

NEARLY SAVED BY CALLER

Walter Cavanagh, 42 years old, a chauffeur, was found dead yesterday of gas asphyxiation with six of his children whom he had brought up in a three-room flat at 544 West Forty-sixth Street since their mother died several years ago. A pot of water on a gas stove boiled over and quenched the flame, but the gas flowed on. A neighbor across the hall knocked on the door once, but could not wake Cavanagh to give him a message from his employer who was waiting to be driven to a golf club. A second impatient message made the neighbor decide to climb through the window lest Cavanagh lose his job, but it was too late.

The oldest child, Ethel, 17, who kept house for the family, apparently heard the first knock and got out of bed, but no further. She was on the floor. Catherine, 15, was in the bed in that room.

Three Boys Dead in One Bed.

In the front room, which was used as a parlor, the three boys, Thomas, 11; George, 9, and Walter, 8, lay side by side in a wide folding bed. They were the first the neighbor, Samuel Risnick, saw as he raised the fire escape window and smelled the gas. He ran to the kitchen door and opened it into the hall. Mrs. Mary Donohue, on whose telephone the messages from the employer had arrived, had already come up from the floor below. She went to the kitchen stove and closed the gas jet, which was fully open under a pot of water still warm. Risnick put his hand on Cavanagh's shoulder to shake him, but found the body was already cold.

The youngest daughter, Rose, 13, who looks so like her father that she was his favorite, was in the same room with him.

The ambulance doctor from the Flower Hospital said that Ethel, who had got out of bed, seemed to have resisted longer than the others. Attempts to revive her with an inhalator were kept up for an hour before she was pronounced dead.

Seventh Child Had Left Home.

The police learned that the Cavanagh family lived in the same three rooms for the past fifteen years while the family grew in size. When Mrs. Cavanagh died, the neighbors advised Cavanagh to put the children in a home, but he said he wanted to keep them with him. At that time, he had seven. The seventh, Mary, who was then 17, first had the task of housekeeping, but she insisted shortly on going to live in Greenwich Village. The housekeeping after her departure was done for Cavanagh and his remaining children by Ethel.

Their only extravagance was that they always slept with a light on in the centre room because the six children were nervous when they went to bed alone. Their father often was out late, driving his employer, Louis Reichenbach, a lace importer, living at 37 West Eighty-fifth Street, who paid him $50 a week and thought so highly of him that he paid his salary to keep him in his employ during absences in Europe.

Yesterday morning Cavanagh was to call for his employer at 9:30 A. M. to drive him to the Quaker Ridge Golf Club and the six children were to be fed and dressed in time to attend 9 o'clock mass at the Holy Cross Church on West Forty-second Street. An ivory covered prayer book and a rosary for each were arranged on the mantelpiece of the boys' room around the picture of their mother, Mary Cavanagh, who had wanted them brought up to be devout Catholics. Cavanagh was known to regard their church attendance as important as his application to the job which enabled him to provide them with clothes and food. The children had been scrubbed

WYNNE PICKS SEVEN TO STUDY CITY NOISE

WANTS SOUNDS CLASSIFIED

The appointment of a Noise Commission of New York, the first of its kind ever named officially to study the problems created by the din of a modern city, according to Health Commissioner Wynne, was announced by him last night.

Composed of "a small group of people eminent in some field associated with problems of noise," the commission will have at its disposal, Commissioner Wynne said in a letter addressed to its members, all the facilities of the Health Department and "some of the best laboratory facilities in the country, if not in the world."

The members of the commission are:

LEWIS H. BROWN, president, Johns-Manville Corporation.
Dr. ARTHUR B. DUEL, specialist in aural surgery and otology.
Dr. FOSTER KENNEDY, neurologist.
Dr. SAMUEL JOSEPH KOPETZKY, otologist and author of works on that subject.
Dr. FREDERICK TILNEY, specialist in neurology and author of articles and studies dealing with this subject.

Commissioner Wynne left to the commission privilege of nominating additional members, if it sees fit. An organization meeting will take place within two weeks.

Suggest Scope of Work.

"May I suggest," the commissioner wrote, "the following division into which your work might reasonably fall, although I do not desire to bind you by any of these suggestions.

"1. What is immediately possible under the existing ordinances and laws for the alleviation of the noise nuisance? It seems to me that there are numerous abuses of the characteristic good nature and patience of the New Yorker which might be stopped without further ado. I have in mind such noises as the use of loud-speakers outside shops and in the home; screeching of brakes; the unreasonable playing of musical instruments in homes at unseasonable hours; the abuse of automobile klaxons; the use of muffler cut-outs on automobiles and motor boats; noises from milk cans, ash cans, &c.; riveting work after a reasonable hour at night; turnstiles in subways, &c.

"If you will formulate reasonable rules for the government of these media which are subject to our present laws I will see that they are vigorously enforced so far as the Health Department is concerned.

"2. We need a complete classification of noises; tabulation of intensity geographically arranged; some scientific measurements of principal city noises, together with specific recommendations as to their control or elimination.

"3. We need a scientific statement of the effect of noise on the human being.

Measurements of Noise.

"4. We should have some scientific measurements of certain types of noises; and recommendations as to what constitutes the border line of reasonable inevitable noise and unreasonable noise.

"5. What can be done with respect to sound-absorbing construction in buildings?

"6. What experience is there in any part of the world which we may use as a basis for the elimination of unnecessary noise?

"7. What additional laws, if any, are needed to govern the noise situation in New York?"

Commissioner Wynne, noting that "laborious research" probably would be entailed in many of the researches, said that results might not be immediately available, and added:

"The whole country will watch your work, as you constitute the first official noise commission in the United States. While no reasonable person will expect that the work of your commission will result in the immediate and complete elimination of all noises, I am confident that whatever the fruits of your labors, they will go a great distance to making the city of New York healthier and a more tranquil place in which to live and work."

The temporary director of the commission was announced as Edward F. Brown, who is in charge of the Diphtheria Prevention Commission of the Department of Health.

FEDERAL DRY CASES SET NEW HIGH MARK; CONVICTIONS DROP

Justice Department Started 56,786 Prosecutions in Fiscal Year, Against 55,729 in 1928.

WON 47,100, OR 1,720 LESS

Fines Assessed Rose to $7,476,300, or $173,000 More Than in Preceding Twelvemonth.

HALF OF COURT CASES DRY

Southern New York District Leads in Number—District of Columbia Is Near the Top.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—A sharp increase to another record high point in the number of prohibition cases instituted by the Federal Government was reported by the Department of Justice tonight for the fiscal year 1929.

The number of prohibition cases totaled 56,786, an increase of 1,057 from the 1928 record high of 55,729. In 1921, the first year of operation of the dry law, the number of cases instituted was 29,114.

Convictions obtained in the fiscal year 1929 declined to 47,100, or 1,720 less than the 48,820 of the preceding year.

Total fines assessed in United States courts increased $172,737, or from $7,303,563 in 1928, to $7,476,300 in 1929.

Prohibition cases represented 51.3 per cent of the 110,655 cases, of all kinds, civil and criminal, which the government brought during the year.

District Here Leads in Number.

The four judicial districts of New York, particularly the Southern District, which includes New York City, and which led all others in the country in the number of prohibition cases instituted, accounted for 15,790 cases in 1928 and 13,820 in 1929.

Convictions and pleas in the New York districts, known as the Northern, Eastern, Southern and Western, numbered 11,900 in 1928 and 11,012 in 1929, a decline of 888 for the latter year. Fines assessed in these districts totalled $956,636.25 in 1928, and $939,934.47 in 1929, a decrease of $26,701.78.

For the Southern district of New York, there was a decrease both in cases instituted and convictions and pleas in 1929 as compared with 1928, but the fines assessed jumped to $278,783 from $211,437 in 1928. The cases instituted in this district numbered 7,816 in 1929, against 8,823 in 1928 and the convictions and pleas, 6,686 against 7,453.

The District of Columbia, was well up among the leaders, showing 1,661 cases instituted in 1929, and 822 convictions and pleas. The record was exceeded by only four other judicial districts, the Northern, Eastern and Southern of New York, and the Eastern of Kentucky. Even the Maryland and New Jersey judicial districts and all of the judicial districts in Pennsylvania and Illinois fell behind the District of Columbia in this regard.

Detroit Leads in Fines Assessed.

The eastern district of Michigan, which includes the Detroit area, the scene of much smuggling, led all other districts in the total of fines assessed with $789,450 in 1929 and $613,152 in 1928. The number of cases brought and convictions obtained in this district, however, were comparatively few as compared with the southern district of New York.

Various deductions from the statistics were being made tonight by friends and foes of the prohibition

DRIFT OF VOTERS TO THOMAS DOES NOT DISTURB TAMMANY; SEES IT AS REPUBLICAN LOSS

Wigwam Admits Some Losses to La Guardia as Campaign Enters Last Two Weeks.

SURE OF BERRY AND McKEE

Leaders Think They May Run Ahead of Mayor—Harmony Aiding Cox in Queens.

By J. A. HAGERTY.

A marked drift to Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for Mayor, has been the principal development in the city campaign during the last week. This movement toward the Socialist nominee, mostly in protest against the Mayoralty candidates of the two major parties, of which there have been surface indications for some time, has been confirmed by canvasses made by Tammany and the Democratic organizations in the other counties. Most of the non-Socialists who are veering toward Mr. Thomas are Republicans or independents, but there is a considerable sprinkling of Democrats among them, according to the Tammany reports.

The drift to Mr. Thomas is causing Tammany little uneasiness and is rather welcome than otherwise to the Tiger because it is not accompanied by any discernible drift to Representative F. H. La Guardia, Republican-fusion candidate for Mayor, except among Italians and because the Socialist party strength is so low that there is no chance of the election of Mr. Thomas.

Four years ago Mayor Walker, Democratic candidate for re-election, received 748,687 votes, Frank D. Waterman, the Republican-fusion candidate, 346,564, and Mr. Thomas, who was the Socialist nominee that year also, 39,574. The indications are that Mr. Thomas may receive 100,000 votes this year and perhaps more than that number. This outlook does not worry Tammany, because of the belief of its leaders that the additional Thomas vote will be obtained mostly from Republicans, independents and independent Democrats who usually support the fusion ticket.

See Advantage to Walker.

According to members of the Tammany board of strategy, who are keeping a close watch on the situation and receive almost daily reports of the way the voters are pointing from every section of the city, the increase in the Socialist vote for Thomas may cut down the percentage of the vote to be received by Mayor Walker, but this really may work to the Mayor's advantage by giving him a larger plurality over Major La Guardia than the 402,000 he received over Mr. Waterman four years ago. The shift, according to the Tammany method of computation, is to the third man in the Mayoralty race and the effect of it will be to hurt the second man in the race and not the leader, Mayor Walker.

One striking feature of the tendency of many voters to support Mr. Thomas as a protest is that this year it has become "respectable" to support the Socialist nominee. The movement for Mr. Thomas is strongest in the better residential sections, where real Socialists are almost entirely lacking. This is particularly marked in the Fifteenth Manhattan Assembly District, where many of the Republicans in the "silk-stocking district" are reported to be for Mr. Thomas as a protest against the nomination of Major La Guardia.

According to reports received by the Tammany board of strategy, which always functions in a city campaign, Major La Guardia so far "has not made a dent" in the Democratic organization support for Mayor Walker in this or any other borough, with the one exception already stated. The Tammany campaign managers have seen no reason for changing their plan of campaign under which Mayor Walker and his associates on the Democratic city ticket will go along easily and, as Mayor Walker has phrased it, will refrain from making a "mud-slinging" campaign.

Leaders Size Up Situation.

The situation was discussed thoroughly last week at a conference between the three Democratic city candidates and John F. Curry, leader of

REED SLATED TO GO TO 5-POWER PARLEY

CHOICE OF REED SURPRISE

He and Robinson, Expected to Represent Democrats, Firm for National Defense.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—President Hoover is believed to have determined definitely upon David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, a Republican, and Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader in the Senate, as the two Senate representatives upon the American delegation to the London naval limitations conference. With the selection of the two Senators, who will serve with Henry L. Stimson, the Secretary of State, the latter as chairman, the President had almost completed his delegation upon his departure for the mid-West tonight.

The choice of Senator Reed was looked upon as somewhat of a surprise, but it is believed to have been determined upon by the Chief Executive after conferences with Senate Republican leaders, including Chairman Borah of the Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Watson of Indiana, the party leader.

Senator Robinson has been generally regarded as the logical representative of the minority party. In addition to being the Democratic leader in the Senate he is a member of the Foreign Relations and Naval Committees and was the Democratic Vice Presidential nominee in the last campaign. Should he be unable to go, Senator Swanson of Virginia is regarded as an alternate.

In Senators Robinson and Reed Mr. Hoover would have two stanch national defense advocates in his delegation as well as two of the most convincing debaters in the Senate if a treaty of naval limitations is brought before that body for ratification. Both Senators voted for and advocated the fifteen-cruiser bill which was passed during the last session. Senator Reed, a veteran of the World War, also is chairman of the Military Affairs Committee and a

Lindbergh 'Rescued' From Crowd on Landing; Complies With Demand to Make a Speech

Special to The New York Times.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Oct. 20.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh held an informal reception here this afternoon that was as enthusiastic as it was spontaneous. Because of the danger to persons unfamiliar with aircraft from whirling propellers, the flier has kept pretty well away from Roosevelt Field on Sundays, but today he landed while 3,000 persons were watching the flights and while some of them were awaiting their turn to fly.

The announcer on the loud-speaker saw the Fokker amphibian the Colonel has been flying for the last two days coming in for a landing. Lindbergh had been testing its aquatic qualities at Port Washington, had been to the Fokker plant at Teterboro and was returning. The announcer shouted, "Here comes Lindy," and as if answering a starting gun many of the crowd pushed past the guards at the gates and rushed out on the field around the plane.

There was little danger on this occasion, however, because the engine and propeller are mounted atop the wing and the cabin well away from pedestrians, but if it had not been for the promptness of Harry Wilder, an airplane mechanic, the Colonel would have found himself in the midst of a milling, cheering mob. Wilder pushed out through the crowd in the Colonel's car escorted by Roosevelt Field motorcycle police. Quickly Colonel Lindbergh took the wheel and started from the field. However, close to the gate the crowd milled around the machine and the Colonel had to stop.

He was smiling and nodding in spite of being held up. He shook hands with those close to the machine, and when some one cried "Speech!" he amiably complied.

"I am glad to see you," he said. "I am very glad to see so many of you here."

On formal occasions Colonel Lindbergh has repeatedly urged his listeners to go to the airports and learn something first hand about flying.

By The Associated Press.

ON BOARD PRESIDENT HOOVER'S TRAIN EN ROUTE TO DETROIT, Oct. 20.—A score or more youngsters who came down with their parents to meet this train at Cumberland, Md., tonight were hoisted up to the rear platform at President Hoover's invitation to shake hands with him.

The President appeared on the rear platform while his train made a stop to change engines, and he quickly spied a small boy in a gray cap and a brown-and-white checkered sweater.

"Son, do you want to shake hands?" the President asked, looking down over the platform rail.

A wholly willing father lifted the boy to his shoulder and Mr. Hoover gave him a warm handclasp.

Immediately eager parents pushed to the front with their children and the President shook hands with perhaps two dozen. To each Mr. Hoover smiled broadly and said:

"How are you?"

Remarking on the size of the crowd that came to the station, the President was told by some one in the crowd that it could not compare with the assemblage that was present when he made a speech in Cumberland last Fall during the campaign.

"We are not in the difficulties we were the last time I was here," the President returned, and, with a chuckle, added, "We had to have more support then."

Tammany; John H. McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic leader; Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn of the Bronx, and the Queens and Richmond Democratic leaders, at the Commodore Hotel. The candidates were informed that the outlook for their re-election by a larger plurality than four years ago was indicated. Some of the Democratic leaders believe that the plurality will be much larger, possibly well above 500,000. This view is understood to be shared by Benjamin F. Schreiber, the titular manager of the Democratic city campaign.

In one thing only have the Tammany district leaders admitted partial failure and that is in the efforts to hold the Democratic Italian voters in line for Mayor Walker. This effort is said to have been fairly successful among the younger voters of Italian descent, but has gained less success among the older Italians, who are supporting Mr. La Guardia strongly. The effort of the Democratic district leaders is now to hold these La Guardia Italians in line for the rest of the Democratic ticket. Mr. La Guardia has countered this by appealing to all his supporters to vote for the rest of the Republican-fusion nominees.

Mr. La Guardia also seems to have made considerable progress among the negro voters, although this is disputed by Tammany. The registration in the negro districts shows an increase, but not as much as was expected by the Republicans.

Tammany expects Controller Charles W. Berry and Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee to run even and perhaps ahead of Mayor Walker and is equally confident of their re-election. It is probable that neither will get as many Republican votes as Mayor Walker seems likely to get, but, on the other hand, each probably will get a considerable number of Italian votes which Mayor Walker seems likely to lose.

Mr. McKee's friends are doing a lot of work for him in the hope that he may lead the Democratic city ticket and thereby be put in a good position for the nomination for Mayor in 1933. McKee headquarters have been opened in the Commodore and the indications are that he will lead the ticket in the Bronx, where he lives, and in Queens, and will run well in the other boroughs.

Confident on Borough Heads.

Tammany also is confident of the re-election of the four Democratic Borough Presidents, which, if these predictions come true, will give the city a solid Democratic Board of Estimate again, except possibly for the Borough President of Queens.

Borough President Julius Miller of Manhattan is receiving a good deal of independent support because of his record of accomplishment in office and seems to be stronger than his party. He seems certain, at least from the Tammany viewpoint, of victory over Clarence H. Fay, his Republican-fusion opponent.

The Democratic strength in Brooklyn and the Bronx seems sufficiently preponderant to insure the re-election of Borough President James J. Byrne of Brooklyn and Borough President Henry Bruckner of the Bronx. In Richmond, also, the excess of Democrats over Republicans seems sufficient to bring about the re-election of Borough President John A. Lynch, although a real fusion has been effected in Richmond with a former State Senator, Mark W. Allen, a Democrat, heading the Republican-fusion ticket as the candidate for Borough President.

In Queens, where there is the hottest kind of a fight between Borough President George U. Harvey, Republican, and County Clerk Edward W. Cox, Democratic candidate for Borough President, the bringing about of at least an appearance of harmony between the warring Democratic factions has increased Mr. Cox's chance of election.

A week ago Mr. Harvey, who won a sweeping victory in the primary election over the Republican organization headed by Joseph H. De Bragga, seemed certain of re-election. With Democratic harmony apparently restored victory for him seemed less sure, although he still is believed to have the better chance by most unprejudiced observers.

Little Progress by Coudert.

The remaining contest of city-wide interest is that for District Attorney of New York County. Frederic R. Coudert Jr., Republican-fusion nominee, seems to have made little progress during the week in his campaign against Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, his Tammany opponent. Mr. Coudert has become involved in a controversy with District Attorney Joab H. Banton and Tammany has been making special efforts, with some success, to build up support for Judge Crain, the only candidate they believe to be in even the slightest danger of defeat.

Mr. Coudert has been endorsed by the Square Deal party, which is running former Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright for Mayor, and part of the failure of his candidacy to develop the strength expected is believed to have been due to the seeming collapse of the Enright movement. Mr. Enright has made many charges against Tammany but so far does not seem to have developed much of an organization or any considerable popular support.

BACKS FUSION TICKET.

Former Metz Group Endorses Its Candidates in All Boroughs.

John J. Curry, chairman of the Business Men's Non-Partisan Political League, which originally favored Herman A. Metz for Mayor, announced yesterday that the league had decided to support the Republican-fusion candidates in all five boroughs of the city. The league previously had endorsed several Republican-fusion candidates, including F. H. La Guardia for Mayor, Harold G. Aron for Controller, Bird S. Coler for President of the Board of Aldermen, Clarence H. Fay for Borough President of Manhattan, George U. Harvey for Borough President of Queens and Frederic R. Coudert Jr. for District Attorney of New York County.

"The support of this ticket was considered by the league to best express the purposes for which the league was founded," Mr. Curry said, "and for the immediate end of eradicating from the City of New York the present administration, which the league considers to be the most corrupt and most ill-managed in the history of the city."

THOMAS ASSAILS WALKER ON TAXES

FAVORS SPECIAL LEVIES

Congestion Will Never Be Ended If Landlords Get Full Benefit of Improvements, He Declares.

Before leaving for Boston and Northampton, Mass., where he addressed forum meetings on the labor situation in the South, Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for Mayor, yesterday charged Mayor Walker with distorting campaign issues with regard to the taxation of property adjacent to new subways.

"To the Mayor's campaign of evasion," said Mr. Thomas, "he now adds distortion. His prating about a dignified campaign follows the well-known rule in old-line politics: 'When the other fellow has got the goods on you, run a gentlemen's campaign.'"

Mr. Thomas resented utterances made by Mayor Walker last Friday in Queens to the effect that the Socialist plan of tax assessment was "local assessment." The term, said Mr. Thomas, misrepresents the issue, for the Socialists proposed not a general levy but a special assessment on property benefited by new subway lines.

Says Walker Disregards Warnings.

"The Mayor," he said, "bids the voters in Queens forget the fraud and corruption he might have prevented, but did not. He contemptuously disregards the warnings given by John Delaney, the head of the Transportation Board, the one man in his administration who knows anything about transit, that it would be impossible to keep the five-cent fare without assessing at least a third of the cost of new subways on the property benefited. What does Walker care? He can probably drift through the next four years. And after him the deluge! The fact that landlords in other boroughs have been given outrageous profits at public expense in the building of subways is no reason for continuing such privileges in Queens. Sometime we must change the system. Why not now?"

Mr. Thomas criticized the city budget, declaring that it has gone up out of all proportions to benefits received by the ordinary citizens. He did not think that "Walker-Whalen & Co." were worth an increase in four years of $20 for each man, woman and child in New York.

Declaring that certain private landlords capitalize congestion, Mr. Thomas gave his views on civic taxation as follows: "I do not believe in society's taking the rental value of land which it creates as a single tax. That is, I do not believe it ought to be the only tax. I believe there ought to be taxes on incomes and inheritances, but the main dependence for financing the city could and should be the assertion of the city's right to the land values which it creates.

Says System Benefits Landlords.

"So long as we go on letting private landlords take the increase of land values at the rate of half a billion a year all dreams of city planners are futile. The millions we spend on tunnels and bridges benefit the landlords, raise prices for us and force us to continue our chaotic congestion. These profits of landlords lie at the root of our machine system of government. The landlords will stand for almost any kind of machine which protects their privileges by faulty assessment and unscientific taxation. This is true not only of the big landlords but of the small landowners."

Charles Solomon, Socialist candidate for Controller, stressed the housing problem when he spoke yesterday over Station WEVD and at meetings in Manhattan and Kings. He charged Mayor Walker with neglecting to take up this matter in any other way than "talk." The present housing law, he said, is a failure, adding: "The problem of housing is inseparable from the problem of crime, and no real progress in eliminating crime can be expected unless we first strike at the slum and its concomitants such as lack of parks, playgrounds and recreational facilities."

WALKER HAILS SPIRIT OF HUNGARIANS HERE

Lehman Also Lauds Them for Democratic Ideals at Young Men's Circle Fete.

Mayor Walker, Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee were guests of honor and principal speakers yesterday afternoon at the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the founding of the New York Hungarian Young Men's Circle and Singing Society, held at the Turn Hall, Lexington Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street. More than 600 persons attended.

An American and a Hungarian flag were presented to the society. The American flag, donated by Julius Keszler, was sponsored by Mrs. Rudolf Schneiberg, while Mrs. Alexander Orgovan sponsored the donation of the Hungarian flag. Hungarian music was played by the Royal Hungarian Gypsy Band and the United Hungarian Singing Societies sang.

Mayor Walker, in a short speech, spoke of the contributions of Hungarian peoples to the development of American ideals.

"In this city we can be good Americans by cherishing the principles of this country and at the same time retaining the traditions of the old countries from which we have come," he declared. "As democratic Americans, there can be no distinction of race, creed or color."

Lieut. Gov. Lehman hailed persons of Hungarian extraction who have been active in the progress of the American nation and reviewed the history of the Hungarian people. "The ideals of Hungary are the ideals of America," he said.

The other guests included former Justice Thomas C. T. Crain, Judge John V. McAvoy, former Judge John J. Freschi, the Rev. Laszlo Harsanyi and Julius Keszler. Morris Cukor, former member of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, was toastmaster.

NO SMITH SPEECH LISTED

But Former Governor May Address Women's Club Saturday and Speaks Thrice Next Week.

Mayor Walker, Controller Berry and Aldermanic President McKee, candidates for re-election on the Democratic city ticket, will continue their joint speaking campaign this week. They will speak together each evening and also will attend several luncheons and functions.

This week's schedule, as made public by Benjamin F. Schreiber, the Democratic city campaign manager, does not call for any appearance of former Governor Alfred E. Smith, although Mr. Smith may be a speaker at the luncheon of the Women's Democratic Club at the Commodore on Saturday.

Mr. Smith will make at least three speeches next week, the final week of the campaign, one each in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx. An effort also will be made to get him to speak in Queens at a meeting to be arranged in either the Glenwood or the Ridgewood section.

Mayor Walker, Controller Berry and Mr. McKee will open their week of campaigning tonight at a meeting in Jamaica High School. This will be their second appearance in Queens and shows the intention of the Democratic campaign managers to make every effort to carry this borough admittedly in the worst shape of any from the Democratic viewpoint.

The schedule of the three Democratic city candidates for the week follows:

Monday, 9 P. M.—Mayor Walker, Controller Berry and President McKee speak at the new Jamaica High School, 168th Street and Gothic Drive, Jamaica, to be broadcast by station WOR from 9:30 to 11 P. M. and by WMRJ from 9 to 11 P. M.

CHARGES WALKER IS FALSE TO LABOR

La Guardia Says He and Berry Connive With Contractors to Underpay Men.

SCORES STRIKE ATTITUDE

Speaking at a labor rally in Cooper Union yesterday, F. H. La Guardia, Republican candidate for Mayor, made the direct charge that Mayor Walker and Controller Berry acted in connivance with other officials to permit payment of less than the prevailing rate of wages on city contracts.

"As I stated in the early part of this campaign;" said Mr. La Guardia, "it would not be possible for subway contractors—and they are all Tammany contractors—to pay their skilled and unskilled workers less than the prevailing wage rates which they receive from the city without the knowledge, in fact the connivance and collusion, of Tammany officials. It would be impossible for these contractors to avoid payment of the prevailing rate required by law if it were not for the connivance and collusion of the Mayor, the Controller and other officials."

The Mayoralty candidate was joined in this attack on the Walker Administration by Harold G. Aron, Republican candidate for Controller, and Bird S. Coler, candidate for Aldermanic President. Mr. Aron said the State law imposed upon Controller Berry the responsibility of enforcing the payment of the prevailing rate of wages to workers on city contract jobs.

Heckler Interrupts La Guardia.

Mr. La Guardia's address was interrupted toward the close by a heckler who brought down on his head the disapprobation of the audience, which practically filled the hall. The heckler wanted to know how Mr. La Guardia as a friend of labor could urge support for Supreme Court Justice Callaghan in Brooklyn after the charges made against the justice on the score of injunctions issued in labor disputes.

Mr. La Guardia requested the man to withhold his question until the end of his address. The man persisted and then the crowd booed and hissed the heckler. He was ushered from the hall, but at the insistence of Mr. La Guardia was brought back to put the question. One of the La Guardia workers shouted that the heckler was known as a Tammany henchman who had interrupted other meetings. The crowd's boos and hisses increased and there was a little scuffle in the aisle. The chairman, Timothy Healy, rapped for order and the rising tumult was halted.

"When you talk about injunctions," said Mr. La Guardia to the heckler, "you want to remember that you are talking to the man who introduced the first anti-junction bill in Congress."

There was a great cheer from the crowd and more boos for the heckler and Mr. La Guardia continued with his talk in which he delivered a general assault on the claim of the Democratic party in the city to friendship for labor.

He charged Tammany with a hypocritical pretension to friendship for labor and he asserted that the failure to enforce payment of the prevailing rate of wages, the use of policemen to guard strikebreakers in the Staten Island bus strike, and other uses of the police in industrial disputes were examples of Democratic hostility to organized labor. He read from a newspaper clipping a statement of a Walker labor committee lauding the administration for "solving the unemployment problem."

"Why ,that's just funny," said Mr. La Guardia. "The only unemployment problem that the Walker Administration has solved is the problem of finding jobs for prominent labor leaders who have been appointed to lucrative offices by Tammany Hall. This is done not as a compliment to labor but as an agency to exploit labor better. Labor has never fared worse under any administration of the city of New York than under the Curry-Walker Administration.

Would Hold Up Contract Money.

"Mayor Walker said the other night that he had looked up the law and could not find any that prevented a Mayor from dressing well. But there are other qualifications for a Mayor. Let him read the law about the prevailing rate of wages. Tammany must explain the failure to see that those rates were paid to workers. No, they must make the contractors pay back all that they have stolen from the workers in the past three years. This is the way it can be done. The contract requires that the prevailing rate of wages be paid and the contractors put up a bond to insure performance of the contract. Let the Controller figure out how much these workers have been robbed of, withhold payment to the contractors and pay the men with that money."

"Only a few weeks ago," continued Mr. La Guardia, "bus drivers in Staten Island were asking for a sixty-hour week. Just think of that! In this day and age—a sixty-hour week! And yet, they were clubbed and beaten from the streets and imported strikebreakers from New Jersey given their jobs. The present attitude of the administration toward labor may not be so surprising however. After all, a Mayor cannot learn about labor conditions and acquaint himself with the burdens of workingmen at the Park Casino, the Ritz or traveling in the private cars of his millionaire night companions."

Mr. La Guardia also demanded effort to end sweatshop conditions in the garment trade, saying that this could be done through enforcement of tenement house laws, maintenance of sanitary conditions through the Board of Health and the police, enforcement of fire ordinances, equal application of the law to union and employer and strict enforcement of laws regarding issuing of working papers to children to check growth of child labor in the city. Mr. La Guardia also urged consideration of old-age pensions.

Coler Assails Tammany Appointee.

Mr. Coler, in assailing the Walker Administration, said that while he was Commissioner of Public Welfare, Edmund Rose, stepson of Eugene McGuire, Democratic power in the Bronx, was sent to him as a deputy commissioner.

"After he had been there about two weeks I asked him to look up some cases," said Mr. Coler. "That was on a Friday and on Monday when I came in I asked for him, and they said he had gone away on a vacation. I looked up his record while he was a member of the Police Department and I found the record to show that he had been fined ten days' pay for holding up an automobile with a pistol while drunk. They've appointed him to a higher office in the Bronx. That's an example of the type of men Tammany puts in office."

Timothy Healy, veteran labor leader, presided, and other speakers were former Representative John Morin of Pittsburgh and Thomas Derrick of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks. A resolution endorsing Mr. La Guardia was presented by Richard Sherrin of the same organization and was adopted unanimously.

Mr. La Guardia went to Staten Island after the Cooper Union meeting to present several prizes to members of the Staten Island Motorcycle Club who participated in hill-climbing competitions during the afternoon.

ASKS CRAIN'S STAND ON RECORDS INQUIRY

Coudert Demands to Know if He Would Sift Vanishing of Grand Jury Minutes.

Frederic R. Coudert Jr., Republican candidate for District Attorney of New York County, asked Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, his Tammany opponent, yesterday whether he would, if elected, take up and finish an investigation of the disappearance of grand jury minutes from the District Attorney's office last March. Mr. Coudert asserted that District Attorney Banton started such an investigation but failed to finish it.

Mr. Coudert's question followed his query to Judge Crain as to whether he would remove Terence F. McKeever, Tammany leader of the Ninth Assembly District, from the position of Chief Clerk of the District Attorney's office and remove the assistant district attorneys, who, he said, were named by the various Tammany district leaders.

In explanation of his question regarding the disappearance of the grand jury minutes, Mr. Coudert said that on March 15 last Israel Brinkman, a lawyer, of 2,966 Briggs Avenue, the Bronx, was convicted before Judge Donnellan for receiving from thieves part of $22,000 in securities stolen in 1924 from a Wall Street brokerage house. At the trial, Mr. Coudert said, it was found that the grand jury minutes of the case were in the possession of Brinkman's counsel, Savis S. Slade, who said he had received them from the office of Leonard A. Snitkin, who had been Brinkman's counsel and died before the trial. Mr. Snitkin, Mr. Coudert said, was a member of a Tammany district organization, and the late Judge John F. McIntyre in 1925 denied Snitkin's motion for an inspection of the minutes.

Mr. Coudert said that Judge Donnellan impounded the minutes and declared their removal from the District Attorney's office was a serious matter. Mr. Banton, he added, said that he would make a thorough investigation.

"From that day to this Mr. Banton has left the public in ignorance of the facts," Mr. Coudert continued. "No one knows what has become of his investigation. He has remained silent on how the grand jury minutes disappeared from his office. It appears that those grand jury minutes could go from his office only through the connivance of some one in the office.

"Has the District Attorney found the guilty ones? If he has, why hasn't he acted? If not, what has he done? Are the guilty ones still in the prosecutor's office? Or is there a judicial scandal connected with this case? Who is being protected?

"The paralyzing hand of politics has been over the District Attorney's office for the past thirteen years. Under this political control have come repeated delays in trials, acceptance of pleas to lesser offenses, intercession with judges for reduced bail or short sentences and general operation of the office not for justice to all the people but primarily for the benefit of a political machine.

"The public has no assurance that grand jury minutes are safe in the keeping of a Tammany District Attorney. The public now knows that grand jury minutes entrusted to the District Attorney disappeared and that he has not gone to the bottom of that breach of public trust and threat to simple justice.

"I ask Judge Crain does he approve of the present Tammany District Attorney's conduct of this most serious case, and what he, if elected, will do about it?"

COX CAMPAIGN ON IN QUEENS TONIGHT

Walker and Other City-Wide Candidates to Speak at Jamaica Meeting.

George U. Harvey, Republican candidate for re-election as Borough President of Queens, voiced confidences yesterday that he would get a large share of Democratic votes in the coming election. At the same time the Democratic organization, which has nominated Edward W. Cox as Mr. Harvey's opponent, made plans for a busy week. Mr. Cox will open his program tonight at the Jamaica High School. Mayor Walker and others on the Democratic city and borough tickets will speak.

Mr. Harvey, resting over the week-end, having a slight cold, said that while many of the Democratic leaders who participated in the factional strife before the primary had realigned themselves with the organization, the rank and file of the party was not following that leadership.

"A feature of the more than sixty-five Harvey clubs that have been formed since the primary ended," said Mr. Harvey, "is that the membership is about equally divided between Democrats and Republicans. The home owners of the county are no longer interested in partisan politics, but in their pocketbooks. During the coming two weeks I expect to address nearly 100 meetings, nearly half of the attendance at which will be nonpartisan. I prefer to address nonpartisan meetings; in fact, I would like to address Democratic meetings, as I believe I can convince a great many people opposed to me for political reasons that I am the proper man for the job."

Among those who will speak, besides Mr. Cox and the city-wide nominees, will be District Attorney Richard C. Newcombe, candidate for Surrogate; Peter J. McGarry, candidate for re-election as Register; Samuel J. Burden, candidate for Sheriff, and James T. Hallinan, candidate for District Attorney.

ASKS PROGRESSIVES TO AID LA GUARDIA

Non-Partisan Committee Likens Him to "Splendid" Insurgents in the Senate.

APPEALS TO THOMAS GROUP

Says It Is Wrong to Support Man Who Has No Chance—Criticizes Smith and Walker.

An appeal to "progressives" to support Representative F. H. La Guardia, Republican-fusion candidate for Mayor, on the ground that he is "of the same breed as La Follette, Norris, Shipstead, Wheeler and Dill, and that splendid insurgent band that have reclaimed the Senate of the United States from the forces of reaction," was made yesterday by the Progressive La Guardia Non-Partisan Committee.

The appeal, which took the form of a letter to John Haynes Holmes, chairman of the non-partisan committee supporting Norman Thomas, Socialist nominee for Mayor, was signed by J. A. H. Hopkins, chairman, William English Walling, Arthur Garfield Hays, Robert H. Haskell, Dr. Philip Klee, Gilbert E. Roe and David H. Robbins, who with Mr. La Guardia supported the late Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin for President in 1924.

Asserting that former Governor Smith and Mayor Walker are seeking the votes of reactionary Republicans, the committee declared that progressives like Mr. Holmes were wrong in supporting Mr. Thomas, who, they said, had no chance of election because Mr. La Guardia was the regular Republican candidate.

Says Nation Watches Election.

"The whole country is looking on at this election," the letter read, "and will measure the progress of progressivism in New York not by the protest vote for Norman Thomas, but by the vote of that progressive candidate who, following the up-to-date American method that has been successful wherever it has been given a fair trial, has captured the primaries of one of the great parties, that tried and nationally known and self-made progressive leader, Major Fiorello H. La Guardia.

"Your name heads a list of New York progressives who defend their support of Norman Thomas for Mayor and reject La Guardia largely because, though supported by many other political groups, he is the regular candidate of the Republican party.

"You forget that La Guardia, now as always, is drawing his support largely from political independents of every variety, some of whom are on the ticket with him now. You forget that Mayor Walker has openly stated that he relies on the support of Republican reactionaries for re-election.

"Mayor Walker recognizes that party lines are broken in this election when he says there is no Republican candidate. He recognizes that La Guardia is the progressive candidate when he calls him a transient Socialist and when he bids for the votes of those he calls the old line dyed-in-the-wool Republicans.

"And what is Al Smith doing but bidding for the votes of Republican reactionaries when he reads to his audience a letter of the treasurer of the Republican party to Republican campaign contributors admitting that 'not all of the candidates on the Republican ticket' are his 'first choice'—nor, he implies, the first choice of wealthy Republican campaign contributors, to whom he wrote that letter.

Place in Congress Called Unique.

"La Guardia is not merely of the same breed as La Follette and Norris and Shipstead and Wheeler and Dill and that splendid insurgent band that have reclaimed the Senate of the United States from the forces of reaction. He has actively cooperated with them and he has received recognition as one of the leading and most valued members of the group. He has been pre-eminent because of the paucity of nationally known progressives in the House and because of his recognized independence and leadership in that body. And finally, his position has been unique in Congress, since the progressives of the East tend to lag behind those of the rest of the nation, not only in numbers, but in the militancy of their program and as to the freedom from party ties. Almost alone in the East, La Guardia has shown that absolute independence of the party whip that distinguished La Follette, Wheeler, Norris, Shipstead, Brookhart and the progressives of the West.

"La Guardia has now undertaken the historic job of introducing this American progressivism into New York. For La Guardia is not merely a reliable and militant and uncompromising progressive. He is a practical political leader."

EXTENSION OF LIGHTING UNDER WALKER HAILED

Campaign Committee Commends Him for "Marked Progress" in City Power Program.

The administration of Mayor Walker was lauded yesterday by the Citizens Committee for the Re-election of Walker-Berry-McKee for "marked progress in extension of service, efficiency and in revenues in the departments responsible for supplying the public with water, lighting, heat and power."

"Not only," said the statement, "has far-sighted provision been made for the future supply of pure water, but the existing service has been increased, extended and made to keep pace with the growth of the various boroughs."

The statement cited the following as outstanding achievements: Increase in the watershed area by 314 miles, increase in capacity of storage reservoirs by 20,000,000,000 gallons, increase of 420 miles of water mains in use, increase of 7,400 hydrants, increase of $3,789,782 in revenue, addition of 6,000,000 candlepower to the public lighting, addition of 635 miles of lighted streets and installation of 520 traffic lights.

"When Mayor Walker took office," said the statement, "there sputtered and flickered in various parts of the city 4,000 ancient gas lamps, relics of the days before the city grew to be a giant. He relegated these museum curiosities to the scrap-heap and in their places blaze 20,100 new electric lamps. That is but a sample of the forward movement of the public service in this department under the Walker regime."

ECONOMISTS OPPOSE NEW TARIFF BILL

HIGHER LIVING COSTS SEEN

Measure Would Not Achieve Purpose and International Amity Would Suffer, Many Say.

A preponderant opinion against the provisions of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill was registered by economists who replied to a questionnaire sent out by the New York University Bureau of Business Research, it was announced yesterday. Of 1,000 men questioned, 196 replied, and 90 per cent of these opposed the bill.

All those addressed were members of the American Economic Association, and the great majority are professors, the announcement said, adding:

"The sole purpose of the inquiry was to get an accurate summary of the general position of the nation's economists concerning an important question of the hour. No effort was made to secure extended discussions or arguments, the aim being merely to take a vote."

The replies came from all portions of the country, but the bureau did not include professors connected with agricultural colleges, "who might conceivably be biased in the interest of farmers."

Although a "vote" was the only incentive in sending out the questionnaires, Dr. Lewis H. Haney, director of the bureau, said enough opinions had been expressed to warrant a summary of views. These, he said, indicated a belief that the proposed bill would increase the cost of living, injuring the "white collar" classes more than organized labor, and "would emphatically not restore the economic equality between agriculture and manufacturing."

The "United States valuation" clause, it was found, "might remove the incentive to efficiency that results from foreign competition," and the summary added:

"The proposed tariff would tend to heighten the antagonism and jealousy of many foreign countries toward us. It runs contrary to our professions of desire for international amity. It would have a bad effect politically and economically. It would encourage retaliation and the establishment of American industries in Europe as well as European industries in America. It would increase the difficulty of international debt payments and in general tend to limit trade.

"Possibly the proposed tariff might lead to the establishment of a United States in Europe. It would certainly tend in that direction, and would stimulate agitation for it. Probably, however, any such organization would be only in the nature of a customs union, and it might not develop for a good many years.

"If such a union of foreign countries were formed, its immediate effect upon the country would be unfavorable, but would ultimately tend to benefit us by bringing a realization that such tariff legislation is undesirable, and, in general, a saner attitude toward tariff matters. In the long run, too, it might bring some benefit by increasing the buying power of Europeans."

FINDS TARIFF ANXIETY IN LATIN AMERICA

Goodrich Executive After Three Months' Trip Calls Reciprocity Essential to Our Export Trade.

Officials and business men of all Latin-American countries are watching with great interest and anxiety the developments of the present American tariff policies, according to Paul R. Mahony, executive vice president of the International B. F. Goodrich Corporation, who returned from South America yesterday on the liner Calamares.

For the past three months Mr. Mahony has made a survey of economic conditions in Brazil, Chile, Peru, Panama, Cuba, Uruguay and Argentina. He is a former lecturer in New York University's School of Commerce.

"Foreign commerce cannot be a one-way street," Mr. Mahony declared. "Reciprocity is an essential for the American export business. Obviously, the ability to buy depends to a considerable degree on the ability to sell, and it is significant that under the present scheme our foreign trade with the Argentine alone has increased more than 300 per cent in the last ten years."

This he attributed mainly to betterment of international relations.

Regarding Cuba he said that, although there was distinct movement toward diversification of products, the country still depended largely on sugar and at present was alarmed over the prospect of a substantial increase in the tariff, which would place it under a severe handicap in competition with other sugar-producing countries.

ASKS STATE INQUIRY ON WALKER REGIME

Enright Wires to Knight to Demand a Special Legislative Session to Act.

Former Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright, mayoralty candidate of the Square Deal Party, made public yesterday a telegram he sent to John Knight, Republican leader of the State Senate, asking him to demand a special session of the Legislature to provide an investigation of conditions in the Walker Administration.

The telegram followed a letter in which Mr. Enright gave his version of the need for such investigation at once. The telegram said:

"Referring to my letter of Oct. 19, urgent need of checking graft flourishing under this city's Tammany government impels me to further request that you demand a special session of the Legislature so that a special investigating committee may be appointed to expose these evils without delay. As Legislature does not meet until January, many criminal acts could be covered by Tammany leaders before that time. Therefore suggest you request Governor Roosevelt to call the special session for the protection of millions of citizens of New York. I assure you of my every cooperation in helping secure specific evidence of corruption before a legislative investigating committee."

In his letter, Mr. Enright wrote:

"For many months many decent and respectable citizens in greater New York have appealed in vain to the Tammany Governor and Lieutenant Governor of this State to investigate high crimes and misdemeanors in New York City, and their appeals have been spurned, ignored and treated with contempt.

"The Tammany officials in Albany have instituted sweeping investigations in Republican counties in this State upon the slightest pretext, but here in New York City, for political reasons, they studiously sidestep any such investigation.

"It was exceedingly gratifying to me, and to many others, when we read in the newspapers the statement that if the Tammany Governor continued to ignore these requests of responsible citizens for an investigation of lawlessness and gross corruption in New York City that you would recommend a legislative investigation through a committee of State Senators—and this is what we want, and we cannot get it too quick.

"Suffice it to say that myself and many others have made definite charges about graft, vice and corruption in the Street Cleaning Department; in the Police Department; in the Health Department; in the County Clerk's office; in the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity; in the District Attorney's office, and in many other bureaus and departments. These charges have been clear, concrete and definite. All that the Tammany officials have done about it is to ignore the matter or cover it up, or indict a few of the 'little thieves' for misdemeanors, while the big grafters and corruptionists are protected, and they are allowed to go scot free.

"Just think of it! Rothstein was murdered in cold blood and the red herring was quickly drawn across the trail, and his records and papers were hidden or destroyed because it is alleged that he had big financial relations—corrupt financial and business relations—with prominent Tammany politicians and public officials."

LAUDS FIGHT ON CALLAGHAN

Lawyer Praises McCooey for Refusing to Endorse Jurist.

Commendation of John H. McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic leader, for his refusal to permit the Democratic party in the Second Judicial District to endorse Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan, Republican, was expressed yesterday by Edward L. Corbett, a lawyer, of 336 Alexander Avenue, the Bronx.

In a letter to District Attorney Charles J. Dodd of Brooklyn, Democratic candidate against Justice Callaghan, Mr. Corbett said that the endorsement of Justice Callaghan only could have been brought about by agreement between Mr. McCooey and Jacob A. Livingston, Brooklyn Republican leader, and that such an agreement would have violated the State Constitution by depriving the people of their right to select judges at the polls.

"Such agreements would make the judges subservient to two bosses, and thus would be neither partisan nor non-partisan," Mr. Corbett said. "The people may not be legally ousted at the polls. Mr. McCooey is true to the principles of Jefferson and to the trust reposed in him by his party."

PUT LOBBY INQUIRY AHEAD OF SHEARER

Senators Decide to Set Aside Sifting of "Big Navy" Man's Affairs to Next Week.

WISH TO CENTRE ATTENTION

Heads of Connecticut Manufacturers' Body Will Appear Today, With Grundy to Follow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The Senate investigation into the activities of William B. Shearer, "big navy" propagandist, has been set aside until the week of Oct. 28, and the Senate lobby inquiry will have full swing during the coming week, Senator Shortridge, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the Shearer inquiry, permitted it to become known that the hearings will not be resumed this week, without giving any particular reason for postponement.

But it was stated that the naval subcommittee did not desire to interfere with the attention being focused on the lobbyist investigation, and also did not want to interfere with the arrangements of the members who during the week will be busy in connection with the consideration of the tariff bill in the Senate.

It was also stated that another reason why the naval subcommittee did not want to go ahead with its own inquiry during the coming week was its understanding that Daniel F. Cohalan of New York, counsel for Shearer, has legal engagements that would render it difficult for him to come to Washington before the week of Oct. 28.

The first scheduled witness to be heard when the lobby investigation resumes tomorrow morning is E. Kent Hubbard, president of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, who will be questioned as to why he wrote letters which were sent to various directors of the association with regard to sending an expert to Washington into the office of Senator Bingham while the tariff hearings were in progress. Robert C. Buell, secretary-treasurer of the same association, has also been summoned to be heard after Mr. Hubbard leaves the witness stand.

Following these two witnesses the committee will call as a witness Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Philadelphia Manufacturers' Association, who has been very active in connection with the consideration of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, and who, it is understood, will be interrogated at some length in connection with all phases of his activities, or those of his association, with respect to the tariff.

PRESS CRITICIZES BINGHAM'S PRACTICES

Comment Ranges Up to Sharp Condemnation of Senator for Hiring Tariff Aide.

Comments of the press on the discourses concerning the employment by Senator Bingham as a tariff adviser of an employe of manufacturers range from ironical to strongly condemnatory. The following are examples:

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.

"A Foolish, Indefensible Thing."

From The Daily Oklahoman.

If Senator Sheppard or Mr. Volstead had employed representatives of the American Brewers' Association to help write out prohibition laws, they would have done a foolish thing, indeed. But not more foolish than what Senator Bingham did when he employed an understudy of the Connecticut manufacturers to help write the tariff bill. Such employment cannot be reconciled with a patriotic desire to keep public service above suspicion. The Connecticut Senator has done a foolish and an indefensible thing.

BALTIMORE.

Points to Critics of Bingham.

From The Sun.

Perhaps the feature of the recent Senatorial explosion most painful to Senator Hiram Bingham will be the publication of letters from Connecticut manufacturers to the president of their association which reveal their not very high estimate of his abilities, at least as a tariff maker. The Hartford Courant, which is strong in the protective faith, is also critical, expressing the opinion that a good case has been impeached by the manner in which Senator Bingham handled it.

Apparently confidence in Bingham, unassisted, was very low. John H. Goss, Waterbury brass manufacturer, suggested that the association "engage the advisory services of former Senator McLean in this matter."

CHARLESTON, S. C.

One Point for Encouragement.

From The News and Courier.

That Senator Bingham * * * "borrowed" a $10,000-a-year officer of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association to help him in framing the tariff bill, and placed him on the payroll of the Senate as a clerk, is not important. As news, it is greatly exaggerated. It is encouraging, though not perfectly reassuring, that no evidence whatever has been adduced that any association of manufacturers has "borrowed" a Senator and placed him on its payroll. As long as a protective tariff bill is in the throes of parturition, it is safest to wait and take nothing for granted.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

Other Tariff Influences at Work.

From The Arkansas Gazette.

When he appeared at the Senate investigation into lobbying, the Connecticut Senator said that what he had done was "possibly a mistake." The universal judgment would make that admission absolute. Senator Bingham simply put the salaried officer of a manufacturers' organization into the inner councils of Republican tariff-makers and, presumably, he would have listened to this individual's advice in determining his course.

But this extraordinary proceeding was not, after all, so important for its effect upon legislation as the activities of those industrial and financial interests which have always intruded themselves, adroitly and insidiously, into the writing of tariff measures. These interests have not been so naive as Senator Bingham was, and therefore the physical facts of their participation in tariff-bill writing have not stood forth for the country's edification and the Senate's action.

CHICAGO.

Attacks the Investigators.

From The Tribune.

Senator Bingham of Connecticut has appeared as a witness before the Senate Committee investigating the activities of lobbyists in Washington. When the tariff bill was in committee Mr. Bingham called Charles L. Eyanson, an official of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, to Washington to advise him on the tariff requirements of his State. When Eyanson had returned to Connecticut Mr. Bingham sent him a check for $1,000 for services rendered, which Mr. Eyanson did not cash.

The investigating committee seems to have done all in its power to confuse the issue and besmear Mr. Bingham's reputation. The questions asked were plainly inspired by a desire to expose Mr. Bingham's motives as dishonorable from the first to last. The effect of the questioning upon those who are familiar with Mr. Bingham's career will be to discredit the investigators rather than him.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

An "Odious" Piece of Business.

From The Times.

In "borrowing" Charles L. Eyanson, assistant to the president of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, to assist him in writing tariff schedules, Senator Hiram Bingham committed a serious mistake. In "falsifying" government records so he could take Eyanson, the paid agent of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, into secret sessions of the Senate Finance Committee, and in taking Eyanson into such meetings, Senator Bingham was guilty of an extremely odious and reprehensible piece of business. To say the least, Bingham's course marked him as a man who has a very inadequate understanding of his obligation as a United States Senator.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Holds Senator's Friendships Costly.

From The Commercial Appeal.

Senator Bingham's indiscretion grew out of the spirit of youthfulness in politics, complicated by a New England conscience. The Senator's heart has always been in the Caribbean. The tariff bill distressed him where to turn for expert guidance. His acquaintance among the farm and labor organizations in Connecticut is extremely limited. It is quite natural that he turned to his friends in the Manufacturers' Association. This friendship has cost the Senator much in dollars and cents and far more in public esteem. When the Senator grows older in politics he will select friends who do not write so many letters.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

"Brazen Wrecker of Pledges."

From The Tribune.

In a session * * * called by a Republican President for the specific purpose of fulfilling the Republican party pledges to add millions of dollars to agricultural America's income, Senator Bingham diligently, systematically and, one is justified in saying, unscrupulously, devoted his time to further impoverishing the farmer and to widening the present disparity between the industrial East and the agrarian West.

But, none the less, he feels himself a good Republican.

He is a frank, admitted, unashamed, and brazen wrecker of the Republican party pledges.

But, none the less, he feels himself a good Republican.

He has spent his entire Summer working on a program which, if realized, would leave the Republican party with the reputation of being an organization that had no sense of loyalty to its platform promises, and, therefore, no honor.

But, none the less, he feels himself a good Republican.

He has spent his entire Summer working on a program, which, if realized would eventually bring about a sectional schism in the ranks of Republicanism, and so insure the election of a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress at the next election.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Assails Senator Bingham's Course.

From The Oregonian.

Bingham subordinated the interest of the United States, which he was sworn to serve, to the private interest of Connecticut manufacturers. He sacrificed the public interest to private greed. Any pretense that he used Eyanson's assistance in applying the Republican policy of protection to Connecticut products cannot be maintained. That policy is designed in the interest of the whole nation, to impose such duties as, in the judgment of Congress, will enable industries to withstand foreign competition. It is not designed to give any group of manufacturers whatever they may deem necessary to protect them.

Bingham prostituted the protective policy and his own office to the latter purpose

SWANSON PREDICTS DEMOCRATIC SWING

Senator Declares United Party Will Be Victorious in the Virginia Election.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—There will be the usual off-year swing away from the political party which won the Presidential election because of the Republican party's inability to keep promises made in the campaign last year, Senator Claude A. Swanson of Virginia predicted today. This would be shown, he prophesied, in a victory for the Democratic State ticket in Virginia next month and would be reflected in 1930 when the Democrats would gain four or more seats in and might win control of the Senate.

In his opinion there would be heavy Republican losses in the House next year, and these might be sweeping if the tariff bill failed of passage or became a law in anything like its present shape.

"That this swing away from the Republican party is under way has already been shown in special Congressional elections," he said.

"It will be strongly shown in Virginia next month, when the entire Democratic State ticket will be elected by an overwhelming majority. The Democratic party is well organized and without any real dissension. Republican voters are not enthusiastic over the coalition ticket and many of them will vote with the Democrats. The Republicans of Virginia believe in two major parties and not in a third coalition party without established policies.

"The Southern States are more solidly Democratic. The disaffection shown last year has disappeared. The Republican party has done nothing to aid the South since the election of President Hoover.

"The plea was made in the South that if the Republicans got into power the South would receive key positions in offices of responsibility and trust. The Democrats insisted that the Republicans would not do so. Four Southern States voted for Hoover and the South has had less recognition than ever before. The disappointment among Republicans in the South is widespread. They fully realize that nothing can be expected in the South from the Republican party.

"Nationally, the Democratic party is in splendid shape. I look for the Democrats to gain four or more seats in the 1930 Senatorial election and possibly carry the Senate. The Republican party is in a deplorable situation. It is found in the Senate holding on to a bill repudiated almost universally by commerce, agriculture and industry. It has no friends, except a very few of the benefited interests.

"The tariff bill espoused by the Republicans is now a hot poker. They hold it in their hands and do not know what to do with it. President Hoover has refused to have this poker transferred into his hands. He is silent and keeps his hands in his pockets. He does not want to get burnt by the hot-poker tariff bill.

"If the Republicans know how to get rid of this bill without political discredit they should be glad to do so."

ASKS TARIFF SPEED AS AID TO BUSINESS

view that the Senate will pass it within another month, that any inequalities that may exist will be ironed out in conference.

The Republican leaders expect that, with the conferees receiving the bill about Thanksgiving Day, the special session will then adjourn. The conference report, they predict, will be ready for presentation to the regular session about the middle of December, and the final bill will be sent to the President early in February.

Before the House adjourns it is apparent that it will vote on the flexible tariff clause and the farm debenture provision, which the Senate yesterday attached to the bill. Present indications are that in the House the vote insisting on the flexible provision will be close, but the lower branch is expected to reject debenture and so instruct its conferees.

Representative John N. Garner, Democratic leader, says, however, that there has been a great change in sentiment on these proposals.

It is his view that the House may accept the Senate amendment giving Congress power to act on reports from the Tariff Commission, and may also accept the debenture amendment. Republican leaders say they are confident that the debenture plan will be rejected, but they admit that the vote on the flexible provision may not be so certain.

Coalition in Majority Control.

The second defeat administered to the administration in the Senate yesterday, when the debenture plan was attached as a rider to the tariff bill, emphasized that the Republicans have lost control of the Senate. Although having a nominal majority, the Republicans have actually become the minority in the consideration of the tariff because of the Democratic-Insurgent Republican coalition.

President Hoover insisted that the flexible provision was essential to a good tariff law. He also declared his opposition, in a message to the Senate, to the debenture plan when it was placed in the farm relief bill.

At no time in tariff making has either party encountered a more formidable revolt in its own ranks. But some Senators believe that the coalition will dissolve and become less effective when the rates are considered. They cannot see how the insurgent Republicans can hope to hold many Democratic votes for some of their demands, or how the Democrats can keep their forces intact when the special interests of Southern States are brought up. The next two weeks will show just how effective the coalition can be in the test that will come on rates.

It is argued that the debenture provision was accepted chiefly for trading purposes in conference and that the Democrats and insurgents will agree to drop it if the House will accept the Senate provision to give Congress, and not the President, the power under the flexible tariff clause.

But the Republican Senate leaders have not entirely given up hope of eliminating both factors in conference and perfecting what they regard as a reasonably good tariff bill. They feel that some of the insurgents will have to give way on industrial rates and that five or six Democrats will support an administration bill to get advantages for their States.

Some Democrats "Amenable."

Senators Ransdell and Broussard of Louisiana, Fletcher and Trammell of Florida, Heflin of Alabama, Kendrick of Wyoming and possibly Walsh of Massachusetts are expected to vote with the Republicans if rates acceptable to their States are retained.

But the situation in the Senate with the coalition operating, still promises all kinds of trouble for the Senate Finance Committee group to defend its bill and maintain the industrial rates.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking Democratic member of the Finance Committee, discussing recent victories of the coalition forces, predicted tonight that the House would show a different disposition toward the flexible tariff and farm debenture provisions when they reach that body.

"During the week just ended very important and outstanding matters were acted upon, both in the interest of the farmer and in line with the purpose for which the Congress was called in extraordinary session," Senator Simmons said.

"First was the amendment by Senator George providing for a consumers' counsel to represent the consumer in proceedings before the Tariff Commission. This amendment permits the consumer for the first time to get a peek-in on the proceedings before the Tariff Commission. Second was the passage of the Norris amendment carrying what is known as the debenture.

Doubts Hoover Will Use Veto.

"The chief purpose and object of this debenture plan is to make effective rates on agricultural products, which otherwise would be ineffective or effective only to a very negligible extent. These two amendments are in the interest of the consumer, especially the farmers, together with the flexible tariff amendment abolishing the present flexible tariff.

"The purpose of this amendment is to divest the Chief Executive of the power under the present law to impose taxes upon the people and restore that power to the representatives of the people in Congress.

"It is said that if these provisions remain in the tariff bill it will be vetoed. A casual consideration of what these three amendments would accomplish if they become law would seem to make it apparent that the President would find it rather hazardous to kill the bill because of their inclusion.

"I have every reason to believe that when the House reassembles it will be in an entirely different atmosphere and with a different disposition toward these amendments."

Germs that contribute to your health

CONTINUE THE TREATMENT!

Accepted by Council of Pharmacy and Chemistry of the American Medical Association

THEIR name is Bacillus Acidophilus. They fight the putrefactive germs which form in the intestines. Unless these harmful bacteria are checked, they generate poisons which are absorbed by the system. Severe symptoms may result.

Science has discovered a way to implant colonies of Bacillus Acidophilus in the digestive tract. By drinking milk-cultures containing Bacillus Acidophilus, you can employ the good germs to defeat intestinal toxemia.

But the condition of years of slow poisoning cannot be overcome in a day or a week. Acidophilus Milk should be taken three times a day for a month, either with meals or between. Afterwards, to maintain this colony of health, you should continue the treatment at least twice a day. Be particular to ask for Lederle's when you order Acidophilus Milk. That name is a guarantee of purity and effectiveness.

DR. WILSON LASHES TAMMANY HALL

SAYS MORAL CRISIS IS HERE

BINGHAMTON, Oct. 20.—The Rev. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, national secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, bitterly attacked drinkers in general and Tammany Hall in particular in an address delivered here tonight at the closing meeting of the annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New York.

Tammany Hall, Dr. Wilson said, "reeks like sin, has never learned anything good or forgotten anything bad." It stands, he declared, for "every vile condition that Boss Tweed and Murphy inaugurated and Charles H. Parkhurst and Theodore Roosevelt unearthed."

"No bootlegger is more of a hypocrite, more dangerous to society," Dr. Wilson told the delegates, than the "man, woman or minor who pays him money to violate the law for a selfish whim that it will be smart to get around the law."

World War veterans did not escape the verbal lash wielded by Dr. Wilson from the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church. Many of them, he said, had returned to America "importing European ideals of the Continental Sunday as against the American Sabbath, with lewd conceptions of social life never before openly advocated on American soil."

Urges Pledge-Signing Campaign.

Dr. Wilson asserted there were fewer violations of the liquor laws in the United States today than there had been in 150 years because "a few bootleggers" could not violate the law as much as "300,000 licensed saloons, each one violating the law every hour."

He advocated the inauguration of a total-abstinence pledge-signing campaign, special days of preaching and prayer and a canvass of voters to tell them of the danger of electing a "wet nullifier" to any public office.

"We must have no back-set on prohibition at this time," Dr. Wilson said. "It is entitled to as fair a chance and as long a time to show the world what it can do as the license system had. It has never had a fair chance until now. It never could have until we elected a President on the direct issue of a strict, impartial and uncompromising observance and enforcement of prohibition, who will determine to call out the resources of this Republic before he sits in the White House swivel chair and sees the Constitution of our country trampled upon by a gang of aliens who affect to despise us, and a set of home-born renegades who repudiate their Puritan birthright for the mess of pottage to be gotten through the im-Puritans who are now organizing to take possession of the land."

"There is a moral crisis on in the Republic. The lines are being drawn straight between the leaders pledged to observe the law and those whose lives and habits show that they can be trusted to carry out their convictions in harmony with the Constitution, and, on the other hand, the party of Tilden and Cleveland and Bryan which has surrendered itself to Tammany Hall that reeks like sin, that has stood and still stands for every vile condition that Boss Tweed and Murphy inaugurated and Charles H. Parkhurst and Theodore Roosevelt unearthed, and which has never learned anything good or forgotten anything bad.

Maps Militant Action.

Asking what could be done now, Dr. Wilson answered his own question as follows:

"1. We will inaugurate a total-abstinence pledge-signing campaign.

"2. We will organize to canvass our communities to see that men and women register.

"3. We will tell them that the election to office of a wet nullifier anywhere is the peril of prohibition.

"4. We will observe special days for prayer and preaching on the subject of prohibition and its defense, observance and enforcement.

"5. We will see that no one sleeps, or forgets, or stays indifferent wherever a twentieth-century prophet is sent to represent militant methods on the firing line of the world's moral battlefield.

"6. We will continue aggressively to support those leaders and organizations which aggressively lead and bear the brunt at the battlefront.

"7. Our fathers and mothers helped to kill slavery and duelling and polygamy and the lottery system and the opium traffic, and while we are finishing the liquor traffic 'we are treading where the saints have trod.'"

Hits Stage, Movies, Books.

"The prize ring has returned, the theatre has gone down hill, the movies that, by their powerful portrayal of the evils of intemperance helped us to get prohibition, have now enlisted on the other side and encourage the violation of law. Books and periodical literature are issued from the press alive with maggots of treason and irreligion. Fortunes are made in a year in illegitimate publications, in indecent shows and in bootlegging.

"It is time to stir up and then strengthen our spineless Christian citizens so that we can trust them to register, to vote, to work, to pray, to beseech God and man not to turn our country's destiny over to the underworld or to the un-Americanized hordes who measure up to none of our national ideals but want to drag down the land of the Pilgrim's pride to the level and looseness of the Tammanyized paganism of that lawless and godless group that in the '60s resisted the draft and in 1926 was in open rebellion against the Constitution and its greatest moral movement toward a sober nation."

Most of the delegates will leave Binghamton tonight or tomorrow morning. There is a post-executive committee meeting scheduled for tomorrow morning. This, however, will be a private gathering, Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, president of the State union, said. The next convention city may be selected by this committee. It is believed Johnstown will be selected.

PLANS ZIONIST ROLL-CALL.

Organization Hopes to Enlist 500,000 Who Will Pay $1 Each.

A National Zionist roll-call, not connected with the Zionist membership, but addressed to all Jews, through which it is hoped to enroll at least 500,000, each person paying $1, for the reconstruction of Palestine, was announced yesterday, following a special meeting of the administrative committee of the Zionist Organization of America at its offices, 111 Fifth Avenue.

The roll-call, which will begin on Nov. 3, the twelfth anniversary of the issuance of the Balfour Declaration, and will continue through Dec. 31, has both a political and a moral purpose, according to Louis Lipsky, president of the Zionist organization.

The political aim was announced as a desire to give "a practical demonstration to the world that the great mass of American Jews is not only passively sympathetic to but actively interested in the rebuilding of Palestine." The moral purpose was given as the desire to commend the "heroism and courage" displayed by Palestine Jewish residents during the recent riots.

PALESTINE UNIFIES RELIEF OF REFUGEES

CONDITIONS WERE CHAOTIC

Zionist Executive Failed to Cope With Task—Refugees, Underfed, Did Not Dare Go Home.

By JOSEPH M. LEVY.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 19.—After the chaotic condition that has existed for more than six weeks in emergency relief work in Palestine, the problem has been officially taken over by the Vaad Leumi, the Jewish National Council, which is headed by Pinhas Rutenberg, who founded the Palestine Hydroelectric Corporation.

Although ample funds began pouring in from all parts of the world almost immediately after the troubles began, nevertheless a condition of chaos existed even six weeks after the time many Jews had been forced to flee their homes. To the Palestine Zionist Executive in Jerusalem was assigned the task of administering the relief work and all funds were sent to it. Unfortunately, however, the state of affairs existing at the refugee shelters clearly showed that this group was entirely incapable of coping with the situation.

Complaints were heard on all sides, mostly because those in charge did not know how to deal with the local population. They seemed to consider all refugees in the class of beggars, and although it is true that some beggars crept in among the thousand refugees, nevertheless they constituted an insignificant minority and did not justify the treatment of others who had previously lived comfortably in independence as though they were of the same class.

Committee Quit in Disgust.

A committee had been organized representing the local residents to assist the relief work, but it was allowed to act in an advisory capacity only, and all its members soon resigned, finding it impossible to agree with this unsympathetic attitude.

With four or five families huddled in one room, sitting, eating and sleeping on stone floors, the refugees were forced to live in miserable conditions since the day they fled their homes. For about four weeks the government supplied them with food and that was the most human treatment they received. When the government ceased to furnish these rations, because it declared it was safe for the refugees to return home, most of the latter, particularly those living in Arab quarters, refused because they were still afraid and maintained the police protection was inadequate.

At this juncture the Zionist Executive, which was in charge of the relief funds, took up the task of feeding the refugees. Whereas the government rations had consisted of meat, vegetables, bread, milk, dry products, &c., the food supplied by the Zionists consisted only of a half-loaf of bread and a half-tin of sardines a person daily. To small children there was allowed one cup of milk in addition. On several occasions even these meager rations were withheld and cards were handed out entitling the refugees to obtain food at soup kitchens almost two miles distant, this being done in an effort to compel them to return to their homes in neighborhoods which they still considered unsafe. They declared they would rather starve than go back.

Headline Tells Conditions.

This headline of a news item which appeared recently in Jerusalem's Hebrew daily best describes conditions: "Scandal of refugees—Jerusalem's relief committee starving refugees—either they must return to dangerous quarters or starve—the attitude toward the refugees is the same as toward beggars."

A later issue of this paper contains a letter to the editor from two refugees which reads:

"Since the beginning of the riots nearly two months ago about 200 of us have been sheltered in the Mizrachi Talmud Torah building, rolling about in cellars, children, women and men all together, all of whom have been broken up as a result of the bloody days. In addition to this we are now starving.

"Yesterday they even stopped giving us the miserable help we previously received, namely, bread and sardines. Yesterday afternoon the screaming of the starved reached the skies. Children who begged for bread were slapped by their mothers to quiet them. Luckily for us came an unexpected visit of four American Jewish tourists whose names are unknown to us and who, when they saw our terrible condition, brought us forty loaves of bread and many boxes of sardines, which were divided among 200 persons, thus keeping us from starving.

"We ask all Jewry, where is justice, where is righteousness and where are our relief committees? Is this the way they rejoin—forcing us to return to the Old City and other dangerous quarters? Who will care for us tomorrow after we return? Where is the public? Will it hear our voice?

Americans Come to Rescue.

Fortunately for these sufferers the emergency relief committee in the United States, headed by David Brown, decided to send Mr. and Mrs. Jonah Goldstein of New York, both experienced communal workers, to assist in solving the relief problem here. They arrived just at the opportune moment. After deliberation and consultations with the Zionist executive and local representatives, it was decided upon the Goldstein's recommendation that the situation could best be handled by the Vaad Leumi, which is officially recognized as the organization of Palestine Jewry.

Since the Vaad Leumi took over the work an efficient organization has been set up, thanks to the marked executive ability of Pinchas Rutenberg and marked improvement has already been noticed in the last few days, to the satisfaction of the refugees. Mr. Rutenberg, who had hitherto devoted his entire time to the hydroelectric project and abstained from communal activities, consented to become the chairman of the Jewish National Council when he realized the seriousness of affairs since the recent disturbances. Palestine Jewry places great confidence in his administrative ability.

Despite the faults of the other bodies, much credit is due to the Hadassah medical organization for its work from the very beginning of the disturbances. It was the first on hand to render medical treatment wherever wounded were found and it handled the problem of feeding the refugees most efficiently during the weeks before they were taken over by the government.

German Lieutenant Stays in Air 14 Hours and 45 Minutes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—Lieutenant Dinort, flying a so-called "slow sailplane," today established a new glider duration record by remaining in the air fourteen hours and forty-five minutes over Rositten Field in East Prussia, excelling the record of the late Ferdinand Schultz by more than thirty-five minutes.

Lieutenant Dinort, who is attached to the Reichswehr Chasseur Battalion in East Prussia, made the greater part of his flight during the night, having taken off shortly after 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon and landing soon after 6 A. M. today. He was forced to land because of a slight mishap to his sailplane.

BRITISH NAVY LEAGUE DECRIES PACIFIST TALK

Trafalgar Day Message Says New Generation Is Being Taught Sacrifices Were Vain.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—On the eve of Trafalgar Day, which is devoted here to the memory of Great Britain's by the British Navy League over the great sailor, Horatio Nelson, a criticism of peace talk has been issued by the British Navy League over the signature of Lord Sydenham of Combe.

"To Nelson the pacifism that is fashionable today would have been inconceivable as a pathetic trust in treaties unsupported by force," says the message. "A generation to which the last great war is not even a memory is being instructed that naval power is mainly superfluous, that our cruel sacrifices were unnecessary and explainable only by a general wave of madness, and that at best we fought for objects open to question.

"War is always hateful, but an empire dependent on the sea and unprepared to defend its vital arteries could count sooner or later on being dishonored and dismembered."

The Navy League is a powerful organization with many public and naval men on its directorate. Its headquarters are in London and it has branches throughout the empire.

"It is the aim of the Navy League," says the message, "in these days when the strength of the national navy has become a subject for political bargaining, to strive to keep alive the spirit which created and held the vast empire out of the heptarchy—the spirit that Nelson embodied."

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Women's toes except the great toe are disappearing, Dr. Norman Lake told the Society of Chiropodists at the annual conference today.

Dr. Lake blamed high-heeled shoes, "which for three centuries past have been throwing the weight of the body on the fore part of the foot, atrophying it and causing many ills."

"One can imagine the foot will eventually become a large mass of bones with a few little appendages as toes," he added.

PARAGUAY ACCEPTS TREATY WITH BRAZIL

POLICE ROUND UP DEPUTIES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ACUNSION, Oct. 20.—After three weeks of bitter debate, including fifteen days of consecutive sessions, the Chamber of Deputies finally ratified, just before daylight yesterday, the treaty between Paraguay and Brazil whereby Brazil recognizes the Paraguayan title to territory on the west bank of the Paraguay River between Bahia Negra and the mouth of the Apa River.

The ratification is a decisive victory for President Guggiari over political enemies, who, for the last month have been using his foreign policy as a target in a bitter political fight.

The treaty with Brazil was signed in May, 1927, and ratified by the Senate. Paraguayan law requires that the Chamber of Deputies also ratify treaties. This one was pigeonholed for two years but brought up in the Chamber, adding strength to the opposition against President Guggiari, already under fire for accepting the recommendations of the commission of neutrals in Washington instead of maintaining a more belligerent attitude toward Bolivia in the boundary dispute over the Chaco region.

Party Politics Involved.

Although the territory involved in the treaty with Brazil is claimed by Bolivia and the treaty would appear to support Paraguayan claims, party politics had greater weight than international considerations during the Chamber debate.

The session at which the treaty finally was ratified began at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. When it became evident just before midnight that it would be forced to a vote the opposition deputies retired, leaving the Chamber without a quorum. The deputies remaining voted to maintain a quorum by force. Policemen were sent to round up those who had departed. At least one was undressing for bed when found and brought back.

The session was resumed at 1 o'clock and continued until nearly daylight, when it was forced to a vote and ratified.

Public opinion has been greatly upset for the last few days by reports reaching here of a lecture recently delivered at Oruro, Bolivia, by Tomas Manuel Elio, the Bolivian former Minister for Foreign Affairs, in which he is said to have stated that Bolivia more than any other country needs to win a war because the international morale of Bolivia can be sustained only by a victorious war.

Warning Seen in Speech.

Señor Elio was Minister for Foreign Affairs during the Bolivian-Paraguayan negotiations at Buenos Aires, the failure of which led to the organization of the commission of neutrals in Washington. In the Oruro speech he is reported to have explained why Bolivia was unable to carry war to the Paraguayan frontiers after the Fort Vanguardia incident. He blamed delay in delivery of armaments, due to the difficulty of access to Puerto Suarez, and the absence of roads in Chaco.

Señor Elio is reported to have said: "Any war which we would start to put the port under our sovereignty would be a just and legitimate war."

Although the port was not identified, Paraguayans feel convinced he meant the port on the Upper Paraguay River, since an outlet to the Pacific definitely was closed by the recent treaty of Lima between Peru and Chile, terminating the Tacna-Arica dispute.

The Asunción newspaper, El Diario, which is usually considered a government mouthpiece, says editorially: "Señor Elio's declarations constitute a notification to us and we should keep them in mind."

Treaty Is Promulgated.

ASUNCION, Oct. 20 (AP).—President Guggiari promulgated the boundary treaty with Brazil, known as the Ibarra-Mangabeira treaty, today.

239 CANDIDATES IN ONTARIO.

Nominations Close for Election in 112 Constituencies Oct. 30.

TORONTO, Oct. 20 (Canadian Press).—Marked by the usual last-minute surprises, by confusion as to the legality of nominations in three constituencies and by five definite acclamations, Ontario has closed its official nomination book and awaits the verdict of the electors on Oct. 30.

When returning officers at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon declared nominations closed, 239 candidates had been named to contest the 112 constituencies.

Not a riding was overlooked by the Conservatives and all five acclamations fall into the ranks of the government party. Eighty-seven officially endorsed Liberals are in the field and ten Progressives. Between these two parties there are a few instances of reciprocal endorsation. Thirty other candidates of various political affiliation have been nominated.

Sixteen three-cornered contests, three of them in Toronto, have developed.

'PLOT' NOT ILLEGAL, SAYS CUBAN LEADER

Col. Mendieta, One of Fourteen Accused, Admits They Signed Anti-Government Manifesto.

BAIL FOR FOUR ARRESTED

Opposition Group Denies It Acted Clandestinely or Overstepped Political Party Rights.

HAVANA, Oct. 20 (AP).—The four men arrested on Friday on conspiracy charges after police seized a political manifesto against President Machado's régime were released on $1,000 bail each last night, it was learned today.

Those admitted to bond were: Alfredo Avila, a plantation owner; Pedro Vallez Fernandez, an attorney; Antonio Beruff y Mendieta, secretary of the Union Nacionalista, a political party, and Sexto Aguiro Padrón. All were charged with sedition and attempts to incite rebellion.

Fourteen other signers of the manifesto seized by the police were still at liberty today, although they appeared in court yesterday and took oath they had signed the document, and declaring they were within their rights in signing it.

Colonel Carlos Mendieta, former Deputy and potential Presidential candidate of the Nacionalista party two years ago, who headed the group in court, told The Associated Press the avowal "clears the manifesto of being clandestine."

The party presented the court a document acknowledging their names had appeared on the manifesto, and made a stipulation to the effect that they were within their rights in issuing a pamphlet expressing their political views.

"We have presented before the Second Section of the Instructional Court, which has charge of procedure against opposition members, acknowledgement of our names on the manifesto, and the names of the authors of the manifesto to the people by the Nacionalista party," said Colonel Mendieta in an interview.

"The government has always considered our political meetings rebellious and this legal manifesto as a revolutionary proclamation.

"Our presentation in court assuming responsibility as signers of the document clears the manifesto of being clandestine, and we assume responsibility, for the government will be unable to procure our silence.

"We are fighting without the rights guaranteed under the Constitution affording free press and free speech, but we will fight until total restoration is made of public liberties, with all the legal arms provided."

It was learned that Cuban labor unions interested in the case had again sent notes to the government promising allegiance and had addressed a long cable to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, protesting against recent resolutions regarding Cuba which have come up in labor conferences.

MORE HELD IN CUBAN PLOT.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Oct. 20.—Four more arrests have been made in connection with the distribution of alleged seditious proclamations in Cuba from foreign countries.

The latest arrests were made in the neighboring city of Mariano. Four men connected with the newspaper El Sol are held.

JAPAN CANCELS SALARY CUT

Wide Protests Result in Abandoning Reductions for Officials.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Oct. 20.—The Tokio Asahi reports that Prime Minister Hamaguchi, on the advice of several of the senior members of his party, has decided to cancel the reductions in official salaries of more than 3600 a year announced last Tuesday.

It was Junnosuke Inouye, Minister of Finance, who at first insisted that it was unwise to jeopardize the prospects of the government for a saving of $4,000,000. The stout resistance of legal officials and fear of wholesale judicial resignations also influenced the Prime Minister. The press had voiced the alarm of the industrial workers lest the government step should give the signal for general reductions, while a number of influential peers disapproved of the action as likely to stir up social unrest for an inadequate reason.

Rural members of the Diet are disappointed by the surrender, but the main strength of the government party is in the cities. The railwaymen of Tokio voted against the proposed decrease and called upon railwaymen throughout the country to bestir themselves. Protests from officials of provincial and colonial courts continue to be reported.

To Eugene Schoen, to Prof. Jacques Carlu and John Allen Boyle, to Franklin Whitman and Percival Goodman who designed the interiors—to the skilled craftsman who executed them—

To you we pay this tribute—this public expression of our appreciation of your achievement in creating a building which embodies the finest in contemporary modern architecture, decoration and design.

Hundreds of messages of congratulation have come to Stewart on the occasion of the opening of this modern new fashion shop. To you, rather than to Stewart, should these messages be directed. When the thousands who have seen this building and its interiors have applauded—we have pointed proudly to you.

Your work has achieved in the new Stewart the superlative in store architecture, decoration and beauty. Now, to attain the ultimate in fashion is our happy task. To this ideal our organization is pledged.

TORIES COMPLAIN OF CHIEFS' INERTIA

NO NEW LEADER IN SIGHT

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—With the opening of Parliament only eight days off, the Conservative party is about to resume its rôle of Opposition with no definite program of action but with widespread discontent among its adherents over the party leadership.

This discontent, of course, was inevitable after defeat, but the election was five months ago and nothing has been done since by the party leaders to pull the party together again. That is the chief reason why more than 200 letters have been received at party headquarters from Tory members of the House of Commons and defeated candidates complaining of the party management and demanding a change in methods, if not of leaders.

The burden of these complaints is that not only was the party defeated because of lack of energy in the campaign but that the continuance of the leaders' inertia ever since has prevented any reawakening of party hope or enthusiasm for future action either in Parliament, which begins at the end of this month, or in the municipal elections throughout the country to be held on Nov. 1.

Tories Still Grumbling.

Now, therefore, instead of being prepared to function as the chief Opposition party in the Commons or put up a stiff fight to win the local councils, for which the Labor party is vigorously campaigning, the Tories are still grumbling about their defeat last May and are chiefly interested in the two party conferences to be held next month, both for the avowed purpose of finding out why they were defeated and who was to blame.

These autopsies should have been over and done with months ago, according to widespread opinion, but the party's leader, Stanley Baldwin, and Sir Austen Chamberlain went off for their long Summer holidays on the Continent and Winston Churchill to the United States. In other words, the followers of these men feel as if they had been left very much in the lurch after a bad defeat at the polls.

The Conservative back-bencher members of the House of Commons have not the slightest cue as to what line their party is to take when they confront the victorious Socialists under the temporary leadership of Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who will manage the government party until Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald arrives in Parliament at the beginning of the second week of the session. Furthermore, they suspect the Tory leaders themselves do not know what line they will take.

No "Captious Opposition."

When the Labor Government took ontrol in June, Mr. Baldwin promised that there would be no "captious opposition" from the Tories. Now he Tories are wondering somewhat captiously if Mr. Baldwin is going o put up opposition of any sort.

Despite the rebellious discontent within the party, there is no definite plan yet on the part of the faultfinders to challenge Mr. Baldwin's continuance of leadership. They will tell him at next month's autopsies that a leader ought to lead and may suggest or even demand the sacrifice of a scapegoat in the person of J. C. C. Davidson, t e party chairman, who is personally popular even with those who deplore what they call his lack of political energy and persistence. But if Mr. Davidson goes out, it will be on his own initiative and not because of any request from Mr. Baldwin.

One factor of safety for Mr. Baldwin in the situation is that no one is in sight to take his place. Sir Austen Chamberlain, former Foreign Minister, who aspired to the leadership when the present Earl of Balfour was compelled to resign in 1911 but had to give way in favor of Andrew Bonar Law, is not even being thought of in the present situation. The Conservatives realize now that one of the chief causes of their defeat was Sir Austen's foreign policy and that the outstanding factor in the present Labor Government's strength and popularity is its marked modification of his policy, especially with reference to the United States.

Labor Considered Pro-American.

Mr. MacDonald's visit to America, aside from all international benefits that may flow from it and considered merely for its effect on English domestic politics, sets a mark the Tories will have difficulty in reaching for some time to come. One of the Conservatives' present grievances is that because of the attitude of their leaders when in power the Socialists now reap the vast political benefit of being considered the pro-American party.

Nor is Winston Churchill, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, considered as a possible successor to Mr. Baldwin. He has spent too many years of his political life as an active member of the Liberal party for the Tories to be willing to give him the leadership of theirs. His full-length portrait still smiles from the walls of the National Liberal Club as if in anticipation of the original's coming back some day. But he is not even a member of the Carlton Club, membership in which is still considered as essential a hall-mark of full-blooded Toryism as membership in the Union League Club of New York was deemed necessary a generation or two ago for the leaders of the Republican party.

There is nobody else when the talk is about the leadership. Most of the aggressive Tories are now in the peerage and therefore ruled out because a party leader must also be the leader either of the government or the Opposition in the House of Commons. It seems to be the situation for a dark horse such as produced Mr. Bonar Law in 1911.

25 Flee Mexican Jail by Tunnel.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 20 (AP).—The correspondent of La Prensa at San Luis Potosi reported today that twenty-five prisoners had escaped from the penitentiary there through a tunnel. The passage was dug some years ago by other prisoners who escaped in a body and it was never entirely filled up. The prisoners reopened the tunnel and escaped yesterday. Troops scoured the countryside for them today.

LEFT GAINS 8 SEATS IN FRENCH SENATE

By P. J. PHILIP.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—In thirty departments of France Senatorial elections were held today, thus renewing one-third of the upper house. As always in Senatorial elections where the electorate is limited, there were few changes.

Such changes as occurred, however, showed a slight increase in the Radical vote. The Right parties lost eight seats on the second ballot to Radicals of two groups and the Socialists won one seat.

The final count showed the Radical Socialist party held or had won thirty-six out of ninety-six seats, the Nationalist party seventeen, the Left Republicans ten, the Radicals seventeen, Republican Socialists twelve and Independents one.

Marsal Among Defeated.

Among the most notable of the defeated Senators were former Premier and former Finance Minister François Marsal, and M. Raiberti, former Minister of Marine. In the Alsatian department of Haut Rhind Abbé Haegy, autonomist, just failed of election on the third ballot after leading in the first two ballots.

Meager as were the radical successes, they seem likely to give encouragement to the Left parties, which are still hopeful that they will be able during the coming session to obtain control of the Chamber.

Next week-end the Radical Socialist party will hold its annual convention at Rheims and in a declaration of policy which it has already framed it has made it clear that it will in no case enter a coalition government with the Right or take any place in a Cabinet as at present constituted.

Edouard Daladier, who has been the leader of the party during the last two years, will most probably be elected again, and his re-election will be tantamount to an affirmation of the policy of association with the Socialists rather than with even the Moderate Right.

Even with Socialist support it would be impossible for the Radicals alone to obtain a definite majority in the Chamber, but either on the question of reduction of taxes or on the Rhineland evacuation some of their leaders believe a split can be effected between Right Nationalists and the Moderate Centre, which is included in the present majority.

Today two Radical orators—Edouard Herriot at Lyons and M. Delimier at Beauvais—emphasized the paradox in the present situation, that Premier Briand in his foreign policy is putting into effect what the Left approves and what the Right disapproves, although the latter forms his majority.

"The same parties which now support M. Briand in the adoption of the Young plan," Mr. Herriot declared, "opposed us when we approved the Dawes plan, which up to date has put in a round figures $1,000,000,000 in the French Treasury, without in any way harming the cause of peace."

Tax Returns Bring Criticism.

The second great issue of the parliamentary session which begins Tuesday will be the extent to which taxes can be cut. The revenue figures for September, just published, show that during the first nine months of the year nearly 5,000,000,000 francs ($200,000,000) above estimates were collected.

Finance Minister Cheron in an official note of explanation issued with the revenue statement insists that this surplus is "purely temporary" and that all adjustments have not been made. He asserts that it is necessary to provide the treasury with "the necessary elasticity to meet future needs."

This view is being strongly combated, not only by Left parties but also by a section of the business community, which criticizes the treasury's employment of foreign holdings, especially in New York, and declares that the enormous amount of 25,000,000,000 francs ($1,000,000,000) said to be in the treasury far exceeds requirements and is a serious handicap to business.

SHANNON TESTS SUCCEED.

Are Getting Current Increases—Germans Can Fulfill Contract.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Oct. 20.—The huge embankments harnessing the River Shannon into seven miles of head race for Ireland's national electricity scheme have weathered the most severe tests and three turbines are maintaining a steady flow of current to a rapidly increasing area of Leinster.

The two German contracting firms, the Siemens Bauunion and Siemens & Schuckert, now declare they will be able to fulfill their contract and make the Shannon produce as much electricity as the Free State is likely to require for the next 100 years. It is expected the Ardnacrusha power station will be in full working order as a commercial concern by the end of the month.

The Free State Government has already spent $30,000,000 on the scheme, which is expected to cost another $40,000,000 before the work is completed.

SCHUTZBUND MEMBER SLAIN

Killed by Heimwehr Man During Quarrel in Langenwang, Austria.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Oct. 20.—Enmity between the Fascist Heimwehr and the Socialist Schutzbund claimed another victim today when a Schutzbunder named Arbneret was shot by a Heimwehrman, an engineer named Maier, in Langenwang near this city.

Arbneret encountered four Heimwehrmen in a street and when a quarrel began he drew a knife. A shot was fired and the Socialist fell dead, still carrying his knife. His assailant was arrested.

BANK EXPERTS TALK WITH HOME LEADERS

NEW PLANS ON SITE LIKELY

Organizers Will Open Debate on Trustee Deed—Bank Is to Have No Branches.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BADEN-BADEN, Oct. 20.—With the sessions suspended over the week-end, the leading delegates on the organization committee of the Bank for International Settlements were in their various capitals holding preparatory consultations for what may be the decisive week of their negotiations.

Most of the delegates are from the staffs of the national banks of issue and, at least ostensibly, their consultations will be confined to financial subjects for they are supposedly entirely independent experts, with no political strings attached to them. It is not, however, impossible that the governments will be fully informed of the present status of the negotiations.

Final Stage Approaches.

The committee has completed its second review of the statutes and every delegation is now fully acquainted with the position taken by the others. When the discussions are resumed on Tuesday, following the return of the absent members, the delegates should be prepared to enter the final stage of the argument. Each should know exactly to what extent his own country is willing to yield, and, for the first time, there should be full discussions upon all those difficult points which were postponed as soon as any widely divergent views appeared.

The experts will return from Paris, Berlin, Brussels and London with new proposals or arguments as to the bank's site, and thus the question will this week certainly enter an active stage. In the words of Dr. Hjalmar Scacht, the early solution of this issue depends on whether those who know they have a hopeless case persist in making long exposés of their claims, or whether, in the interests of an early termination of this conference, they are willing to yield without prolonging the struggle. This hint may be taken to include the Belgians, who are making a determined fight to have the bank located at Brussels. What the British will do regarding their efforts of moral suasion in favor of London depends largely on the word brought back by W. T. Layton, who is spending the week-end in the British capital. In the face of bitter opposition, the British press, at least, has expressed doubts as to the possibility of the acceptance of London site by the other nations, and, maybe, a compromise will be agreed to. In such an event it seems likely that Switzerland will be favored.

To Debate Trustee Deed.

During the week there will also begin the general debate on the trustee deed which will contain a specific agreement concerning the handling of the German annuities.

The commission charged with its preparation has found the subject so difficult that, despite two weeks of labor, it has not yet been able to submit a report.

During the past week much progress has been made on technical details, with a notable exception regarding chapter six of the Young plan report concerning loan procedure, about which the delegates have divulged very little. The decisions taken largely follow the Young plan, but one or two departures from and expansions of its provisions should be noted.

The committee has radically altered the clause relating to the bank's liquidity. The Young plan provides a 25 per cent cover or 40 per cent for delayed calls, but the committee has decided it will be necessary to provide almost a 100 per cent liquidity.

The committee has also decided that the bank may not make advances to governments directly, but must deal through central banks, and that all dealings with private institutions, such as those with the United States, must be subject to the central bank's veto. The committee also stipulates that the bank cannot issue long or short term obligations, and has voted a highly protective veto clause demanded by the American delegates on behalf of the Federal Reserve.

All these measures aim to place restrictions upon the bank's ultimate powers as conceived in the Young plan. The delegates, at the same time, emphasize that the bank will be a bank of deposits rather than a bank of issue, and that it will be the servant rather than the master of the central banks. However, it is obvious that, even serving merely in the capacity of a bank of exchange and a reparations distributer, the bank is bound to assume many functions at present profitably performed by the central and other private banks.

Another important decision is that the chairman of the board shall have full executive powers, which, if an American is named, will act to counteract the insignificant position of the American directors under the system which has been adopted for their selection.

Lastly, the bankers here have ruled that the world bank shall have no branches, a decision which has disposed of the British compromise offer to agree to the bank's headquarters being on the Continent but having a London branch.

'SACK CRISIS' HITS SOVIET GRAIN WORK

SHORTAGE FAR IN MILLIONS

Growth of Roads Outstrips Ability of Directors, Who Lack Professional Experience.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Oct. 20.—Russia is proverbially the land of crises and famines, but the latest affliction of this character strikes a somewhat unusual note. There are a "sack crisis" and a "tarpaulin famine" so serious as to menace the success of the State grain collection campaign and to contribute in no small degree to the present transport congestion, which has reached a critical stage.

According to the Industro-Commercial Gazette, the demand for ordinary sacks at the beginning of October exceeded the supply by 25,000,000 units, the shortage of plaited bast sacks, greatly used here for rough transport, being no fewer than 29,000,000.

Tarpaulin, called simply "tarun" in Russia, tar also means all forms of covers for goods, from paper bags to crates or boxes, is equally lacking, with the result that grain collections are often halted at various points and the grain is left undischarged in cars.

It is hoped to solve the problem within two or three years by the construction of grain elevators at collection points, in accord with the five years' plan, but today Pravda admits there is a daily average of 21,000 unloaded cars out of a total of a daily average of 47,000 cars in use.

The shortage of warehouse and storing facilities does not aid matters and the problem is further complicated by the decision this year to complete the grain collection program by Jan. 1 instead of July 1, as was done previously. This decision put an unexpected strain upon the railroads because not only must the grain be moved from the villages but goods moved to the villages in exchange.

It is clear from the newspapers that the transportation system failed to make the grade. The cars are tied up all over the country, causing perishable freight to spoil and depriving urban centres of such necessities as potatoes, meat, milk and vegetables for days at a time, while mail and passenger service is delayed anywhere from one to ten hours.

The fact is that the growth of rail transportation, from 20,000 cars daily three years ago to upward of 50,000 today, with a corresponding increase in passenger traffic, has outstripped the capacity of the railroads and their executives. The heads of the railroad commissariat are honest and energetic, but they lack professional experience.

What Russia needs today is a man of the calibre of Sir Henry Thornton to bring order out of the chaos.

TURKS HAIL BRITISH AMITY.

Commander of English Mediterranean Fleet Decorates Statue.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 20.—Mounting a stairway carpeted with Oriental rugs, the commander-in-chief of the British Mediterranean squadron, Admiral Sir Frederick Field, today placed an enormous wreath of crimson flowers at the base of the statue of the Turkish Republic in Taxim Square. Thousands applauded the act of friendship, which is the most impressive demonstration of its kind Britain has made here since the war.

Turkish papers, reprinting comments from British journals, hail the visit of the squadron as a timely prelude to negotiations about to commence for a treaty of amity between the two countries. The squadron, including the aircraft carrier Courageous, on which 100 Turkish officers were treated to an air display, sailed this afternoon after a week's visit.

BAR PLEBISCITE PARADES.

Berlin Police Interfere in Anti-Young Plan Drive—No Riots Occur.

LONDON, Oct. 20 (AP).—A Reuter's dispatch from Berlin tonight said that Nationalist meetings in favor of a plebiscite against the Young plan for reparations passed off in comparative quiet today.

The police intervened in a few cases when attempts were made to form forbidden processions and the names of about fifty persons were taken at police stations.

There was no rioting.

TADJIKISTAN DECLARED A SOVIET REPUBLIC

Million Central Asians Achieve Autonomous Rule for First Time in Centuries.

BUSHAMSEY, Tadjikistan, Oct. 20 (AP).—For the first time in centuries nearly 1,000,000 Tadjiks, natives of Central Asia, are to have an autonomous republic under the aegis of the Soviet Union, which will now consist of seven allied republics instead of six.

Described as the heart of the East, the Tadjik autonomous republic, which previously had been part of the Uzbekistan Soviet Socialist Republic, decided through its congress of Soviets that it ought to enjoy the same status as other members of the Soviet family. These are the Russian Federation, Ukrainia, White Russia, the Transcaucasian Federation, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan.

For hundreds of years the Tadjiks, whose mountainous country borders Afghanistan to the south and China to the east, were under the domination of the Bukharian emirs and were in a continuous state of turmoil until 1926, when the territory was incorporatetd in Uzbekistan.

Tadjikistan is about the same size as the State of Colorado and its eastern section occupies the high Pamir Plateau north of the Hindu Kush Mountain range. Its western section, where most of the population dwell, supplies the Soviet Union with a great part of its cotton. The crop this year was double that of prewar times.

The customs of the population, which is largely Mohammedan, where partly patriarchal and partly feudal. The land of former landlords has been distributed among the peasants, who have formed a huge cooperative movement. During the last ten years considerable progress has been made in road building, extension of the cotton industry, establishment of new schools and development of silk production.

MACDONALD LEAVES CANADIAN CAPITAL

FORMALITIES END THERE

Most of His Time Before Departure for Home Will Be Spent in Resting.

ABOARD PRIME MINISTER MacDONALD'S SPECIAL TRAIN, OTTAWA TO MONTREAL, Oct. 20.—Prime Minister MacDonald of Britain is en route tonight to Montreal, where he will arrive early tomorrow to fulfill the last day of formal engagements before he sails for England from Quebec Friday.

The Premier and his party left Ottawa at 10:30 o'clock tonight after a day of rest in which Mr. MacDonald attended his first church service on his present trip, and during which he and his daughter, Miss Ishbel, went for a drive through the wooded hills of the Gatineau.

Mr. MacDonald will leave Montreal tomorrow night for Chicoutimi, where he will stay two days in the woods before proceeding to Quebec. He will have a little more than a full day in Quebec, but the functions there have been planned with an informality which will give him more rest before he boards the liner Duchess of York Friday night.

Service at St. Andrew's Church.

The Prime Minister and his daughter in a party of five attended a special service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church this morning. The simple exercises, conducted by the Rev. W. H. Leather, consisted of two short prayers, the reading of a Scripture lesson from the Book of Isaiah and the singing of six songs, the last of which was Mr. MacDonald's favorite hymn, "O God of Bethel."

The five motored through the Gatineau Hills during afternoon and stopped in the upper reaches for a canoe ride on the Gatineau River.

Will Be Met in Montreal.

Upon his arrival at Montreal in the morning Mr. MacDonald will be greeted by a delegation headed by Mayor Camalien Houde. He will be conducted by the group to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

The Prime Minister later will receive E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, and accompany him on a motor ride about the city. He will lunch as a guest of the Canadian Club at the Windsor Hotel, and for tea will join his daughter at the residence of Senator McDougal.

Mr. MacDonald, his daughter and Sir Robert Vansittart, secretary to the Prime Minister will dine as the guests of Sir Henry and Lady Bornton. They will board their train immediately afterward for Chicoutimi.

FRENCH PRESS STIRRED BY BOURSE DEPRESSION

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—The money situation in France and the consequent depression on the Paris Bourse have begun to arouse a steady flow of criticism from the press, and the objections are being directed partly at the French Government and partly at Wall Street.

Following many months of almost unenlivened depression, the Bourse during the last week has reached a point which the Temps characterizes as one of almost complete demoralization. There are practically no buyers in the market and the general public for months past has not shown the slightest interest.

The reasons given by the press for this situation are two. First, the government is blamed because of the huge accumulation of money which the treasury now holds as a result of heavy taxation. It was said by one newspaper yesterday that the treasury actually held at present 25,000,000,000 francs ($1,000,000,000), or half the total of the French budget.

The second reason given for the inactivity here is that all French and European banks are still sending their ready cash to New York as call money.

Newspapers of such widely different opinions as l'Avenir, which is the organ of the French steel industry, and Populaire, the Socialist organ, agree in laying a large part of the responsibility of the present depression upon the exaggerated treasury surplus, and the Socialist Leon Blum declares that the French treasury's deposits in New York, which originally were destined to meet war stock payments are now being employed "merely to encourage speculation in Wall Street."

SAYS DIRIGIBLE R-101 CAN CARRY AIRCRAFT

Expert Declares British Ship Has Fittings for Apparatus to Catch or Release Planes.

SECRET TESTS HELD LIKELY

Attached Craft Could Aid the Airship's Engines—Date for Indian Trip Not Yet Set.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Britain's giant new airship, the R-101, according to some technical observers, has been designed as an aircraft carrier. One reveals today that he has noticed groups of fittings flush with the under side of the hull to which steel slings, similar to those used in Britain's earlier airships for releasing and catching airplanes, could be attached.

It is believed the R-101 could launch at least five aircraft simultaneously from beneath her huge hull and take them aboard again while in motion. It is recalled that airship designers, when discussing plans for commercial craft, debated the possibility of taking aboard mails and passengers at intermediate airports by means of "feeder" aircraft and some hold some such device has been embodied in the construction of the R-101.

According to official statements, the R-101 was built by the government for regular passenger service to India. All along controversy has raged over the possibility of bringing down the airship at intermediate points in the tropics to take on passengers and mails without sacrificing huge quantities of lifting gas. Frequent regassing is an expensive process and would soon absorb all the profits of the journey. Further, regassing entails considerable delay and is dependent on fair weather.

No date for the first projected trip to India has yet been fixed for the R-101 and it is believed the Air Ministry is about to conduct a number of secret experiments in hooking and unhooking aircraft before she starts her maiden voyage.

Anchorage points, it is stated, are so placed beneath her hull that the engines of aircraft attached to slings could be used to assist the airship's main engines in propelling her forward or in climbing to cooler altitudes in the tropics, where her gas would be less likely to lose its lifting power.

There is a possibility, of course, that her designers might have in view the carrying of military or naval air craft for observation of enemy territory or ships while she remains out of view high above the clouds.

PLAN LAW SESSION AT CUBA.

Directors of Institute of International Law Arrive There Oct. 29.

HAVANA, Oct. 20 (AP).—The State Department reported today that members of the board of directors of the American Institute of International Law would arrive on Oct. 29 from New York and Washington to draft plans for a plenary session in Havana next year.

Arrangements will also be made for the inauguration of an academy of international law to be completed here early next year.

member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

After consulting with Chairman Borah, President Hoover did not go down the line in rank of Republicans on the Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Reed ranks sixth. Senator Johnson of California is second.

Both Senators Robinson and Reed voted for and urged the ratification of the Kellogg anti-war treaty. As members of the Foreign Relations Committee they have taken an active part in international relations.

Whether a place on the delegation was offered to Senator Borah is unknown. It is believed, however, that he made his position clear to the President along with an intimation that he preferred not to leave America.

The Idahoan did not vote for the fifteen-cruiser bill and has determinedly advocated that Great Britain go on record for freedom of the seas, a delicate point with that proud maritime nation. At the outset of the negotiations between President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald over naval limitation, Senator Borah suggested that Britain sink some of her battleships as a means of getting on a parity with this country.

There is reason to believe that Mr. Hoover wanted Senator Watson to remain on the job as party leader during the regular session. Moreover, the Indiana Senator is more identified with domestic affairs as ranking member on the Finance and Interstate Commerce Committees and it is not believed he would have cared for the overseas assignment.

Woman Copywriter Wanted

An opportunity to work on one of the most prominent national accounts in America is offered a woman writer of proved ability and experience.

The woman chosen will be able to point to at least three years' experience in an agency of high standing and repute.

She will have a record of successful campaigns on national accounts to prove her belief in a successful future with this organization.

She will believe fundamentally and intuitively that the function of advertising is to sell the millions, rather than to "attract" or entertain, and will have examples of her previous work to prove the point.

Her personality will be of the type that enables her to work in harmony with a large organization, on a give and take basis, and to work constructively with clients.

No one without all the foregoing requirements—proved record, experience, and unquestioned ability—will be considered.

Anyone—regardless of age, creed or nationality—who can meet them will be welcomed into an agency handling a number of the most stable and prominent accounts in advertising today, with a future limited only by her own capabilities.

MEXICAN TRADE BID BY CANADIANS SEEN

Visit of Directors of Bank of Montreal Also Is Linked With Debt Negotiations.

EXPANSION HELD UNLIKELY

Intensification of Operations but No Big New Business Is Viewed as Program.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 20.—"One of the foremost interests of the Bank of Montreal is to further the existing friendly relations between Canada and Mexico and to promote trade between those countries," said Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, vice president of the bank, after his arrival here with three of his co-directors last night. He also said his bank's assets at present are upward of $6,000,000.

Sir Frederick was full of praise for Mexico, whose eventual stability, both financial and economic, has never been doubted by his organization, he added, and he considers that this stage of development will soon reach a culminating point.

Both foreign and Mexican financial and industrial circles consider the visit of Sir Frederick and his group as of outstanding importance as affecting future banking business of this capital and a number of other Mexican cities where the Bank of Montreal has established branches. At present the Bank of Montreal and the Canadian Bank of Commerce have bigger turnovers than any other private financial enterprises in Mexico, and when it is taken into account that the Mexican Light and Power Company, which supplies all the electric power and runs all the street cars here, is supported by Canadian capital, the influence of that country financially cannot be underestimated.

Banco de Mexico Not a Rival.

The Banco de Mexico, this republic's sole bank of issue, is considered largely a governmental exchange institution and one whose purpose is mainly the regulation of home and external exchange. Its private business is not great.

The Anglo-South American Bank, a British institution principally, is another growing concern, but the two Canadian banks tower above all of them in private and industrial accounts.

Mr. Frederick and his party will remain here about two weeks and their activities will be watched with much interest. Only a few days ago National City Bank officials announced that since the opening of its first branch in Mexico in July deposits of upward of 5,000,000 pesos ($2,500,000) had been received, and in authoritative quarters the opinion is expressed that the Canadian visitors fully appreciate that these figures indicate there is room for increased banking business to be done here, which should result more favorably to them as a long-established institution as against newcomers, even of such standing as the National City Bank.

It was further announced this morning that Sir Frederick and his associates will hold conferences with Finance Minister Luis Montes de Oca. The conclusion is drawn from this that the Canadian bankers may be interested in the study not only of their own immediate interests but also may plan to enter in some way into Mexican international finance. Should that be true, then their visit here assumes an aspect of even greater importance, bearing in mind that Mexico is actively engaged in laying the foundations for another debt compact with the international bankers.

Expansion Not Expected.

As regards the industrial development of Mexico the visit of Sir Frederick and his group is not expected to have any very immediate effect. Conditions momentarily are against increased capital investment. For one thing, foreign capital is openly skeptical of Mexico's proposed labor code, which is before the Chamber of Deputies, and which the officials of foreign companies assert would hit them so badly in some instances as to put them out of business.

Petroleum activities are at a record low ebb, the foreign companies asserting that excessive taxation is as much to blame as world overproduction. Also, according to a statement recently issued by Walter Palmer, one of Mexico's best known authorities on silver mining, conditions are almost as bad in that as in oil.

Mr. Palmer referred to the present quotation of silver in New York as at less than 50 cents a troy ounce, adding that at that figure silver mining at a profit in this republic is out of the question. It is said here, in fact, that any price under 56 cents an ounce is profitless.

It is therefore the opinion in reliably informed circles that Sir Frederick and associates are here on their tour of foreign branches to see for themselves how they stand in this country, and that they are looking to future intensification of Bank of Montreal operations rather than to any new financing in the immediate future.

Rome Prepares for Humbert's Wedding; Our Envoy Goes to Paris on Outfitting Tour

By The Associated Press.

ROME, Oct. 20.—Ladies-in-waiting and members of the Diplomatic Corps have already placed orders for their costumes for the wedding of Princess Marie José of Belgium to Crown Prince Humbert, although formal announcement of their betrothal is yet to be made.

Many persons have already purchased wedding presents, and the United States Ambassador, John W. Garrett, and Mrs. Garrett left for Paris and London last night, partly with the intention of shopping for the event.

There is no doubt that elaborate preparations are going on in Rome, although they are being kept quiet pending the formal announcement, which some expect later this week. The bustle in the capital has attracted much interest. There is no doubt that the Vatican will take some direct part in the wedding as the result of the settlement of the Roman question this year.

It is believed that Cardinal Gamba, Archbishop of Turin, where the Crown Prince makes his headquarters, will perform the ceremony and impart the special blessing of Pope Pius. Some believe that the Pope himself will impart the blessing following the nuptial mass, possibly in the Sistine Chapel. Cardinal Gamba is a personal friend of the Prince and has long been intimate with the House of Savoy.

Prince Humberto last saw the Princess at St. Moritz last Winter when the Belgian royal family was there. They went bob-sledding together. The Prince celebrated his twenty-fifth birthday last month and Marie José is 23.

NANKING TROOPS GO NORTH.

Forces Push Forward From Hankow —Rebels Move South.

HANKOW, Oct. 20 (AP).—Developments in Northwest Honan Province continued to be obscure tonight. Nationalist reinforcements from down river poured into the city and were rushed north on the Kinhan Railway and also northwest up the Han River. The rebellious Kuominchun forces were said to be advancing down the Han.

A new panic among coolies here resulted from the efforts of military authorities to recruit labor battalions. The police were forced to round up 1,000 coolies for this purpose.

Aviators of the Nationalist army were reported to have inflicted considerable damage by bombing the enemy lines near Yenshih.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 20.—The construction of a mausoleum for 36,000 Rumanian war dead has been begun by a Marashti company, which has been restoring the battlefield of Marashesti and Marashti.

The mausoleum is to combine all the military cemeteries in the neighborhood. It will contain a memorial chamber with a sarcophagus for the commanding General and niches for identified officers. In the centre will be a statue of a dying soldier handing on the torch to his countrymen.

DISQUIET IN MEXICO AS ELECTION NEARS

With Both Presidential Candidates Claiming Victory, Loser's Course Is Held Uncertain.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 20 (AP).—Two distinct currents of opinion are prevalent here as to the result and aftermath of the Presidential elections to be held on Nov. 17.

One faction especially strong in the capital holds that Pascual Ortiz Rubio, the National Revolutionary party candidate, will obtain an easy victory. Members of this group indignantly deny suggestions that they might have to resort to unfair means to win the elections.

Another faction, also strong in Mexico City but with its greatest redoubts in such places as Tampico, contends that José Vasconcelos, the Anti-Reelectionist party choice, is bound to win in a fair election. They wear the guise of doubting Thomases, however, as regards the fairness of the coming ballot count.

In between stands President Portes Gil, whose sincerity in announcing that impartial elections will be held is generally credited. That the President will do everything in his power to see that the voters are not intimidated and that a just count of the ballots will be made is the popular belief.

The Vasconcelistas contend, nevertheless, that their representatives have been subjected to persecution in various parts of the country. They even go so far as to charge their enemies with plotting fake uprisings in their name in order to have a pretext for cancelling the elections. They have not attempted to involve the President in the alleged scheming and the President has given prompt attention to all complaints placed before him.

Most of the shouting is being done by the Vasconcelistas. The Ortiz Rubistas are conducting a more quiet campaign characterized by an air of assurance. Answering questionnaires which recently were submitted by the press, Señor Vasconcelos went to great length to express his views while Señor Ortiz Rubio replied tersely and without detail. Señor Vasconcelos was bitter in his denunciation of the acts of the last few administrations and Señor Ortiz Rubio entirely ignored the existence of his opponent.

The general opinion is that if Señor Ortiz Rubio is elected and goes quietly into office there will be little change in the present government policies. If Señor Vasconcelos should become President, drastic alterations are promised.

While one faction holds that a victory by Señor Ortiz Rubio would be accepted calmly and that, with a continuation of the present policies assured for several years more, a stable situation will be created, another is inclined to speculate as to whether the Vasconcelistas would accept an adverse decision calmly.

Vasconcelos said in a recent interview that if the count went against him and yet he considered himself elected, he would "accept the will of the people." Asked what that will was, he replied, "The people are tired of imposition."

FIRE WRECKS TALKIE GEAR.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Valuable technical instruments used in research for the development of talking pictures apparatus were destroyed when two talkie studios of the British Talking Pictures, Ltd., caught fire at Wembley today.

The company has a capital of $2,000,000, it is stated, and recently formed an important working agreement with the German Tobis group.

Firemen managed to save the new and well-equipped studio, due to be opened in November, and the company declares its film-making operations will not be interrupted.

EDISON INVENTION FAILED TO STIR CITY

Gas-Lit Town Was Too Busy With Indian War and Tilden Campaign to Pause for Bulb.

SCIENTIST JEERED AT IT

But Old Newspaper File Contains Inventor's Own Explanation of Incandescent Lamp.

In a New York lighted by gas lamps, dependent for its transportation upon horse-cars, cabs and hansoms, and with a telephone system that at best was embryonic, the historic demonstration of the first Edison electric light at Menlo Park, N. J., on Oct. 21, 1879, attracted comparatively scant attention.

Minor mention had been made of Edison's experiments in various papers during 1878, and THE NEW YORK TIMES carried a column and a half report of Edison's own account of them before the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Saratoga in September, 1879. But it was not until two months after the demonstration at Menlo Park that a detailed report of the new method of illumination appeared in the metropolitan press.

The front pages of the New York dailies, which in those days printed only eight or twelve pages, were given over to other matters on the day following the demonstration. The army was conducting a campaign against the Ute Indians in Colorado. General Sheridan had just placed himself in an awkward position by criticising General Sherman's direction of that campaign. General Merritt's command had been ordered to fall back to the White River Agency and General Sheridan had telegraphed General Sherman, his superior, roundly criticizing this order.

Columns of space were being devoted to the Gubernatorial campaign of Alonzo B. Cornell against the "Tilden-Robinson Democracy." William Waldorf Astor had just entered the political arena as Republican candidate for State Senator from the Tenth District. Elihu Root was running for Judge of the Court of Common Pleas and James W. Wadsworth was candidate for State Controller.

Professor Called Bulb Failure.

In the issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES of Dec. 28, 1879, in which Mr. Edison's demonstrations at Menlo Park are described, appears another item, which says: "Professor Henry Morton, the president of the Stevens Institute of Technology, who is well known for his researches in physics, and whose experiments were a source of unfeigned pleasure and astonishment to Professor Tyndall, recently sent a communication to The Sanitary Engineer, protesting against the trumpeting of the results of Edison's experiments in electric lighting as 'a wonderful success,' when 'every one acquainted with the subject will recognize it as a conspicuous failure.' To this was added the statement that Edison 'has done and is doing too much really good work to have his record defaced and his name discredited in the interests of any stock company or individual financier.'" Professor Morton goes on to say in the article that all attempts up to the present lamp are acknowledged to be failures, and points out that there appears to be no reason to hope for better success with the present one.

The account of the Edison demonstration as reported in THE NEW YORK TIMES says:

"There was no lack of enthusiasm or of confidence about Mr. Edison as he greeted THE TIMES reporter, who entered his laboratory at Menlo Park, N. J., yesterday. The inventor, a short, thickset man, with grimy hands, led the way through his workshop and willingly explained the distinctive features of what he and many others look upon as an apparatus which will soon cause gaslight to be a thing of the past."

After giving a detailed description of the lamp, the story continues:

"The first place visited was the room in which the furnace for carbonizing the paper is situated. The furnace is of the ordinary pattern, and on the coals rested a horseshoe mold, in which the bristol board to be charred was placed. Over each horseshoe a piece of tissue paper was placed, and the whole was washed until all the material of the cardboard except the carbon was taken away. When the filaments were taken from the mold they resembled pieces of black thread. The particles hung tenaciously together and the black horseshoe was easily placed in the platinum clamps of the globe of the lamp. The exhausting of the air takes place after the carbon is put in position. When this is done the lamp is complete.

Tells of Heat Resistance.

"'As there is no oxygen to burn,' said Mr. Edison, 'you can readily see that this piece of carbon will last an ordinary lifetime. It has the property of resisting the heat of the current of electricity while at the same time it becomes indandescent and gives out one of the most brilliant lights which the world has ever seen. The cost of preparing one of these little horseshoes of carbon is about one cent, and the entire lamp will cost not more than twenty-five cents.' Here the inventor gave a practical illustration of his invention. He was standing just under an ordinary gas chandelier in which two of his lamps were burning. He took one of the lamps out, and it appeared simply as a glass globe. He placed it back in the burner, and immediately a brilliant horseshoe of golden light illuminated the globe.

"Mr. Edison then, by turning a screw in the lamp, brought the light down to a spark, turned it off completely as gas can be turned off and turned it on again to a brilliant incandescent flame by a twist of his fingers. He certainly demonstrated that in his own laboratory at Menlo Park the electric light is as obedient to his will as the gaslight is to the general public. The light from each lamp is of about the power of an ordinary gas jet, but Mr. Edison claims that by increasing the electricity he can raise the power to fifteen gas jets.

Lights Burned Night and Day.

"Eighty-four lights are burning night and day in the laboratory and they are all supplied with electricity by an eighty horsepower engine which is stationed in the basement of one of the buildings. This engine, in addition to feeding these lamps, furnishes the motive power for all the machines in the laboratory and at night feeds the electric lights which had already been erected in Menlo Park in anticipation of the proposed grand illumination. The wires which are to convey the electricity to the lamps for the grand display are to be above ground so that all spectators can see and investigate them. They will lead directly from the lamps to the generator in the laboratory, and any person can trace them from point to point.

"From the furnace room Mr. Edison conducted the reporter to the room in which his lamps are made and where the air is exhausted from them. In this room, also, is Mr. Edison's machine for regulating the pressure of electricity as it passes to the different lamps throughout the laboratory. This machine consists of a series of coils of copper, over which the electric current is continually passing, and each coil is connected with a series of lamps. If the pressure is too great on any series of lamps it is at once shown by the coil representing that series and can be regulated in an instant. In this room, also, the carbonized paper is placed in the globes and the lamp is completed. It is Mr. Edison's pet room, and here he spends most of his time when not engaged in studying out new inventions.

"It has been asserted by some persons who are supposed to be conversant with the subject of electricity that in order to furnish light for houses of this city a copper coil as large as an ordinary barrel would be required as a conductor from the central station to the different houses in two or three blocks. Regarding this, Mr. Edison said: 'The size and amount of conductors for carrying electricity for lighting purposes depends, of course, upon the distance to which the electricity is to be carried. If I have to carry it ten miles, my conductor must be larger than if I have to carry it ten feet. My idea is to have central stations to cover, say a square of three or four blocks. The pipes containing the wires on a street, if this idea is carried out, will not exceed in size the circumference of your arm. They will be laid under the flag stones just at the edge of the sidewalk as gas pipes are now laid.'"

Mr. Edison went on to explain that the cost of these pipes compared to gas pipes would be small. He described the size of the wire required and said that electricity would be distributed in much the same manner as gas was then being distributed from central stations.

"You can say this, however," he told the reporter, "the electric light is perfected and all the problems which have been puzzling me for the last eighteen months have been solved."

Edison Anniversary to Be Marked by City; Flags to Fly, Schools to Hold Exercises

New York City as well as Menlo Park, N. J., where Thomas A. Edison invented the incandescent electric lamp, will officially celebrate today the anniversary of Mr. Edison's triumph. Mayor Walker has ordered by proclamation that the day be "fittingly observed in consideration of the far-reaching benefits of Mr. Edison's inventions and service to mankind."

Flags will fly from all public buildings to remind New Yorkers that Mr. Edison worked out his first commercial electric light installation in this city. The public schools will hold exercises in honor of the event, and many civic organizations have planned celebrations. The special yellow lighting on Fifth Avenue is another mark of respect for Mr. Edison.

The Edison Pioneers, men who toiled with Mr. Edison in his experiments a half century ago, will hold their celebration at the laboratory in Menlo Park. Mr. Edison will press a button in Dearborn that will light up at Menlo Park an incandescent lamp eighteen feet high, mounted on a 100-foot tower. This is to burn every night as a tribute to the inventor.

The Merchants Association of New York made public yesterday a resolution adopted in honor of the Light's Golden Jubilee. The resolution sets forth the benefits to the world from the invention of the electric incandescent lamp.

Church services in honor of Mr. Edison were held yesterday in Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, Orange, N. J. Representative Franklin W. Fort of East Orange and the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Wakely, the rector, were the speakers.

WORLD WILL HEAR EDISON CELEBRATION

Radio Waves and Land Wires Will Be Used Tonight in Greatest Broadcast System.

Short, medium and long radio waves, and thousands of miles of land wires, will be assembled into one gigantic system tonight to pay tribute to Thomas A. Edison on the fiftieth anniversary of his invention of the electric lamp. The network is expected to be the largest ever operated for any one event.

A microphone in Berlin is to carry the voice of Professor Albert Einstein by means of the transoceanic long and short wave telephone circuit of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and a series of cables stretching from Berlin to England. Simultaneously with the flashing of Professor Einstein's greeting over the coast-to-coast chains of WEAF, WABC and WJZ, it will be picked up by short-wave stations here and borne overseas for all the world. The entire program from Dearborn, Mich., beginning at 7:30 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, the climax of the celebration of "Light's Golden Jubilee," including addresses of President Hoover, Henry Ford, Owen D. Young, Mr. Edison and others, will be heard throughout the world, according to engineers arranging the system.

Professor Einstein's words will be intercepted in this country at the Netcong (N. J.) radio station of the transoceanic talking circuit and carried to the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System in New York by land wires. The radio chain wires will distribute the electrical vibrations to nearly one hundred stations in this country, some of which will be short-wave transmitters to carry the event to other lands. Listeners in Germany will hear Professor Einstein's words after the radio links have carried them twice across the Atlantic.

When the speakers at a luncheon meeting of the Broadway Association pay tribute to Mr. Edison this afternoon the proceedings will be broadcast from the Hotel Astor beginning at 1:30 o'clock by WABC's coast-to-coast network, the Columbia System announces. The principal address is to be made by Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who will be introduced by Dr. John A. Harriss, president.

Among the entertainers to be heard during the radio program is Will Oakland, who is said to have made the first vocal recording for Mr. Edison's early phonograph machine. An orchestra is also to play the song written by George M. Cohan in honor of the inventor, entitled "The Miracle Man," which is never to be placed on sale, the announcement says.

EDISON'S BIRTHPLACE WILL PAY HIM HONOR

Twelve Childhood Playmates of the Inventor Will Be Guests at Dinner in Milan, Ohio, Today.

Special to The New York Times.

SANDUSKY, Ohio, Oct. 20.—The little village of Milan, southeast of this city, famous as the birthplace of Thomas A. Edison, is all set tonight for its part in light's golden jubilee in honor of the inventor.

The celebration will begin with a dinner tomorrow evening at which a dozen men and women who were playmates of Mr. Edison at the time his parents took him to Port Huron, Mich., will be guests of honor. Each will give his recollections of Mr. Edison.

Afterward the Milan public will assemble in the Town Hall and listen to the broadcasting arranged in recognition of Mr. Edison.

A letter of congratulation bearing the signature of every person in Milan was sent to Henry Ford at Detroit today, to be delivered to Mr. Edison tomorrow.

Pittsburgh Illumined.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 20 (AP).—The city was ablaze with multi-colored lights tonight in preparation fohter week of "Light's Golden Jubilee," during which Pittsburgh will honor Thomas A. Edison, inventor of the incadescent bulb, and also will pay tribute to four of her greatest industrial pioneers, Henry Heinz, George Westinghouse, Andrew Carnegie and H. C. Frick.

even moved in the stump of that old elm tree. I tell you it's just exactly as it was, every bit of it."

The party moved on toward the laboratory. Coming along at a respectful distance behind were the few persons whom Mr. Ford permitted to enter the grounds through the cordon of guards surrounding it. Newspaper men were excluded today and the only pictures made were those made by Mr. Ford's own staff of photographers.

Sits Alone With His Memories.

Mr. Edison led the way into the laboratory, looked around silently a moment, and then exclaimed afresh over the accuracy of the reproduction.

He walked to a chair at one side, an ordinary old straight-backed chair, a replica of those that stood about the old laboratory for the very occasional sitting down that was done in the days when the electric lamp was being brought into being.

Here occurred an old sidelight on the reaction of humanity to the presence of genius. As Mr. Edison walked to the chair and sat down, his companions in the party remained where they stood, apart from him by a dozen feet.

No word was spoken. It was as if by common consent the spectators instinctively felt awed here in the presence of an old man upon whom the memories of eighty-two years were flooding back.

ROOSEVELT FIELD LIGHTED.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Oct. 20.—Just after sunset here tonight the new and elaborate lighting system of Roosevelt Field was turned on following a brief ceremony, which included the sending of two messages to Thomas A. Edison, who is now at Dearborn to meet President Hoover and Henry Ford in the golden jubilee of the electric light.

One message from the officials of Roosevelt Field was sent as a "tribute of the youngest of the arts, the art of flight."

The other message was unofficial and was the greeting of old pilots at the field, who many times have been forced to make night landings with inadequate landing lights. This message said:

"Roosevelt Field is all lit up; hope you are the same. Better not show this to Henry Ford.

OLD TIMERS."

"SUBWAY Express" couldn't be any harder on the nerves than the "subway rush" is on a suit. What with getting shoved in backwards, and assuming a position that defies all laws of equilibrium but those of a contortionist,—one's suit is likely to come in for a lot of unusual strain.

Notice the tension on the arm and shoulder when you clutch for the strap. Now if the armholes should stretch at this point it will throw the whole suit out of kilter. The coat front will wrinkle and the sleeves hang badly. To prevent this, a very painstaking taping of these armholes is gone through in carefully made suits. It is done in the Sackville $37.50. Of course, this detail isn't apparent to the layman. It would be just about as easy to sell him a suit without this honest workmanship—but it wouldn't bring back a satisfied customer.

BAR ASSOCIATION WILL VIEW DIVORCE

"LAWYER-LOBBYIST" IS HIT

Convention to Be Asked to Consider Legislation to Rid Profession of Self-Styled Attorneys.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 20 (AP).—Lawyers and jurists from all sections of the world jammed hotel lobbies here tonight, prepared for the meetings tomorrow of the nine sections of the American Bar Association.

The association's convention—which is only a ratifying body—meets Wednesday, but the sections, committees and subcommittees begin their deliberations tomorrow on subjects touching every step in life—birth, childhood, education, labor, matrimony and death. The governments of the world will be studied and discussed, and even the laws governing the works of nature—the land, the sea, the air, the birds, the trees, the atoms and the mountains—will come under the scrutiny of the lawyers.

The conference of the bar association's delegates will be tomorrow's most important meeting. James Grafton Rogers of the University of Colorado law school, chairman of the section, will deliver an address on "The Demand for Reorganization of the American Bar."

The remainder of the forenoon will be taken up with committee reports.

To Discuss Divorce Laws.

Lobby conversations tonight indicated that laws governing child labor, minerals, radio and divorce would be to the fore in the sessions. The education of lawyers and admittance to the bar will have a prominent place.

An announcement from Major Julius I. Peyser, president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, that legislation would be sought to restrict the designations "lawyer" and "counselor at law" to bona fide practicing attorneys, gave rise to speculation over possibility of the association seeking to clear the ranks of the legal profession of "lawyer-lobbyists."

Major Peyser will make an effort to get the question before the convention. He said many lobbyists who term themselves lawyers get hearings through the prominence of the profession.

Prohibition Debate Unlikely.

Many delegates did not believe the prohibition question would reach the floor of the convention, as it is contrary to the association's policy to take up political controversies. Other delegates said there was a possibility of the controversy creeping in. The association has a militant wet wing.

The committees on aeronautical law, jurisprudence and law reform, professional ethics, grievances and public utilities will be in session tomorrow.

The National Association of Attorneys General, the Tennessee Bar Association and the National Conference of Referees in Bankruptcy will meet here this week in conjunction with the American Bar Association.

College officials, who expected only one thousand students, now announce that a staff of thirty instructors will be maintained, assisted by lecturers from each of the companies. The training is to be conducted on a three-year plan, classes meeting twice a week for twenty weeks each year.

James W. Good, Secretary of War, was the only Cabinet member in the Presidential party that boarded the special Baltimore & Ohio train. The party included Mrs. Hoover, George Akerson, the President's secretary; Representative Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey, Lieut. Commander Joel T. Boone, the President's physician; Captain Allan Buchanan, naval, and Lieut. Col. C. B. Hodges, military aide; Secret Service men and twenty-six newspaper men accompanied the President.

OHIO RIVER FLEET RACES AGAINST TIME

ON BOARD THE OHIO RIVER STEAMBOAT CINCINNATI, HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Oct. 20.—A crowd estimated at about 20,000 greeted the Cincinnati, flagship of the Ohio River celebration flotilla, when she reached Huntington tonight. They came with a band, red fire and aerial bombs. The fleet was four hours late in arriving here.

Governor William G. Conley, Mayor James Boyce Taylor, and George Puckta, treasurer of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association and former Mayor of Cincinnati, boarded the Cincinnati and made addresses, their voices being carried by amplifiers to the largest throng to visit the waterfront in Huntington's history.

Announcement was made just before the flagship departed that the Greater Pittsburgh had broken a paddle wheel near Parkersburg and had been delayed. Repairs were rushed and the steamboat hoped to catch up with the others before Cincinnati was reached. The fleet is now racing against time in an endeavor to cover 160 miles in time for the opening of the two-day celebration at Cincinnati.

As on the first day of the trip down the river, the Cincinnati has been met with the greatest enthusiasm. Perhaps than can in part be accounted for by an article in a local paper which said that among her passengers were "a majority of the Cabinet, officers, Senators, Governors and whatnot," but the Cabinet officers have gone back to Washington, the Governors are meeting the steamer instead of traveling with it and there are only three Senators.

Last night the tour stopped for about half an hour at Wheeling, W. Va., half a mile up the river, where a number of boats were lighted by numerous candles of red fire. At the municipal wharf were about 1,500 persons who had waited several hours. Mayor A. Y. Beckett came aboard and made a speech.

This morning Parkersburg staged a motor boat parade for the Cincinnati and several thousand persons stood on the banks as she went by.

At Millwood, a few miles up the river, the flagship was saluted by a gayly dressed band, and a bit above Gallipolis a committee headed by Senator Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana went ashore to lay a wreath on the grave of the late John L. Vance, first president of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association.

Members of the Institute of International Law and their wives who are in this country as the guests of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace will be entertained by New York University today at a luncheon in the Gould Memorial Library, University Heights centre. Acting Chancellor William H. Nichols of New York University will make a short address of welcome.

TAKES CITY PLAN CHAIR.

Professor Vincent Hubbard Is Appointed to New School at Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 20.—Professor Henry Vincent Hubbard of the faculty of landscape architecture has been named as the first incumbent of the new Charles D. Norton chair of regional planning at Harvard and will direct the School of City Planning, it was announced at University Hall yesterday. Simultaneously with Professor Hubbard's election the corporation voted the establishment of the school and the establishment of the degree of Master in City Planning.

Preliminary plans for the location at Harvard of the first School of City Planning ever opened in this country were made public in September.

Professor Hubbard is chief editor of City Planning, the official magazine of the profession, and a member of the firm of Olmsted Brothers, landscape architects and city planners.

The degree of Master in City Planning is the first of its kind to be offered by any American university. The new school is an additional unit with the Schools of Architecture and Landscape Architecture, under the faculty of architecture.

REPUBLICANS AID CRAIN.

A large number of enrolled and independent Republicans have been organized into a committee to work for the election of Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, Tammany candidate for District Attorney, it was announced yesterday at the Crain campaign headquarters, 1,465 Broadway. Louis J. Schwartz, for fifteen years a member of the Republican County Committee, heads the group.

The announcement added that Judge Crain had been endorsed by William R. Willcox, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Harry Kopp, formerly a Republican Assemblyman. Mr. Willcox said that he had written a letter of congratulation to Judge Crain, an old friend, but that as a Republican he had declined to join any committee for him.

ALCOHOLIC DEATHS RISE IN DRY STATES

ONLY DECREASE IN MAINE

Report Recalls Opposite View of Proponents of 18th Amendment—Findings Sent to Hoover Board.

The rate of death from alcoholism under national prohibition has increased over the rate under State prohibition in practically every State which had dry laws before the Eighteenth Amendment, according to a survey conducted by the Moderation League, Inc., which forwarded yesterday its findings to President Hoover's Commission on Law Enforcement.

The survey was based on figures obtained from the United States Census Bureau and excluded deaths from wood alcohol or other poison alcohol, which if included, according to the league statement, would raise the rate still higher.

Finds Dry States Not Aided.

Austen G. Fox, chairman of the of the board of the league, in summarizing the findings, asserted that these figures showed clearly failure of fulfillment of one of the hopes of advocates of national prohibition. He said:

"Before national prohibition was adopted, its proponents contended that the prohibition States could not become really dry because many of them had wet neighbors. Only by the adoption of national prohibition, and thus drying up their wet neighbors, it was contended, could the dry States succeed in making themselves dry. The death rates from alcoholism in those States indicate how far this result has been achieved. These figures show that in none of the dry States, with the exception of Maine, has the death rate from alcoholism gone to a lower level than it was under state prohibition. On the contrary, in almost every case where the figures are available, the rate is higher than it was under State prohibition. This means that the expectation that national prohibition would assist the dry States has not been fulfilled; and that, on the contrary, intemperance has increased."

List of Statistics.

The following is the listing of the statistics on alcoholic death rates in States which had dry laws before the Eighteenth Amendment was enacted and in the District of Columbia:

ALABAMA got prohibition in 1915 but the Census Bureau has no figures except for 1925, 1926 and 1927 when they were, respectively, 0.9, 1.8 and 1.1 per 100,000 population.

ARIZONA adopted prohibition in 1914. The only figures are for 1926 and 1927 and are 2.5 and 3.5, respectively.

ARKANSAS got statutory prohibition in 1915 but there are no figures for any year.

COLORADO adopted constitutional prohibition in 1914, effective on January 1, 1916. In 1916, the first year of State prohibition, the rate was 3.0 and it fell steadily to 0.8 in 1919. In 1920, the first year of national prohibition, it went to 0.7. It jumped sharply to 4.2 in 1922 and then sagged to 1.7 in 1925. Since then the trend has been upward, reaching 2.4 in 1927.

FLORIDA voted constitutional prohibition in 1918, effective January 1, 1919. The rate was 1.4 in 1919 and rose to 1.9 the first year of national prohibition. Since then there has been a most pronounced and fairly uniform rise until the figures reached 4.9 in 1927.

GEORGIA got prohibition in 1907. However, the Census Bureau has the rates only for 1922, 1923 and 1924 when they were 2.5, 1.8 and 1.6.

IDAHO adopted statutory prohibition in 1915 but the Census Bureau figures begin in 1922 when they were 2.2. The trend was upward to 3.8 in 1926. In 1927 there was a drop (as in 1924) to 1.9. A drop, or a rise for that matter, in any one year is not significant, especially in a State like Idaho, with a small population and consequently where the yearly fluctuations are apt to be wide.

INDIANA adopted prohibition in 1917, effective April 2, 1918. In 1918, when there were only nine months of prohibition, the rate was 1.2. It fell to 0.8 in 1919 and to 0.5 in 1920. Since that time the trend has been clearly upward. It reached 2.1 in 1927.

IOWA got statutory prohibition in 1915. The figures begin in 1923 with 1.05 and reached 2.2 in 1927.

KANSAS, the second oldest prohibition State, adopted prohibition in 1867, and it is the consensus of opinion that prohibition sentiment is stronger there than in any other State. The first figure is 1.3 for 1914. In 1915 it was 1.2. In 1916 it rose to the war-boom peak of 2.2. We may say parenthetically at this point that 1916 was the peak year for drunkenness in the United States during the decade 1910 to 1920. This is noticeable in all the indices, especially in the death rate from alcoholism for the whole country and in arrests for drunkenness. The reason for this peak is, perhaps, immaterial here. However, it was noticed and commented upon before national prohibition that, other things being equal, there was more drunkenness in boom years than in hard times. It will be recalled that 1916 was a war-boom year. This, in our judgment, accounts for the clearly observable peak of drunkenness in the United States in that year. The following year, 1917, the Kansas rate dropped to 1.0 and in 1918 to 0.8. In 1919 the lowest point of 0.2 was touched. Since then the trend has been upward. In 1926 and 1927 the rates were 1.8 and 2.6, respectively, both of which are higher than the rates under State prohibition, barring only the 1916 war-boom peak.

KENTUCKY voted constitutional prohibition in 1919, effective July 1, 1920. The rate was 0.4 in 1920. Since then the trend has been upward and the figure for 1927 was 2.1.

MAINE, the oldest prohibition State, has had prohibition continuously since 1858. The rate in 1910 was 3.8, reached a minor peak of 4.9 in 1912 and dropped to 3.5 in 1914. In 1916 the war-boom peak was 5.1; then it dropped to 3.0 in 1917, 2.2 in 1918, 1.7 in 1919 and to the lowest point of 1.3 in 1920. In 1921 it rose to 3.1, the highest point under national prohibition. Since then the trend first went downward, then upward and again turned down. In 1927 the rate was 2.1. The average of the ten State prohibition years was 3.51 and in the eight national prohibition years was 2.25. It is clear that, at least so far under national prohibition, the death rate in Maine has been lower than under State prohibition.

MICHIGAN adopted constitutional prohibition, effective on May 1, 1918. In 1918, with only eight months under prohibition, the rate was 2.5. In 1919, the first full year of State prohibition, the rate dropped to 1.1. In 1920 it rose to 1.5 and since then the trend has been upward. In 1927 it was 4.4.

MISSISSIPPI got statutory prohibition in 1908. However the Census Bureau has no rates until 1919 when it was 0.6. It dropped to 0.3 in 1920, since which time the trend has been upward. It was 1.4 in 1927.

MONTANA adopted prohibition in 1916, effective Dec. 31, 1918. In 1919, the first year of State prohibition, the rate was 1.9. In 1920 it was 1.8. Since then the trend has been violently upward. In 1927 it was 8.1.

NEBRASKA adopted prohibition in 1916, but there are no figures until 1920, when the rate was 0.5. Since then the trend has been upward. In 1927 it was 1.5.

NEVADA adopted prohibition in 1918, but there are no rates.

NEW HAMPSHIRE got statutory prohibition in 1917, effective May 1, 1918. In 1918, when there were only eight months of prohibition, the rate was 3.2. In 1919 it fell to 1.6. In 1920, the first year of national prohibition, it rose to 1.8. Since then the trend has been upward and in 1927 the rate was 4.2.

NEW MEXICO adopted constitutional prohibition in 1918, but the Census Bureau has no rates.

NORTH CAROLINA adopted statutory prohibition in 1908, but the first year for which the Census Bureau has figures is 1916. In the war-boom year of 1916 the rate was 1.3. It fell to 0.9 in 1917 and to 0.5 in 1918. Since that time the trend has been upward and the figure in 1927 was 1.3.

NORTH DAKOTA has had constitutional prohibition since 1889, and is the third oldest prohibition State. The Census Bureau has the death rates only for the four years commencing with 1924 as follows: 1.0, 1.1, 1.9 and 0.9.

OHIO adopted constitutional prohibition in 1918, effective May 27, 1919. The rate for 1920 was 1.2. The trend has been upward and in 1927 the rate was 3.2.

OKLAHOMA came into the Union in 1907 with constitutional prohibition. The Census Bureau has no rates.

OREGON adopted constitutional prohibition in 1914, but the first rate is 0.9 in 1918. It dropped to 0.8 in 1919. Since then the trend has been upward. The rate in 1927 was 2.4.

SOUTH CAROLINA got statutory prohibition, effective Dec. 31, 1915. In the war-boom year of 1916 the rate was 1.2. It dropped to 0.8 in 1918, which it maintained for three years. The trend then started upward and the rate in 1927 was 1.5.

TENNESSEE adopted statutory prohibition in 1909, but the first rate is 1.0 in 1917. The next three years the rate was 0.9. Then the trend went up, and the rate in 1927 was 1.4.

UTAH got statutory prohibition, effective Aug. 1, 1917. The rate in 1918 and 1919 was 0.7. An upward trend took its rate to 2.5 in 1926. In 1927 it fell to 1.5. It is too early to tell whether this means a downward trend or whether it is merely a wide yearly fluctuation in a State with a small population.

VIRGINIA voted prohibition in 1914, effective Nov. 1, 1916. From 1917 to 1920 the rate varied from 1.0 to 0.3. Then the trend turned upward and the rate in 1927 was 1.9.

WASHINGTON adopted statutory prohibition in 1914, effective Jan. 1, 1916. In that year the rate was 2.8, fell to 1.8 in 1917 and rose to 2.4 in 1918. Since then the trend has been upward, the rate in 1927 being 3.3.

WEST VIRGINIA voted constitutional prohibition in 1912. The Census Bureau rate began in 1925 with 2.0. The trend is upward, reaching 2.8 in 1927.

WYOMING adopted constitutional prohibition in 1918. The first rate was 3.9 in 1922. Though fluctuating widely the trend has been upward, the rate in 1927 being 5.8.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA prohibition went into effect Nov. 1, 1917. In 1918 the rate was 0.9, in 1919, 1.6 and in 1920, 1.1. The trend has been upward, the rate being 2.6 in 1927.

CALLES'S PLANS INDEFINITE.

He Says Return to Mexico Depends on Health and Doctors.

PARIS, Oct. 20 (AP).—Former President Calles of Mexico, while he did not deny today reports that he planned to return to Mexico before the Presidential elections on Nov. 17, said his plans were indefinite.

"I do not yet know when I can return to Mexico," he said. "That depends on my health and on obtaining permission from my doctors."

General Calles would discuss neither his plans nor his state of health, but from friends it was learned that all have been encouraged by the gain he has made during the past few months. He is still receiving treatment at a private hospital here.

FEDERAL DRY CASES SET NEW HIGH MARK

laws, some contending that they represented a speeding up of activities by the enforcement units and others that they showed the impracticability of effective enforcement.

Among the outstanding facts, however, was that the task of the government enforcement agencies was growing more so rather than less onerous, with the number of cases nearly doubled since 1921, the first full year in which the prohibition laws were in effect.

The department made no comment upon such controversial phases as were presented by the figures in its review. Its only statement concerning the increase in the number of cases follows:

"Statistics showing the rise in the number of prohibition cases instituted in the different districts show that beginning with the first full year under the operations of that law, 1921, there were 29,114 cases; in 1922 the total increased to 34,984; in 1923 there was a further increase up to 49,021, in 1924 there was a sharp decline in the number of cases, the total for that year being 45,878. In 1925, however, the total number of cases was 50,743, or more than a thousand in excess of the total for 1923 and about 4,000 in excess of the total for 1924.

"Again, in 1926, there was a drop in the total number of cases to 44,492, and a still further drop in 1927 to 40,709. In 1928, however, there was an increase of more than 15,000, compared with the previous year, or a total for that year of 55,729, which was the largest total for any year up to that time. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, however, there was an increase of about 1,000 cases, compared with 1928, the total for the last fiscal year being 56,786."

The department made some comparisons of fines assessed in various districts.

"The total for the northern district of New York for the last fiscal year," the department said, "was $420,927, as against $451,424 in the previous fiscal year. However, in the eastern district of Kentucky, where the total number of cases instituted during the last year was 2,945, as against 2,980 in the previous fiscal year, the aggregate fines assessed last year, $444,712, was about $4,000 in excess of the amount assessed for the greater number of cases in the previous year."

The smallest numbers of cases instituted outside those of the districts of Alaska and Porto Rico were in Kansas, North Dakota, Vermont and Utah. In Kansas there were twenty-eight cases as against fourteen in the previous year, and the amount of fines increased from $300 to $2,985.

In North Dakota there were forty cases in 1929, as against fifty-eight in the previous year, and in Vermont the total number of cases was seventy-four, as against fifty-seven in 1928. Utah had sixty-three cases in 1929, as against 122 in 1928.

In stating that the fines throughout the country were $7,476,300.40 in 1929, against $7,303,563.28 in 1928, the department said the totals were accurate, despite the fact that addition of the figures by States in the announcement gave a slightly different result. The inaccuracy, it was said at the department, probably was due to an error in the figures for some individual districts, made in the preparation of the table for publication.

STOCKS BELIEVED REMOVED

Authorities Reported to Have Found Only Six Cases of Contraband at Mansion.

Leaders of the gigantic liquor smuggling ring which the Federal authorities sought to smash with thirty-five simultaneous raids in New Jersey, New York City and on Long Island last Wednesday, knew at least two weeks beforehand that prohibition agents were hot on their trail, it was learned yesterday at Highlands, N. J., supposed centre of the ring's activities.

At the Mansion, former home of Oscar Hammerstein, near Highlands, which was sold last year and became the syndicate's headquarters, Louis Caruso, who is free in $15,000 bail under indictment as a member of the ring, was found yesterday afternoon. In an interview, Caruso, who had been arrested at the Mansion, declared that the whole thing had been a mistake, the wrong house had been raided, and his own indictment had been a case of mistaken identity.

Three Agents "Spotted."

A month before the raids, it was learned, three special agents went to Highlands and stopped at a Summer boarding house on the road leading from Highlands to the Mansion. The agents stayed three weeks. At least a week before they left, the three strangers, made more conspicuous because the Summer season at Highlands had already ended and the Summer population left, had been "spotted."

This was thought to have been largely responsible for the fact that very little liquor was found at the Mansion, or for that matter in the thirty-four other raids. It was also thought that this warning of danger might have resulted in great caution in all operations of the ring and to have had some bearing as well on the escape of the Shawnee, one of the syndicate's ocean-going ships, which slipped away to sea through a cordon of four Coast Guard destroyers Wednesday night.

How much liquor the raiding agents seized has not been revealed by the authorities. Repeated inquiries since Wednesday have brought the reply that the check-up has not yet been completed. It was reported yesterday at Highlands, however, that the raid on the Mansion, where the authorities expected to make their biggest haul, had netted only five or six cases. Prohibition Administrator William J. Calhoun in Newark, who organized the raids, said Thursday that he hoped to uncover a hidden cache somewhere on the grounds around the Mansion.

Grounds Comprise Six Acres.

The grounds, comprising about six acres, are situated between two parallel roads about 200 feet apart. The road in front ends just beyond the property, thus leaving three avenues of departure from the premises. With two weeks in which to remove whatever liquor might have been stored there, and three routes to use, a successful reduction of stocks was not difficult.

The house itself is a substantial, but not elaborate, frame building of three stories. It is unfurnished, except for two bedrooms upstairs, a living room downstairs and a very business-like office in the rear of the ground floor, with desks and telephones, which is in strange contrast to the bareness of the main part of the building.

Caruso, who has been on the premises almost constantly since his release in bail at Trenton Thursday, exhibited the features of the mansion yesterday. According to his own account, he is a contractor in Atlantic Highlands, and is now engaged in constructing a large brick garage on the property, as well as making interior alterations in the house. Asked who was the owner who had engaged him, he said that he "was not supposed to talk."

"They just got the wrong house," he said. "And I think there must be somebody else named Louis Caruso. I've never been called 'Louis the Wop.' I've been in the contracting business here for ten years. However, maybe this will turn out to be a good ad for my contracting business."

Found Sitting on Steps.

Caruso is young, clean cut and blond. He was sitting on the porch steps when a reporter approached him, and on learning the business of the stranger he was courteous and, on most topics, open in his conversation.

A deep freshly dug hole gaped in the centre of the lawn near the house.

"Is that the cave where the agents searched for liquor?" he was asked.

"Come over and look at it," Caruso said, leading the way. "It's where we are setting the tank for the oil burner we are installing in the cellar. And come over here to the tennis court. The State troopers drilled holes all over it, thinking that the new dirt on top might conceal something."

He led the way to the tennis court and pointed to one large hole about three feet deep, which he explained the troopers had dug when a pipe they drove into the ground struck something hard. The hard substance proved to be a rock.

After a tour of the grounds Caruso volunteered to show the house, taking the reporter all over it, from cellar to attic. He seemed to take pride in the hard wood floors, elaborate bathrooms and other improvements which were being installed. In the rear of the house he took from a carton a large floodlight, which he said was similar to three which the agents had taken away. He said they were to have been used on the tennis court for playing at night.

Mayor Protests Notoriety.

Mayor George W. Hardy of Highlands, who is also station agent in the town for the Jersey Central Railroad as well as president of the Board of Education, said when seen at his home yesterday that the notoriety resulting from the raids, five of which were in or near Highlands, had given the town a bad name, which actual conditions did not justify.

That something unusual had been going on at The Mansion for the past year has not been unknown to the townspeople, although they apparently had little idea of what that something was. H. H. Johnson of 50 Cornwell Street, Highlands, who operates a taxicab service, said that twice last Winter he had driven to the place two men whom he has since identified among those arrested as members of the ring. He said they had told him a poker game was being run there, and he had supposed that to be the case.

The general report in the town with respect to the majority of those indicted was that they were bootleggers in a small way, but there seems to have been little idea that any major smuggling operations had centred in the town.

Mayor Hardy was bitter in his feeling that the town had suffered unjustly. He said Highlands, which has a permanent population of 1,800, is almost wholly dependent on its business as a Summer resort. Last Summer, he said, was the best season since eight years ago, at which time the prevalence of bootlegging had ruined the Summer resort business.

Mr. Hardy explained that it was quite possible that the town had numbered some of the members of the syndicate among its residents. But that the ring's actual operations had centred there he regarded as ridiculous.

Change in Bootlegging Methods.

"Bootleggers can't operate here today," he said, "because of the change in bootlegging methods. Eight years ago small speedboats, carrying only about a hundred cases were used, and they came up the Shrewsbury from Sandy Hook all the time. Why I've seen the stuff unloaded, and carted away in open trucks in broad daylight. The bootleggers in those days had just started, and most of them never had any money before. So they used to run wild as soon as they made a little money, getting drunk and shooting up the town. This was like a border town in those days, but it's not that way today.

"They can't use the river today. Now they use big boats which can carry a great many cases. There's no traffic on the river, and if a working boat tried to come up it would be noticed at once. There are three Coast Guard stations right in sight of the town. Two are down by Sandy Hook, where boats would have to pass, and the third is right across the river, in full view of the whole waterfront. The change in method has taken the bootleggers away from here.

"Why eight years ago it was a common thing to have several gun fights in the streets in one night. I remember one time the bootleggers thought a man here had told on them, and they put two charges of buckshot right through the wall of his house the next night. They were wild fellows then. But the men in it today, why if you met them on the street you would think they were Sunday school teachers. They aren't taking any chances."

Mayor Hardy said that his election last January had been on a "square deal" issue. He said the bootleggers had spent hundreds of dollars to defeat him. After the election count it was found he had won by five votes in a total poll of more than 1,000. The bootleggers, he said, put up the money for a recount, so anxious were they to keep him out of office. After the recount Mayor Hardy's plurality had increased to six votes.

Are MULLINS ENCLOSURES a Luxury?

Quite the contrary! They are a positive economy indeed, it actually costs less to have them than to do without.

If you are depriving your home of the decorative advantages of Mullins Radiator Enclosures, as a measure of economy, you will be interested to know that your supposed economy is really an extravagance.

Mullins Enclosures prevent streaks of grime on walls, draperies or pictures, which only complete redecorating can entirely remove. This alone saves from 50 to 75 per cent of the annual cost of cleaning and re-decorating. By humidifying the air, they safeguard the family's health and prevent cracking and warping of furniture and floors. The cost of heating is naturally reduced because the properly humidified air is discharged by the enclosure at the breathing level of the room instead of rising in a column, direct to the ceiling, as is the case with the uncovered radiator.

Add these savings—spread them over but a very few years—it will be quite apparent that if economy is your aim, the sooner you install Mullins Enclosures, the greater will be the economy.

The design? our new reproduction oriental rugs are patterned from famous museum pieces of time-honoured oriental weaves.

The color? our new reproduction oriental rugs are in the same mellowed colors as the loveliest of antique oriental carpets.

The lustre? some of our reproductions have the silky shimmer of Persian weaves, others the dull antique beauty of the oldest rugs.

The price? herein they do differ. Due to the fact that our oriental reproductions are machine-loomed, they may be had at a cost greatly below that of hand-woven orientals of equal merit.

VOTES TO COMPLETE JERSEY'S SUPER-ROAD

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 20.—The finishing links for New Jersey's projected super-highway, which is to connect the entrance to the Holland Tunnel with Camden, were voted by the New Jersey State Highway Commission last Tuesday when it approved plans for new bridges across the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers and a viaduct across the New Jersey meadows, it was revealed here tonight by Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chairman of the Highway Commission.

The cost of the two new bridges and the viaduct has been estimated at slightly in excess of $19,000,000. They will complete an arterial highway 50 feet wide and almost 100 miles long, which will offer a thoroughfare practically from New York to Philadelphia. It has been designed to skirt the cities and towns along the way and thus avoid traffic congestion.

Part of the highway leading from Camden north already has been completed and a bridge across the Raritan River just below New Brunswick is now nearing completion. Highway engineers and traffic students from all over the world have evinced keen interest in the project and hailed it for its "bold far-sightedness."

$6,000,000 SOUGHT BY CANCER HOSPITAL

$2,000,000 FOR RESEARCH

New Methods of Diagnosis and Treatment and Theories of Cause to Be Tested.

A public appeal for $6,000,000 for the New York Skin and Cancer Hospital will be made by a committee of fifty men and women, of which James G. Blaine, president of the Fidelity Trust Company, will be chairman, according to an announcement yesterday by Ancell H. Ball, president of the board of governors of the hospital.

The fund will be used primarily to remodel and equip the building formerly occupied by the Lying-in Hospital, Second Avenue and Seventeenth Street, which recently has been purchased by the New York Skin and Cancer Hospital. Two million dollars of the fund will be used to promote research in the cause and treatment of cancer and other skin diseases.

The executive committee of the fund committee includes Waldron P. Belknap, John Howes Barton, Benjamin B. Thayer, Philip LeBoutillier, George Barton French, Harris A. Dunn, Franklin Simon and Mr. Ball.

Commenting on the increase in the prevalence of cancer, and the need for research in that field, Mr. Blaine said:

"The foundation of all future successful treatments for cancer is based on research. The hospital hopes to secure a sufficient fund to devote to the testing of new methods of diagnosis and treatment, new theories of the causes of disease and the relations of varying symptoms to each other. By the concentration of cancer material in the New York Skin and Cancer Hospital experts will be able to develop theories from what they actually see. The hospital has already made valuable contributions to the knowledge of the cause and treatment of certain forms of eczema, of the effect of ultra-violet light and radiant energy on the skin and of the symptoms of obscure types of ring worm infection. With the acquisition of adequate, well equipped laboratories it is hoped that important discoveries will be made regarding the cause and treatment of cancer."

Mr. Blaine also described the hardships due to cramped quarters now undergone by the New York Skin and Cancer Hospital in its present home at Second Avenue and Nineteenth Street.

"This hospital is caring for thousands of sufferers from cancer and skin diseases in a plant that presents every conceivable difficulty with regard to lighting, ventilation and sanitation," he said. "The main building, erected in 1898, has become the center of a rambling line of old dwelling houses which have been pressed into service. Whenever the hospital became so jammed with patients that it bulged, the harassed board scraped together a little money and bought a neighboring dwelling. Now the plant consists of eight such houses and two old stores, in addition to the main building. In spite of lack of clinical space, 150,000 treatments were given last year in the out patient department, or 44 per cent of the total number of visits to the nine largest clinics in greater New York. It would appear that during 1929 these treatments will exceed 300,000.

"The New York Skin and Cancer Hospital has been very fortunate in securing the well constructed, generously proportioned Lying-in Hospital at Stuyvesant Square, built through the generosity of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, which in addition to providing ample working space affords the advantage of being in the same neighborhood as the present property."

Deplores Stressing of Salvation.

The congregation of All Souls' Unitarian Church worshiped yesterday in the MacDowell Club, 166 East Seventy-third Street. The sermon was preached by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Minot Simons. Christianity, he said, had inspired great works for human well-being in the past and was destined to accomplish even greater things in the future. Too much, however, of Christianity's spiritual energy is "wasted on unrealities and perverted by a false emphasis on getting saved in the next world," he asserted.

LIBRARIAN HOLDS BOOK CLUBS USEFUL

BUT ASSAILS THEIR CLAIMS

Selling Points Called Misleading and Demagogic—New Interest Seen In Publishers' Biographies.

A kind word for the various "book clubs," tempered with a mild rebuke for their advertisements, was made by Roger Hawson, librarian of Columbia University, in his annual report to President Nicholas Murray Butler, made public yesterday. They are, on the whole, he noted, "better and wiser" than the announcements of their aims and activities.

Regarding the criticism that has been leveled at the disseminators of recommended books in wholesale quantities, the librarian said that "jealousy and prejudice" have played a large part in it, and that "the book clubs have very certainly assisted in the broader circulation of some excellent books at prices that were lower than they would have been if there had been no such thing as book clubs."

"One thing continually stressed in the advertisements of one of the clubs is the selling points: (1) that you get the book of the month at once; (2) that you become an 'insider in constant touch with the latest and best.

"The emphasis placed on the first point tends to be misleading. The book of the month is not, and cannot be, the book of the month in any such sense as today's paper is the paper of today. Today's paper was not yesterday's and will not be tomorrow's, and with this the production and life of any book of the months is in entire contrast.

"It has taken months of care and preparation on the part of the printer, and years of thoughtful writing and rewriting on the part of the author. And no one is declassed who reads the book of the month three months, or three years, after it has been issued. The second appeal, to be an 'insider,' is insincere and demagogic in the worst sense. It is really based on the desire to join the experts."

Aside from the agitation over the clubs, Mr. Hawson said that the other of two outstanding developments in the publishing press during the past year has been the discovery that "publishers have lives."

"Authors have always had lives," he said, "and the profession of author is a much later profession than that of publisher. The writing of books has only in comparatively recent times been more than a second string to a bow that was already sufficiently well strung financially, and it has preserved the amateur spirit almost unto an anachronism.

"Perhaps this has helped the interest in their lives. This year has seen the biographies of several of the larger publishers, and they have assuredly justified their publication."

TO DEDICATE LABORATORY.

N. Y. U. SAFETY STUDY GETS SCHOLARSHIPS

CALL ISSUED FOR LEADERS

University, Museum of Safety and Society for Blindness Prevention Appeal for Aides.

Ten free scholarships for courses in accident prevention and the waiving of academic requirements for students undertaking training as public and industrial safety directors, providing they exhibit qualities of leadership, were announced by New York University yesterday through Rufus D. Smith, director of the extension division.

The announcement was made coincident with a call for "men with qualities of leadership for executive positions in the safety movement," issued jointly by the university, the American Museum of Safety and the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

The scholarships were donated by Arthur Williams, president of the museum, who named ten organizations that may designate one candidate each. These are:

The Merchants Association of New York.
The New York State Chamber of Commerce.
The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce.
The Queens Chamber of Commerce.
The Bronx Board of Trade.
The industrial education department of the Y. M. C. A., New York.
The New York City Continuation Schools.
The New York City Realty Board.
The General Contractors Association of America.

The scholarship awards by Mr. Williams, the announcement said, were influenced by the constantly increasing toll of accidents, which claimed 97,000 lives in the United States last year. The number of accidents in New York State, it was added, increased by 10,000 in the first seven months of this year over the like period in 1928.

Instruction in safety will be given in evening classes at the Washington Square branch of the university by the following instructors:

C. W. PRICE, consulting safety engineer and former general manager of the National Safety Council.
DR. GEORGE E. PAYNE, Assistant Dean, School of Education, New York University.
W. GRAHAM COLE, director of safety, Metropolitan Insurance Company.
S. S. CARSTENS, safety engineer, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

The courses will include practical instruction in accident control in industry; public safety, the uses of educational data and publicity and the other chief branches of this work.

DEWEY AN OPTIMIST ON 70TH BIRTHDAY

CITES YOUTH'S LIBERALISM

New Generation Less Nationalistic, He Asserts—Finds a Growing Appreciation of Esthetics.

At 70 John Dewey, leading American philosopher, remains an optimist. Celebrating his birthday quietly yesterday at the home of his son, Frederick A. Dewey, at Great Neck, L. I., Professor Dewey assured inquirers that the trend of human thought was toward clarification and that individuals were developing the fruits of a more rounded experience.

Although at a luncheon in his honor on Saturday he condemned the present-day emphasis upon "externalism," particularly the search for happiness by the attainment of money, Dr. Dewey was disposed yesterday to suggest the likelihood of a change. Money will continue to be an important incentive to human action, he indicated, but other motives, including the uses which money may be made to serve, will play an expanding rôle in conduct.

The optimistic portents of improvements were found by Dr. Dewey in the increasing group means of experience and self-expression for individuals, a more liberal attitude upon the part of the young and a growing esthetic appreciation.

"In the informal organizations for discussion and action individuals who have felt dwarfed by the size of things are achieving confidence and pointing a direction to their activities," he said. "The younger generation, too, is more open-minded on international and racial questions. It is much less nationalistic. There appears to be also a broadening diffusion of the enjoyment of art and esthetics and a comprehension that machinery is not the sum of human thought and action."

Mr. Dewey spent the day not only in the company of his son Frederick, but with his brother, Professor Davis R. Dewey of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, noted economist, and Mrs. Dewey, his sister-in-law, and Mr. and Mrs. Sabino L. Dewey, son and daughter-in-law.

Dr. Dewey was born in Burlington, Vt. He is head of the philosophy department of Columbia University. Author of philosophical works, publicist on current matters and teacher, he was hailed at public functions on Friday and Saturday as "the spokesman of our age," the foremost of American philosophers and the developer of modern trends in education.

JOHNS HOPKINS ENDS LAW RESEARCH SURVEY

Finds 1,200 Studies Under Way in Nation, With Crime the Subject of 107 of Them.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 20.—The first general stock-taking by the Johns Hopkins Institute of Law in the field of legal research has been completed as a part of its work in formulating research plans for the future.

Approximately 1,200 investigations into various branches of law and its related fields are under way throughout the country, according to the survey made under the direction of Dr. Herman Oliphant of the Institute faculty.

The subject of crime leads in the number of investigations falling in a particular field with a total of 107 projects reported, while taxation ranks second with ninety-one studies.

Everything from bail bonds to bank robberies is passing under the eyes of research workers in Chicago, twenty of the crime investigations being focused on that city.

Approximately 150 institutions and organizations, including sixty-eight universities and sixty-seven foundations, are engaged in some form of legal research, according to the survey. Research carried out by law faculties is chiefly the preparation of law books and writings on legal doctrine, while the bulk of the work of foundations and appointed committees consists of surveys and investigations.

WOMAN LAWYER TO TEACH.

Dr. Lewinson to Give Lecture Course at Hunter College.

The status, rights and duties of women under the law will be the subject of a series of lectures by Dr. Ruth Lewinson, trustee of Hunter College and member of the Board of Higher Education of the City of New York. They will be given in the Trial Room of the Bar Association at 36 West Forty-fourth Street on ten consecutive Monday afternoons, beginning today, from 3:30 to 5 o'clock.

The course, approved by the board of superintendents and credited as a fifteen-hour unit for teacher credits in the schools, is intended exclusively for non-lawyers. A basic understanding of a wide variety of legal problems is the aim. Subjects to be discussed include the development of legal institutions, domestic relations contracts, methods of doing business, real estate and negotiable paper, sales and agency, wills and estates, taxes, insurance, negligence, slander, libel, fraud and civic responsibility.

Dr. Lewinson is a member of the committee on legal education of the New York County Lawyers' Association and chairman of the division of adult education of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs.

BROADWAY GROUP TO START BIG DRIVE

100 WORKERS TO ORGANIZE

Will Form 31 Committees to Make 2,500 Visits to Prospects—More Funds Needed.

With its goal set at 1,000 new members and a greatly increased income, the Broadway Association announced yesterday that its most ambitious campaign for a larger membership and a fuller treasury would start tomorrow evening. More than 100 of New York's business men, who have pledged themselves to give four full mornings to the membership work, will meet at the Hotel Astor and organize thirty-one membership campaign groups to receive instructions from the association's president, Dr. John A. Harriss.

Following the meeting at the Astor the groups will go out in quest of new members and will report results at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor. No less than 2,500 visits to prospective new members will be made in the four-day campaign.

"It is a real compliment to any man, no matter what his standing in the business world may be, to be asked to affiliate himself with the membership of the Broadway Association," Dr. Harriss said. "More active than it has ever been in its long period of service to Broadway and to New York, the Broadway Association has a perfect right to expect those whose interests on Broadway are concerned, and who have not heretofore taken cognizance of the constructive work of the Broadway Association, to ally themselves with the association and support its program."

CLEAN-UP BY STATE IMPENDS IN HURLEY

HURLEY, Wis., Oct. 20 (AP).—A threat of State discipline tonight silenced the roaring gaiety of Hurley, "bad boy" town of the Middle West.

"Saloons were darkened," "temporarily," their owners said, "until this blows over." For the second time in three years they learned that Wisconsin is considering a clean-up of Hurley, where the frontier makes its last stand. The hint came from Governor Kohler yesterday that unless conditions were improved he would take drastic action.

Raids and clean-ups are no novelty to this State-line town of 4,000. They have come with increased frequency these last few years, both by Federal and State authorities. Padlocks have been snapped on, but new places have opened to supply lumberjacks and miners, who find in Hurley their recreation ground.

Shootings, stabbings and a "rum rebellion" which drew national attention have marked a turbulent career extending from the seventies, when pioneers opened up the pine woods and the rich iron ore deposits of Northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

STOLEN GUN KILLED WOMAN.

Weapon Used in Greenburg Murder Taken From a Tailor.

GREENBURG, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Mrs. Elsa Marshall, who was murdered in a lonely spot near the estate of Henry Kelly Jr. several weeks ago, was killed with a shotgun stolen from Nicholas Romanos, New York tailor, it was learned today when Romanos was questioned by Sheriff Thomas Underhill and Deputy Sheriff Cherico here. Romanos said that his Summer cottage near the spot where the young woman's body was found had been broken into and that several articles, including the shotgun, had been stolen.

The gun was one of the few remaining clues, and Romanos was allowed to go after he had given a full account of his movements and the burglary of the cottage had been verified.

Mrs. Marshall was the wife of John Marshall, butler in the Kelly home. Shortly after her body had been found in a clump of bushes two negroes were held as suspects. They told of having seen another negro running with a shotgun in his hands. The police attempted vainly to track the murderer with bloodhounds.

DEDICATE ADDITIONS TO THE FARM SCHOOL

SCHLESINGER HEADS BOARD

Administration Building, Memorial Gate and Highway System Are Officially Opened.

Special to The New York Times.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Oct. 20.—Announcement was made today at the annual harvest festival and pilgrimage to the National Farm School near here of the appointment of Louis Schlesinger, philanthropist, of Newark, as chairman of the national committee of the school to succeed Abraham Erlanger of New York, leading benefactor of the school, who died two weeks ago.

Today's ceremonies were featured by the dedication of a new $75,000 administration and farm mechanics building, the dedication of a memorial gateway entrance and a system of interior highways and a memorial service to Abraham Erlanger.

Several thousand persons from New York and Philadelphia attended the exercises today to honor the founder. Rabbi Joseph L. Krauskopf of Philadelphia, who started the school in 1896 with eight students, one building and a capital of $5,000.

Today the school has resources of $1,500,000 and an 1,100-acre plant with many buildings. There is a student body of 159, and city boys are given a three-year course in scientific and practical agriculture without charge.

Rabbi Wise Unable to Attend.

Owing to illness at the last minute, Rabbi Stephen F. Wise of New York City, who was to have made the principal address, was unable to be present.

Among those present were Sidney and Milton Erlanger of New York, nephews of the deceased philanthropist. A tribute was paid to their uncle by Joseph Hagedorn of Philadelphia, vice president of the school, in a memorial address.

"Mr. Erlanger exemplified to the students and to the world at large that he was in sympathy with the vision of the founder of the National Farm School," Mr. Hagedorn said. "He was the Farm School's largest benefactor. His heart and soul were in doing good for his fellow-man."

In his annual address President Altman said in part:

"The greatest need of American agriculture is more effective organization. The farmer must use his head with his hands. Modern machine methods must be adopted.

"Agriculture, notwithstanding public opinion's inherent unfavorable attitude, has made greater strides under adverse conditions than any other industry. There is no more depression in agriculture than in any other industry. Farming is, and must continue to be, an individualistic business of small units and independent ownership."

Harriman's Expected to Receive Big Electrification Award.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Oct. 20.—It is likely that a large electrification concession, after all, will be granted to the American firm of Harriman's owing to the efforts of Warsaw representatives of the Harriman interests, who continued privately the negotiations with the Polish Government after they had announced it was the intention of the head of the New York firm to withdraw its offer.

The Ministry of Public Works and a special committee have drawn up new conditions for investing more than $100,000,000. The terms call for lowering of the price of current after the electrification of all cities in the concession territory within ten years. These conditions are said to have been accepted in principle by Harriman's and official conversations will be renewed soon.

PRINCE WILL MEET VETERANS AT FETE

To Be at Armistice Celebration of British Legion—V. C.'s Shy on Bid to Dinner.

LONDON, Oct. 20 (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales, who will represent the King at the service before the Cenotaph on Armistice Day, will again attend the celebration at Albert Hall on the evening of Nov. 11, which will be under the presidency of Earl Jellicoe, head of the British Legion of Ex-Service Men.

There is still a certain shyness among Victoria Cross holders in connection with the dinner to be given in the Parliament Building on Nov. 9, when the Prince will preside. Thus far 185 V. C.'s have indicated their desire to attend and this figure represents only a comparatively small proportion of the number of V. C.'s still living.

Many causes doubtless contribute to the unwillingness of some of the holders to appear, but there seems no reason to think that poverty plays any conspicuous part, as has been asserted. In any event, the British Legion, which is responsible for all arrangements, has already received $3,500 toward the expenses of paying the way to London for those V. C.'s unable to pay for the trip themselves. Furthermore, the railways and the motor bus companies have offered free transportation.

The Danish Club of London is bringing Lieutenant T. Dinesen, now in Denmark, who won the V. C. with the Forty-second Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, a unit from Quebec Province.

Stillman Back From Alaskan Hunt.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 20 (AP).—James A. Stillman, New York financier, returned from Alaska yesterday after a big game hunt lasting several weeks. He was accompanied by J. H. Burrell, also of New York. Another sportsman to return from the North was Harry Whitney of Philadelphia, who, in addition to hunting, made a number of films for the Academy of Natural Science.

The IRVING PLAN
now offers Investment Management
★
A tested method, long successful, linked with Irving Trust Company's world-wide service resources

TO MEET THE PROBLEM OF THE INVESTOR

SAFE and profitable investment is becoming increasingly difficult under modern business conditions. Securities in great variety and volume are being offered and traded in at values difficult for the individual to appraise.

Financial data are so voluminous as to prove bewildering to the investor. In the sound management of investments, proper diversification in well-selected holdings and continuous, expert supervision are essential.

Results of a Survey

An exhaustive survey was undertaken by the Irving Trust Company to determine how it might most effectively broaden its services in this direction. As a result the Irving Investors Management Co., Inc., was formed to continue activities originated, and methods employed with noteworthy success for about five years, by the Investment Managers Company.

To maintain a cardinal feature of this continuing activity—its exclusive devotion to the management of investment funds in the sole interest of investors—it is separately incorporated. The former personnel continues; to their experience is added the Irving's investment and banking experience and its world-wide connections.

How the Plan Works

By this method investors—individuals, corporations or institutions—create, in effect, separate trusts for such portions of their resources as they wish to place under management. These trusts are collectively administered for more effective supervision as a single well-diversified Investment Fund in which each investor retains a clearly defined individual interest which he may readily withdraw.

Reports—Fees

Each year the investor receives a separate report of his individual participation in the fund and a financial report of the entire fund, including a complete list of securities held.

For the entire investment service the only charge to the investor is a fixed management fee.

From one point of view this is a departure in bank practice; from another it is but the expansion of existing trust, custodian and investment services into a comprehensive Plan, whereby various types of investment needs may be met with the greatest degree of economy possible under the special circumstances of the investor.

There are now two Investment Funds open, one providing for income and one for accumulation. Full details may be obtained—including the earning history of each Fund—at any Office of the Irving Trust Company.

AUTOS KILL FIVE; 2 DIE OF INJURIES

BROOKLYN BOY RUN DOWN

Four persons were killed yesterday and two more died of injuries previously received in automobile accidents on highways outside of New York City. In Brooklyn a 15-year-old boy was killed by a motorcycle.

Henry Dollman, 40 years old, a decorating contractor of North Pelham, was killed early yesterday when another car side-swiped that driven by his wife, in which he was riding. His skull was crushed by the roof of the overturned automobile. At Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., Albert Armstrong, 27, of Oyster Bay, drove into a tree on the North Shore Boulevard and was killed instantly.

Henry Rus, 29, was crossing the street in front of his home at 2,575 Northern Boulevard, Great Neck, L. I., when a car driven by Henry Masopust of 2,360 Single Street, Long Island City, ran him down, killing him yesterday afternoon. Masopust was placed under subpoena to appear before the Nassau County Grand Jury at Mineola Tuesday.

Frank Rupakas, 3 years old, of 197 Dukes Street, Kearny, N. J., was hit by an automobile while playing near his home last night. The driver of the car took the boy to the West Hudson Hospital, where the child died. The car was later found by the police abandoned in Harrison. Bernard Carlson of 9 Beech Street, reported to the police that he was driving the car when the child was struck. While he was in the police station his friend, Nils Erikson, of 13 Trinity Place, came in and declared that he had driven the car. Erikson is being held on a technical charge of manslaughter, and Carlson on a charge of making a false statement to the police.

Charles Boston, 62 years old, of 1,508 Vine Street, Philadelphia, and Robert Moore, 13, of 365 Elm Street, Kearny, N. J., were the two who died from injuries received when struck by cars on Saturday. Moore was playing football in a street near his home, while Boston was visiting a friend in Berlin, N. J.

The car that struck Boston escaped, but John Powell of 2,338 South Nineteenth Street, Philadelphia, was arrested as a suspect as he drove across the Delaware River Bridge at Camden, since his windshield was broken and spattered with blood, and he admitted having "struck something." He was held in $1,000 bail by Justice of Peace William Duncan of Berlin on a charge of manslaughter.

Jonas Green, 15, was playing on the sidewalk near his home, at 5,006 Eleventh Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday noon when the motorcycle of Emil Delmonico, 18, of 1,070 Forty-seventh Street, Brooklyn, ran over the curb and knocked him down. He was at first thought to be only slightly injured and was sent home. Later he was taken to the United Israel-Zion Hospital, where he died last night. Delmonico is being questioned by the police.

Child Put Water on Stove.

Apparently Ethel, whose duty it was to get up first to close the windows and put on the water for coffee and oatmeal, slipped back into bed yesterday morning to wait for it to boil. She went to sleep while waiting. Apparently it takes a great deal of water for such a large family, for the pot was three-quarters full even after boiling over enough to put out the flame.

Father Barely Saved by Phone Call.

As the gas spread through the Cavanagh flat the impatience of the employer who wanted to play golf almost saved the Cavanagh family. At 10 A. M., when the chauffeur was half an hour late, Mrs. Donahue on the floor below received her first telephone call from the employer, who wanted some one to make sure Cavanaugh had not overslept.

Mrs. Donahue sent her daughter Virginia, 10, upstairs to knock on the Cavanagh door. According to Mrs. Donahue, Virginia knocked a long while before deciding the Cavanaghs must all be out. According to the police, it was probably this knocking that got Ethel out of bed and almost to the door.

It was not until she received a second impatient message from the golfing employer, who was then an hour late, that Mrs. Donohue, who weighs about 200, went upstairs herself and asked the neighbor across the hall to go into the Cavanagh flat through the fire-escape window in order to wake the chauffeur up and save his job.

Mrs. Donohue made it plain that even in a section of the city where families are so numerous that one neighbor had little time to bother with another's troubles the Cavanagh family was known sympathetically. "He was a fine father for those children," she said. Others stared somewhat terrified at the gas stove and murmured, "God have mercy." Police Commissioner Whalen, who arrived with the homicide squad, shook his head as he looked at the dead father among the children in whom he had invested all his hard work and hopes of the future. His youngest daughter, Rose, who so resembled him, was lying beside him, and her profile seemed a younger, fresher edition of his resolution.

Employer Is Saddened.

His employer, who had meanwhile arranged to drive to the golf club with a substitute chauffeur, said: "It is the saddest thing I've ever heard in my life."

Medical Inspector Gonzales closed the case for the police with the verdict: "There is nothing to indicate it was in any way suspicious."

By nightfall the seven bodies were in the rooms of William Shea, undertaker, of 403 West Forty-ninth Street, by authorization of John Shine of 305 West Fifty-fourth Street, who is Cavanagh's brother-in-law, and who assured Mr. Whalen that the relatives would pay the funeral expenses.

The surviving child, Mary, was located in Greenwich Village at 37-A Bedford Street. When she arrived at the flat on West Forty-sixth Street the police turned over the "effects of the deceased" to her as next of kin. They consisted of the furnishings and clothes of the family and $29.32.

ATTACKS RESOLUTIONS AS MEANS OF REFORM

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—Bishop Collins Denny, in the Sunday sermon of the Virginia annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South here today, scored loose moral standards, Americans who censure the bootlegger "while they themselves break the laws of the land," and "persons who go crazy over political contests."

He referred to the "idea of some people that the world can be reformed by resolutions" and said "it can't be done."

Following his sermon, he said the action of the conference by the Board of Temperance and Social Service, which pledged the support of the conference to President Hoover, the Anti-Saloon League, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and other agencies for the suppression of liquor traffic, had nothing to do with the remarks made in his sermons.

"We have standards in the State Government, and in the National Government," Bishop Denny said in his sermon, "a great many people don't like them. We need them.

"The trouble is that so many choose the standards they want to follow. We can do more by the example of our own actions than by all the resolutions you can pass. We think we can reform the world by resolutions," he said. "We can't. We never have done it.

"We had a Presidential contest last year over which some people went crazy. We are now having a Gubernatorial contest over which some people have gone crazy. I don't want to go crazy over anything."

THE REAL ESTATE ADVERTISING COLUMNS of The New York Times contain a greater number of desirable offerings in New York City and suburban properties than those of any other newspaper. The Times prints nearly twice as much real estate advertising as any other New York newspaper.—Advt.

Read This Twice

We published this advertisement last Spring, and we repeat it for those who may have forgotten the vital thing in spending money for advertising

MR. O. C. HARN, in an address at Detroit before the Association of National Advertisers, laid great emphasis on the wisdom of a careful analysis by advertisers of the circulation of newspapers under consideration for their advertising. He stressed the value of quality of circulation as being quite as important as the quantity of circulation, and summed up his conclusions as follows:

"One of the most discouraging things to publishers is that you advertisers and your agencies have been far too slow to discriminate. We have been passing through an era of shamefully indiscriminate buying. The space buyer who makes up his list after consulting only the first page of an Audit Bureau statement or, worse still, the statement of the total net paid circulation in some directory is as incompetent as a buyer of coal would be who contracted for a year's supply of coal on the price per ton or a buyer of lumber on the assurance that he was going to get a certain number of feet at a given price.

"Another thing, you buyers of circulation who are inquiring only into 'coverage' at the lowest rate and who often select the largest circulation in a given field or in a certain city, without further inquiry, are being stung right and left.

"Now do not misunderstand me, I do not say buy small circulation because it is small. That would be just as ridiculous as buying the large circulation because it is large. For the large circulation may be large because the paper is better. Buy neither one on mere knowledge of the size of circulation, but study the papers and the elements of which the circulation of each is composed."

The New York Evening Post has more than one hundred thousand net paid circulation every day—107,678 average during the last six months ended October 1st, despite a dull summer. Any intelligent advertiser or advertising agent can readily tell the class, kind, or so-called quality of the circulation of a newspaper by reading a copy of any issue.

It is at once apparent the kind of people who would, in all probability, be its readers. It is the "top" hundred thousand of New York that pays your advertising expense.

BRITISH HERE HOLD HARVEST FESTIVAL

DR. HODGSON THE SPEAKER

Nearly twoscore American and British organizations were represented yesterday afternoon at the annual British Harvest Festival, held at St. Paul's Chapel, Broadway and Vesey Street.

The service was largely a thanksgiving celebration for the recovery of King George of England and also for the harmony between Great Britain and the United States.

Dr. Leonard Hodgson, formerly Dean of Divinity at Magdalen College, Oxford, and now Professor of Christian Apologetics at the General Theological Seminary here, delivered the sermon. He gave thanks for the recovery of the King, for the betterment of industrial and economic conditions in England, and "for the progress made in laying a foundation for peaceful relations between England and America."

Dr. Hodgson pointed out that differences must be expected to occur between the two countries, but that they must be faced and settled in the spirit of God.

"It is not necessary for nations to give up their national characteristics," he said, "but the peoples should regard themselves as members of a higher unit—God's family."

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Patton McComas, vicar of St. Paul's Chapel, delivered the invocation and the benediction. Sir H. Gloster Armstrong, British Consul General, was present. Ernest H. Bennett was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The chapel was decorated with flowers and Autumn leaves, which afterward were sent to the Benkman Street Hospital.

CUBANS PROTEST FLIGHT.

New York-Buenos Aires Line Must Explain Unauthorized Trial.

HAVANA, Oct. 20 (AP).—Cuban customs officials said today that Captain Ralph O'Neill, president of the New York, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires airline, would be asked to explain why he allowed the airplane Buenos Aires to make an unauthorized flight to Matanzas yesterday. They said the trial flight with twelve guests was made without customs permits.

The seaplane, recently christened in Washington, arrived on Friday en route to Buenos Aires on its maiden flight. It was scheduled to continue southward early on Tuesday.

Millions of pelts pour into New York's great wholesale fur market each year, where nearly 75% of the wholesale fur business of this country is transacted.

These pelts are made up into fur garments by the world's largest group of fur manufacturers, in buildings where an unlimited supply of electricity from our mains is available for fur manufacturing purposes.

Electricity is used from start to finish in the manufacture of fur garments and in the processing of millions of rabbit and muskrat skins.

The pelts are washed thoroughly in electric machines, dyed in vats equipped with electric agitators, sheared, dehaired, finished by clever electric machines, and then stitched and the garments cut out and sewed by electric cutters and sewers.

For the trying work of matching skins there is special electric lighting. The storage vaults owe their cold, dry protection to electric refrigeration.

Fur garments valued at about a quarter of a billion dollars annually are made in approximately 2100 plants which use electricity to such advantage.

THE ROBOT AS AN ENTERTAINER

Is his substitution for real music a success?

IF a Mechanical Man played a harp folk would flock to see the curiosity. But few would expect an artistic treat.

And yet, powerful theatrical interests have undertaken to present to the theatre-going public Mechanical Music as a "superior" form of art. The purpose of this advertisement is to invite attention to this attempt and to point out the harm to American culture that may result.

Synchronization of sound with motion pictures has impressed many as a great advance in the cinema field because it has made dialog pictures possible. Taking advantage of this new interest in movies, theatrical powers have sought to go further and introduce a highly profitable economy by substituting Mechanically Synchronized Music for Real Music in theatres.

Mechanical Music takes on no added merit by being synchronized, so it seems fair to say that the "synchronization" exploitation is largely humbug. Nevertheless it is upon the synchronization idea that the attempt to "sell" Mechanical Music is based. Amplified phonograph records could have been used just as effectively years before the synchronization devices were perfected. But a "smoke screen," such as synchronization, was required to lend some sort of scientific color to the substitution.

The cultural menace of this movement to supplant Real Music with the flat, savourless monotony of Mechanical Music becomes apparent upon a moment's thought.

In the first place, success in eliminating flesh and blood artists from the theatre means the eventual corruption of public appreciation of good music, which would be a cultural calamity.

In the second place, reduction of professional musicians to a handful of studio workers would deprive the young of all incentive to develop their talent and to make music their life work.

Machinery is performing great service for Mankind. But a Machine is not an artist. The high purpose of Machinery is to save Men and Women from ignoble and soulless labor, not to perform tasks that are only well done by the hands and hearts of gifted humans.

However perfect reproduced music may be made, it must always fall short of establishing a spiritual contact between performer and listener.

America stands today in the front rank of the Musical World. Our great symphony orchestras excel those of Europe in quality of performance as well as in numbers. And the vast majority of these players are American-born, whereas twenty years ago a native American was rare among them. A large share of credit for this condition is due the American Federation of Musicians, which has served to protect and elevate the living standards of working musicians. Our Grand Opera and concert stage lure the world's greatest artists. In the popular music field we have no rivals the world around. America buys each year more musical instruments than all the nations of Europe, demonstrating that our love of music is an active, not a passive, thing.

Against the excellent reasons for preserving and fostering the Art of Music, the destructive advocates of Canned Music can only advance the proposal that there is greater profit for the theatre in eliminating paid musicians.

WOMAN ARRESTED IN $63,000 THEFT

IS RELATIVE OF FUGITIVE

Sister-in-Law of Missing Man Says His Wife Gave Her Luggage, Saying It Held Silverware.

The recovery of $5,301.26, believed to be part of the $63,000 of payroll money stolen by Ray Gallagher, armored car driver, last Thursday, was reported by the Jersey City police yesterday, with the announcement of the arrest of Mrs. Julia Cochran, 33 years old, a sister-in-law of Gallagher. Mrs. Cochran was arrested at her home, 116 Sherman Avenue, Jersey City, and held as a material witness.

The money was discovered hidden in eight different receptacles in a trunk in Mrs. Cochran's home, the police said. Currency totaling $4,822 was found in a bag stamped "Chemical National Bank," they announced, while smaller sums, including wrapped pennies totaling $8, were found hidden in other parts of the trunk.

Mrs. Cochran told several stories during hours of questioning. One story was that on Friday she received a telephone call from her sister, Gallagher's wife, asking her to come to the Gallagher home at 2,192 Second Avenue, Manhattan, at once. She said that her sister had told her that Gallagher had obtained a good position in Florida, that they were leaving town immediately, and asked her to take care of a trunkful of silverware for them.

Mrs. Cochran hired a Jersey City truckman, she said, and rode with him to Manhattan and back again with the trunk which, she insisted, she thought contained only silverware belonging to the Gallaghers. It was in this trunk that the police found the money.

In another story Mrs. Cochran said that she had received the money from Gallagher as payment for a back board bill. Mrs. Cochran is held without bail and will be arraigned this morning in First Criminal Court.

AND NOW

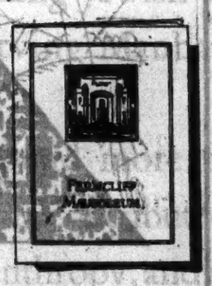
. . . all the advantages of a private mausoleum at less than the cost of a first class ground burial . . .

FROM the Pyramids of ancient Egypt, down the corridors of time, to the tomb of the unknown soldier, the mausoleum has always been chosen as the final resting place for kings and queens; statesmen and national heroes. Not only does the mausoleum offer the most perfect form of interment, but it also provides a loving tribute to the perpetual memory of those noble souls who have made the great journey.

Many people who prefer above ground burial have been deterred in the past because of the great expense involved in erecting a private mausoleum. Now, however, nestling in the beautiful hills of Westchester County, within an hour's ride of the cross-roads of America's greatest center of population, a fitting monument, a symphony in marble, has been erected on the community plan and is available to subscribers at a cost within the reach of all.

De-luxe private rooms, surpassing in beauty and convenience, the most elaborate private mausoleums, may be had at a fraction of the cost. For those preferring simplicity and dignity, without ostentation, beautiful crypts of snow white marble are available at less than the cost of first class ground burial.

Like making your will or taking out insurance, selecting a final resting place is a duty you owe to your family. There is a deep satisfaction in knowing that when life springs back to that intangible something from which it sprung, your survivor will not be faced with the additional grief and indecision attendant upon selecting a final resting place.



A free copy of this handsomely illustrated booklet, describing Ferncliff and its advantages will be sent to you if you will clip and mail this coupon today.

OPERA BOXHOLDERS LISTED FOR SEASON

SEVERAL CHANGES MADE

"Manon Lescaut," With Lucrezia Bori, in Leading Role, Will Be First Performance Next Monday.

The list of box-holders of the Metropolitan Opera House for the twenty-second season under the direction of Giulio Gatti-Casazza, which is to open next Monday night, was announced by the management last night.

The list includes several changes from last year, the most prominent of which is the absence for the first time in many years of the name of Mrs. Ogden Goelet from the head of the list as occupant of parterre box 1. Mrs. Goelet died last February. In her place will be her daughter, the Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Miss May Goelet.

Most of the representatives of the famous families of New York whose names have long been associated with the Golden Horseshoe will be in their accustomed places again this season. Otto H. Kahn again will occupy Box 14 and J. P. Morgan still has the central box, 35. Mr. Vanderbilt again will sit in 31, and Mrs. E. H. Harriman in 9. Vincent Astor again will have 7. R. Fulton Cutting and Mrs. John T. Pratt have Box 27. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt again will have Box 3, in company with Mrs. Orme Wilson and Mrs. E. Reeve Merritt. Archer M. Huntington and Arthur Curtiss James retain 11.

The opening performance of the new season will be "Manon Lescaut," with Lucrezia Bori in the title rôle, supported by Beniamino Gigli, Giuseppe de Lucca and Pavel Ludikar. Tullio Serafin will conduct.

THOMAS APPEALS FOR LABOR IN SOUTH

HAILS NEW A. F. OF L. PLAN

He Pleads for Aiding Civil Liberty, Relief of Needy and Enactment of a National Labor Code.

Norman Thomas, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy and Socialist candidate for Mayor of New York City, took a rest from campaigning yesterday to speak at two forums in Massachusetts, the Dorchester Forum in Boston and the Hampshire County Progressive Club forum at Northampton.

In both forums Mr. Thomas discussed the industrial situation in the South. At the Dorchester forum he also spoke briefly of the application of socialism to municipal affairs and in particular in support of the candidacy of a Socialist, Joseph Bearak, for the Boston Council.

Mr. Thomas said in part:

"Recent events in the mill towns of the South, some of them tragic, raise the question whether men will ever learn anything from experience. Must the course of industrialization of the heretofore agricultural South be attended by all the stupidity and all the tragedy that have marked similar developments in Europe and other parts of America?

"It is not fair for Northerners to point the finger of Pharisaic scorn at the South. New England has its own troubles in the textile industry. The tragic betrayals of justice called up by the names of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Centralia victims, Mooney and Billings and Barkoski took place not in the South but in Massachusetts, Washington, California and Pennsylvania.

Background of Workers in South.

"What gives a certain peculiar slant to the Southern situation is the persistence of the plantation psychology complicated by race prejudice. For this there are historic reasons reflecting on the North as well as on the South.

"Into a region of abundant and docile labor, of which Chambers of Commerce openly boasted; of great natural resources, and of ample electric power the chaotic and overdeveloped cotton manufacturing industry and the newer and more prosperous rayon industry have gone.

"Time and bitter experience, far more than the work of outside agitators, at last aroused the mill workers who, however docile they may seem, brought with them from their mills a capacity for loyalty to one another, a love of independence and no mean fighting spirit.

"These workers had found at the worst the life of industrial serfs in mill-owned villages, at the best the life of industrial serfs tempered by modern improvements and some spirit of benevolence on the part of employers.

"Some of those employers, be it noted, were Northern firms. The rayon mills in Elizabethton were German in origin.

Calls Unionism the Major Issue.

"Against this background occurred the rayon strike in Elizabethon, sporadic strikes in several South Carolina towns and the Gastonia and Marion strikes in North Carolina. All these strikes, with the important exception of Gastonia, were originally or soon became strikes under the auspices of that conservative A. F. of L. union, the United Textile Workers. The Gastonia strike was under the Communist union.

"Communist philosophy is peculiarly alien to the spirit of the South, but it is significant that in the long chapter of troubles in Gastonia there were fewer deaths than at Marion. What the mill owners of the South are fighting is unionism rather than communism.

"Recently, it must be sadly admitted, the A. F. of L. has lacked strategy, plan, courage and morale in its work in the South. It has used oxcart tactics in an automobile age. But the action of the convention at Toronto gives us ground for hope for a new spirit and new tactics, * * * and it is reasonable to expect the A. F. of L. rather than the Communist union to be the agency of progress in the South.

"What (can) sympathetic outsiders do? Some few of them may become sympathetic insiders and actually go to work with and for labor in organizing the South. The mass of us can keep up the fight for civil liberties, through relief of the needy bring some elements of decency and humanity into the situation, and, I think, by political action bring about a national minimum labor code, social insurance and the abolition of the use of injunctions in industrial disputes, all of which will greatly simplify peaceful progress."

POINCARE OPERATION DUE.

He Is Expected to Enter Clinic for Second Time Tomorrow.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—It is expected former Premier Poincaré will undergo his second operation during the coming week. The state of his health has improved so much recently that his doctors believe the time has now come to complete the surgical operation of last July.

Professor Marion and Dr. Boivin and Dr. Perard will hold an examination of their patient tomorrow and he will, it is expected, be taken to the clinic on Tuesday.

During the whole time since the first operation M. Poincaré has passed scarcely a single day without doing some work, preparing comments on current events or writing his memoirs.

COMPLETES CHARGE FOR GASTONIA JURY

DEFENSE READY TO APPEAL

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 20.—The trial of Fred Erwin Beal, Communist strike organizer, and six co-defendants for the murder of Chief of Police O. F. Aderholt of Gastonia and the wounding of three policemen entered upon its concluding phase today with the completion by Judge M. V. Barnhill of a ninety-page charge which he will read to the jury tomorrow.

The charge will take from two to three hours and the case will be in the jury's hands by noon. The defense is prepared to file several new exceptions on which it will move for a non-suit.

It took Judge Barnhill two full days to prepare his charge, the greater portion of which will be devoted to a recital of the law concerning the case, followed by a review of the evidence.

Opposing Contentions in Case.

While the State maintains that the defendants are guilty of a conspiracy resulting in the killing of Chief Aderholt and an assault with intent to kill against Policemen Tom Gilbert, A. J. Roach and Charles Ferguson, the defense has sought to show that the accused acted in self-defense in response not only to an attack by the police on the night of June 7, when the fatal shooting took place, but also to a series of attacks and alleged provocations preceding the shooting, notably the destruction of the first headquarters of the National Textile Workers' Union by a masked mob.

Combined with its plea of self-defense, the defense has also made the point that no proof has been adduced by the State as to which of the defendants fired the shot that killed Chief Aderholdt.

The contention of the State, however, is that regardless of who fired the fatal shot, all the defendants were equally guilty on the ground that they acted in concert and in consequence of a predetermined plan to resist the officers.

Appeal Likely on Religious Issue.

Whatever the verdict of the jury may be as regards the defendants individually, several verdicts are possible under the indictments. It is believed certain that in the event of a conviction the case will be reviewed by the Supreme Court of North Carolina on appeal by the defense and may even reach the United States Supreme Court as a result of the injection of the religious issue into the proceedings when Judge Barnhill permitted the impeachment of Mrs. Edith Saunders Miller, a New York Communist and a witness for the defense, on the ground of her atheist views.

The court held that Mrs. Miller's credibility could not be taken as seriously as that of a believer because she denied the existence of a supreme being who punished wrongdoing and rewarded virtue.

Mrs. Miller, wife of Clarence Miller, one of the defendants, took the stand to corroborate testimony given by Beal to the effect that during the battle on the union grounds Beal, Miller and others not on trial were hiding on the floor of the union office and could not have taken part in the shooting.

Move to Repeal 1777 Law on Oaths.

The issue raised by Judge Barnhill's ruling on Mrs. Miller's anti-religious views has gained widespread interest throughout the State, an interest which has acquired momentum as a result of the subsequent ruling by Judge A. M. Stack at Concord in which he took a position opposed to that of Judge Barnhill.

Judge Stack's decision was given in the trial of four minor mill officials for the kidnapping and flogging on Sept. 9 of Ben Wells, a British Communist. The four were acquitted.

In rejecting the plea of the defense that Wells should not be permitted to testify because of his denial of the existence of a supreme being and because of his Communist beliefs and teachings, Judge Stack ruled that these matters had nothing whatever to do with the case, holding that "such evidence is not even competent for the purposes of impeachment."

Judge Barnhill, declaring that a person who believed that life ended with death was less apt to tell the truth, based his ruling on a State law of 1777 qualifying oaths which has seldom been invoked.

A movement is already discernible in the State which may lead to repeal or modification of the law. Churchmen who have expressed themselves on the question have indicated sympathy for the movement, although a majority of those interviewed agreed either with Judge Shaw or Judge Barnhill.

A defense appeal on this issue to the United States Supreme Court would argue that due process of law had been denied to the defendants by the injection of the religious issue.

Labor Defense Facing Suits.

As the Aderholt case near conclusion, the International Labor Defense is leaving behind it a "trail" of suits filed and threatened against it by persons associated with the defense organization. Suits have been filed by H. G. Gulley, a Raleigh detective; Mrs. H. W. Hummers, a public stenographer, and A. H. Green, an automobile owner.

Witnesses who have appeared for the defense or had held themselves in readiness to appear are threatening suits for non-payment of alleged expenses and fees for time lost.

To all these suits filed and threatened, the International Labor Defense has replied that they are without foundation.

All of those who have brought actions have attached $15,260 of the bail money obtained by the International Labor Defense through the American Civil Liberties Union from the American Fund of Public Service, the so-called Garland Fund, in New York, while $5,000 of bail money has been attached by Mr. Jimison to protect himself and Dr. Neal.

EX-KING'S BROTHERS FOUND DEAD IN KABUL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The bodies of two brothers of the former King Amanullah have been found with four other corpses in a locked room in the citadel in Kabul, from which the usurper, Habibullah, fled last week after a bombardment by the investing forces of Nadir Khan. They are believed to have been held as hostages by Habibullah when he hoped to dictate the terms of his surrender to Amanullah's former Foreign Minister.

The three bodies thus far identified, according to The Daily Telegraph's Peshawur correspondent, are those of Abdul Majid Khan, brother of King Amanullah; Hayatulla Khan, half-brother, and Mohamed Osman, formerly Governor of Kandahar, known as "the kingmaker," owing to his great influence. Because of their condition the other bodies were not identified. No information has reached Peshawur of how they met their deaths.

Three wireless spies who remained in the city of Kabul ever since Amanullah abdicated last January, it was revealed tonight, kept Nadir Khan posted on all the usurper's movements. They had a transmitter just powerful enough to reach Peshawur, where, according to The Daily Mail, a quaint old hermit who occupied a mud hut in an indescribably dusty alley followed every development and passed the news to Nadir.

Curtis Builds You These English Pieces at $277 (or less or more)

Related, but unmatched—the vogue that makes the smartest living rooms so interesting. This Curtis group has arresting beauty—commodious sofa with pleasingly curved back, and chair of harmonizing curves and scalloped base. Hand-carved legs of types that blend, and, of course, down cushions.

Decorators' prices would be tremendously expensive. But when Curtis builds, you yourself can set the price. At $277, hundreds of brocatelles, velvets and wool tapestries . . . at less, equally beautiful and even more sturdy fabrics . . . at more, luxurious brocades, friezés and the like.

Yesterday's record is old news TODAY

In sports, industry or anything else, yesterday's records are old news. This is especially true in the telephone business. Here as in few other industries, records that were good a year ago are out of date today.

Today in New York State's telephone system, the average speed of establishing connection on out-of-town calls has been reduced to about one minute. In order to assure still more dependable service, more than 1,325,000 miles of wire in storm-defying cable is being added this year alone. Many other improvements, equally important for even higher grade of service, are being made.

In 1930 many of these records will be considered old news, for there will be new, higher standards. And these in turn will be swept aside by still further improvements to make the service more useful to you the user.

BISHOPS TO ELECT HEAD NEXT MONTH

TWO YEARS TO BE SERVED

Dr. Manning and Dr. Stires Among Those Named to Finish Term of Episcopal Church Leader.

The Right Rev. William A. Leonard of Cleveland, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Ohio, as acting presiding bishop of the Church, issued a call yesterday for a special meeting of the House of Bishops at Washington, D. C., on Nov. 13 to elect a new presiding bishop. The call was sent out from the Church Missions House, 281 Fourth Avenue, which is the headquarters of the Church.

The office is vacant, due to the death of the Right Rev. John Gardner Murray, who was also Bishop of Maryland, on Oct. 3 at Atlantic City, while he was presiding at the annual meeting of the House of Bishops.

Bishop Murray had served four of the six years for which he was chosen. His successor will be elected to fill out the term, and will be eligible for election for six years' term at the next triennial general convention at Denver, Col., in the Fall of 1931.

Among those whose names are mentioned for the office are the Right Rev. William T. Manning, bishop of New York, and the Right Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Bishop of Long Island.

Until Bishop Murray was elected at the triennial at New Orleans in 1925 the office went to the active Bishop of a diocese who had been longest consecrated. For a generation this was the late Right Rev. Daniel Sylvester Tuttle of St. Louis. It was decided with his death, however, to make the office elective.

The presiding Bishop is also president of the National Council of the Church. His office is in many ways similar to that of the Archbishop of Canterbury in the Church of England. The canon law provides that at the death of the presiding Bishop the senior Bishop within two months shall call a special meeting of the House of Bishops to elect a presiding Bishop.

Bishop Leonard in his pastoral sets Sunday, Nov. 3, for a memorial service for Bishop Murray in every Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States.

Bishop Leonard reminds the clergy in his letter that a special service is to be held on Dec. 1 in every church in celebration of the completion of the revision of the Book of Common Prayer, which will formally go into use on that day. The designation of this day for the Prayer Book commemoration was made in the last official communication of Bishop Murray to the Church, which he signed the night before he died.

Cosmetics Give "Hot Dogs" Blonde or Brunette Skins

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Cosmetics for "hot dogs" form one of the principal displays at the annual meeting of the American Institute of Meat Packers, which opens for a two-day session tomorrow.

The cosmetics are bottles of liquid which will give seven shades, ranging from blonde to brunette, and innumerable color combinations to the skin of the frankfurter. Attendants at the exhibit said the color line is clearly drawn on "hot dogs" in different sections, the South preferring them more highly colored and more highly seasoned than the North.

They also affirmed that frankfurters have their seasonal styles, varying from the plump to the silhouette.

CITY BREVITIES.

Archbishop Nicholas M. Dobrecic of Antivari, Montenegro, Primate of Serbia, will lecture at the Charles Carroll General Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, in Myhan Hall, K. of C. Before the lecture there will be a reception for the Archbishop.

Dr. Jens Nydal, superintendent of public and high schools of the city of Berlin, who is traveling with Mayor Boess of Berlin, will give an illustrated lecture on "New Features of Public School Teaching in the City of Berlin" at Hunter College on Wednesday at 4:30 P. M. in the college auditorium.

Children representing 120 public and parochial schools in the Bronx will participate in the ceremonies on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, when a spruce seedling will be planted in Poe Park in memory of Marshal Ferdinand Foch. The exercises will be held under the auspices of the Park and Forestry Association of Bronx County and the American Memorial Parkway Federation.

MESSBOYS IN FIGHT, SHIP RADIOS BOSTON

Federal Attorney, Marshal and Special Agent Will Board the Unicoi Today to Investigate.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 20.—Fragmentary radio messages today from the Roosevelt Line steamer Unicoi, inbound 600 miles east of Boston from Calcutta and Columbo, told of some sort of crime committed on board ship. Federal and city police machinery were immediately set in motion to intercept the ship at Quarantine tomorrow morning, but further information revealed that the trouble centred about a fight between two messboys.

First messages from the ship told briefly of a crime on board, but gave no details. At the request of Federal authorities here the communications office of the navy yard at Charlestown got in touch with the Unicoi and asked for particulars.

A reply this evening stated that George Qualters, a mess boy aboard the steamer, had thrown a glass article at another mess boy, hitting him on the head and knocking him unconscious.

"The patient is safe," the message read.

Assistant United States Attorney York said that he, a United States Deputy Marshal, and C. M. Burroughs, a special investigator of the Shipping Board, would board the Unicoi tomorrow to conduct an investigation. The Unicoi carries only two passengers.

RATTLESNAKE HUNT FAILS.

Only Two Blacksnakes Captured by Reptile Society in Day.

The thirteenth annual rattlesnake hunt of the Reptile Study Society of America turned out to be a failure yesterday. After a day spent scouring the Ramapo Mountains near Hillburn N. Y., for rattlers and copperheads, twenty-four collectors, several of them women, returned to their homes with only two harmless blacksnakes. Both of these were captured by Paul W. Snyder of Bloomfield, N. J., leader of the party. One was a black racer, the other a mountain black.

Armed with forked sticks and flour sacks in which to carry their prey alive, the collectors spent hours overturning rocks and stirring up fallen leaves, but not one rattler or copperhead was seen in this region once known as the "Fifth Avenue of the Rattlesnake."

Mr. Snyder expressed the opinion that the cold nights during the past week had caused the poisonous snakes to hibernate. Last year the members of the society captured two copperheads and one rattler on their annual hunt, and in the previous year they captured seven copperheads and thirteen rattlers.

NEW ENGLAND RAIL PLAN.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 20 (AP).—The Providence Journal tomorrow will say:

"A new issue is soon to be placed before the people of New England with regard to their railroads. In place of the old issue of New England consolidation versus trunk line mergers, the new problem will be whether a New England consolidation shall include all New England owned by the New York Central, the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific.

"The New Haven is desirous of an all New England consolidation with those terminal lines counted in, E. G. Buckland, chairman of the board of that railroad, told The Journal tonight.

"At the same time Governor Norman S. Case of Rhode Island said that the New England Governors in their present conferences on the subject have had under consideration the report of the Storrow Committee of 1923 which insisted upon keeping the terminal lines of the Canadian roads, including the Central Vermont, and of the New York Central (The Boston & Albany) out of the consolidation as an absolutely necessary measure of protection of New England shippers."

Receivers for Georgia & Florida Road

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 20 (AP).—The Georgia & Florida Railroad has been forced into an operating receivership as the result of loss in revenues and damage to property through the recent flood, the railroad's attorney announced tonight. An order for the step was signed yesterday by Judge Barrett of the Federal Southern District Court, William V. Griffin, a New York banker, and H. W. Purvis, president of the railroad, are operating receivers. An ancillary bill was filed in the United States District Court for the Western Division of South Carolina, where the same receivers were appointed.

ARCHIBALD G. KING DIES AFTER CLOTHING BURNS

Set Fire to Bathrobe Last Week Lighting a Cigarette—Descendant of Rufus King.

Archibald Gracie King, a descendant of Rufus King, one of the first two United States Senators from New York and twice Minister to England, died yesterday in the Midtown Hospital of burns suffered last Wednesday night. Mr. King was 45 years old and lived at 147 West Fifty-fifth Street.

He was a patient in the West Hills Sanitarium, 252d Street and Fieldstone Road, the Bronx, where he was taking a rest cure at the time of the accident. He attempted to light a cigarette and his bathrobe caught fire and quickly enveloped him in flames.

Mr. King is survived by his father, Frederick Gore King; a sister, Mrs. Evelyn A. Cummins of Boston, and a brother, Arjlay A. King of Morristown, N. J., who is a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

He had been in the banking business in this city for twenty years, starting with the Knickerbocker Trust Company and going later to the Greenwich Bank. He remained with that organization through the two mergers resulting in the formation of the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, until ill health forced his retirement last June.

Funeral services will be held at 11:30 o'clock tomorrow morning in the Church of the Resurrection, 115 East Seventy-fourth Street. Burial will be on Wednesday morning in Mount Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge, Mass.

TAKE a walk through your office. Look at the desks. Littered with books, papers, baskets and other unsightly impediments. Festooned with dangling wires and projecting electrical boxes. Desks in various stages of dilapidation, with drawers that stick, and disorderly interiors that play hide-and-seek with the contents—wasteful receptacles for everything from gloves to galoshes.

Desks $65 and up

NOW, for the first time in business history the office desk has been revolutionized and organized for a better day's work.

The new Skyscraper Desk by Shaw-Walker comes as a most timely boon to a desk-weary world.

Its smooth, comfortable top is new in design and efficiency. This top rolls off into rounded edges and corners that do not cut into the day's work. And it gives more elbow room because much of what has hitherto gone on top now finds its rightful place inside.

This is the first desk ever organized to be a real help to its user, and to organize the work in which it plays so important a part.

Each drawer is scientifically arranged to be a business help instead of an untidy "catch-all." The drawers are organized to hold card files and visible files, and other daily helps. There is a drawer that takes trays for incoming and outgoing mail and "Matters Pending."

There is even a drawer that holds a removable waste-basket, thus getting that untidy member out of the way and saving good floor space.

But do not get the idea that this is an inflexible, arbitrary sort of desk that cannot be changed around. No, indeed! The Skyscraper Desk may be arranged and rearranged any way you choose. It lends itself to the job, keeps the worker happy, and makes the office a cheerful place to work in.

Another surprise: The Skyscraper Desk is electrically planned. Telephone wires, lamp wires, push-button wires and bell-box have all vanished into concealed construction. It is the first "electrified" desk—a development by Shaw-Walker engineers.

Like its famous forbear, the Shaw-Walker Filing Cabinet, it is "Built Like a Skyscraper." It is beautiful as durable, being made in several rich two-tone finishes, and through quantity production sells at a moderate price.

More interesting information awaits you. The attached coupon will bring it promptly. Mail it today. Buy no desk or table until this information is before you.

DEADLOCK OR VETO.

In voting by a majority of eight to fasten the farm debenture plan upon the tariff bill the Senate issued two challenges. One is to the House of Representatives. The other is to the President. The measure itself has once been overwhelmingly rejected by the House. If the Senate persists in its amendment, there should be a deadlock, with the bill failing. Senator BORAH is confident, or at least he says he is, that the House will accept the debenture plan, and that then the President will sign it. But this is about as near an affront to Mr. HOOVER as words could frame. It implies that he will stultify himself. It ignores the fact that he is so completely on record against the farm debenture that he is bound to veto it if it is contained in any bill brought to him for his signature, on pain, if he does not, of holding light his own conviction, fully expressed, and disregarding his constitutional duty.

The Senate's action adds one more element of confusion and bedevilment to the whole tariff situation. If sincere and determined, this vote in the Senate would make the enactment of any tariff by this Congress impossible. But already there are hints that skilled leaders in the Senate are thinking of the excellent bargaining material which they now have in their hands. To be sure, the President has been unfeelingly defeated twice in the supposed house of his friends. His plea for a flexible tariff was denied. His open opposition to the debenture plan was flouted—no less than fourteen who call themselves Republican Senators voting against him. But what a chance for sharp trading is left! By conceding small points, big advantages can be won. If any troubled Senator has some pet tariff duties for his own State which he does not know how to get, clever managers will show him that by giving up the farm debenture all that he needs to keep his political fences in repair will be his. The whole thing now looks like a sad and hopeless welter. But there are plenty of men in Washington who know how to fish in troubled waters. By matching the despondency of their own followers with the wrath and anxiety of their party opponents they hope to pull out for themselves what they most desire. The next few weeks will offer a splendid opportunity to the good traders in Congress. At present the odds seem heavily against them, but they have shown before that they know how to snatch personal victories out of party defeats and legislative chaos.

This latest procedure throws a strong light upon what must be called the farm lobby at Washington. It is made up of Senators and others who are willing to go all lengths in seeking special favors for agriculture. They are vastly indignant at other tariff lobbyists. They fairly explode at the spectacle which Connecticut manufacturers have presented—trying to write their own direct benefits into the tariff bill. But no display of selfishness or demand for class legislation could be more unblushing than what the farm advocates are exhibiting. They call the profits of the protected interests "unconscionable," but are eager to obtain even more outrageous ones for their own constituents. Only a few days ago Senator WALSH of Montana sought to forbid entirely the milling in bond of Canadian wheat. He frankly admitted that his object was to raise the price of American wheat and to increase the cost of bread to the consumer. But here was a chance to do something for the farmer, and he called upon all Senators who professed to be friends of the farmer to vote with him. Not enough of them did, and his amendment failed. But such proposals, followed as they have been by the Senate's adoption of the farm debenture plan, ought to prevent the dwellers in the glass house of the farm lobby from virtuously throwing stones at any other.

President HOOVER will be away from Washington until next Thursday. Probably he will not in the meantime feel called upon to say what he thinks of this latest rebuff inflicted upon him by the Senate. But it would seem that he could not long delay, after returning to the capital, in letting the Senate and the country know that, in this vital matter of legislation, he is not a man who changes simply because he finds that he may have sworn to his own hurt.

THE M'COOEYS OF BROOKLYN.

It was said of Pope ALEXANDER V that he was saved from the nepotism which characterized other ecclesiastics of his time by virtue of the fact that he was without kindred or relatives. How often must Mr. MCCOOEY have envied his happy immunity! For the Brooklyn leader is not so fortunately placed. Having numerous relatives, he has felt it his duty to call upon them to help him discharge his heavy public responsibilities in a manner worthy of the family tradition. His sister is an associate superintendent of schools. His brother-in-law is Borough President. One son, HERBERT, attends to the task of bonding contractors on city jobs. His zeal in the public service may be judged from the fact that in a few months his company placed 868 of these bonds, thus assuring the faithful performance of that number of city contracts.

Sometimes HERBERT and a friend of his helped Uncle JIM pave the streets of the borough. Another son, full of the idealism of youth and strong in the affection which binds this extraordinary family together in a common devotion to the city's welfare, is in partnership with his brother-in-law in the practice of law. They have been notably helpful to the judges of the county in the matter of guardianships and receiverships, serving on occasion the widows and orphans thrown on the mercy of the Surrogate's Court of which MCCOOEY Sr. is clerk.

It takes courage and a sense of civic obligation worthy of an ancient Roman for a father to expose his own family in this way to the rude contacts of public life. No doubt they wish that they might have been spared the sacrifice, and left to gather of an evening about the old hearth at Flatbush, free from cares of office or vicarious responsibility. It is disheartening that Mr. LA GUARDIA should seek to impeach a family record so luminous. It should be held up as an example to aspiring youth, incorporated in Who's Who, referred to the eugenic laboratory at Cold Spring Harbor, which has shown such an interest in inherited philanthropic traits. Manhattan has nothing to compare with this manifestation of patriarchal benevolence. It could never have occurred save in the City of Homes.

SENATOR EDGE'S SUCCESSOR.

As time passes the Republicans of New Jersey are no nearer solving the problem of a successor to Senator EDGE. The latest proposal is that Governor LARSON appoint DAVID BAIRD Jr. to serve until the election in November, 1930, with the understanding that ex-Governor STOKES may be a candidate at that time for the remnant of the term to which Mr. EDGE was elected—to March 4, 1931. Mr. BAIRD is to run for the full term of six years beginning when Mr. STOKES has enjoyed his four months as Senator. When the arrangement was brought to the attention of Mr. STOKES he laughed and exclaimed: "That is too complex for me!" Other people are laughing, too, but perhaps not ex-Senator JOSEPH S. FRELINGHUYSEN, who is a candidate himself for the full term and knows that DAVID BAIRD Jr., as the choice of influential Republicans for the primary nomination next year, might be a formidable opponent.

Except for their support of Mr. HOOVER, the New Jersey Republicans have not been united for many years. It might be possible to bring them together behind an exceptional man for United States Senator at this time, but no one seems to be trying to do that. Only BAIRD, STOKES and FRELINGHUYSEN are mentioned for the office. Senators EDGE and KEAN are keeping their hands off, as if fearful of getting them burned. Ambassador MORROW has been spoken of as a compromise candidate, but the politicians are not interested in him. Other men of good character but less ability were put forward, only to vanish into the wings, leaving BAIRD, STOKES and FRELINGHUYSEN to stand in the spotlight.

It has been suggested that a conference of Republicans, including members of the State committee, State Senators and Assemblymen and State finance committeemen be called—perhaps one hundred in all—to discuss the situation and recommend a successor to Senator EDGE. Governor LARSON is partial to the idea but it does not suit Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, who has been actively in the field for a long time now, and ex-Governor STOKES is not enthusiastic about it, suspecting, as others do, that the pins would be set up for DAVID BAIRD Jr. The independent Newark News observes:

> It must be remembered that, convention or no convention, the selection is the responsibility of Governor LARSON, who will probably not have to call out the militia in making his decision.
>

A NOBLE UNIVERSITY.

Brown University, whose earlier name was Rhode Island College, has had a most distinguished history, worthy of ROGER WILLIAMS's Providence and the dissociation of Church and State; of the tempestuous dissenters and come-outers of Rhode Island and Providence Plantation; of that rich and cultivated eighteenth-century Newport. Its Charter was drafted by EZRA STILES and WILLIAM ELLERY. Another Signer, STEPHEN HOPKINS, was an original member of the Corporation. Though founded by the Baptists, who had at first a controlling hand in its government, the principle of denominational cooperation was strongly insisted upon; and the representatives of the denominations selected by the Corporation might be either clerical or lay.

Kings, Pennsylvania and Princeton, the then College of New Jersey, under its second Charter, were as liberal in form or fact. Political liberality was a long while in returning to the future little State. Devoted at first largely to the education of a little sect, under its later name Brown became a national seminary of the humane arts. It has many famous sons to praise. What the sociologist would like to know about it is its secret for turning out Secretaries of State. MARCY, OLNEY, HAY, HUGHES: are there any more of them? Last Friday Mr. HUGHES and various other eminences were at the inauguration of Dr. CLARENCE AUGUSTUS BARBOUR as President.

One welcomes the coming, but hates to speed the parting guest. In June Dr. WILLIAM H. P. FAUNCE, a great scholar, teacher and citizen, made his farewell. His administration was epochal. He had served thirty years and served not Brown alone. Education, religion, good-will among the nations—what good cause has he not helped by his clear thought and courageous utterance? He is a boy of 70. We nominate him as successor to President ELIOT, Emeritus; but perhaps the nomination was confirmed before we made it.

Dr. BARBOUR is also a man of a wide variety of accomplishments, experiences and energies. A famous professor of homiletics, he is highly "homiletical" in the old sense, companionable, conversable. His inaugural address shows him dedicated to intellectual quality and not to swelling the mob of undergraduates. Some of us can almost remember when Brown had the good fortune to be a small college. It now has more than 2,000 students. Who can stay the rush for "a college education"? That Brown will give one equal to her high place among universities we can have no doubt, but we trust less in Dr. BARBOUR'S learning and eloquence than in his long labors among young men and women. Learning maketh a don. Understanding of the kittle cattle he has to herd maketh a college president.

JAPAN AND NAVAL ARMAMENT

The full text of the Japanese note accepting the invitation to attend the naval conference in London bears out the forecasts. Japan avows herself anxious not only to have the principle of limitation extended to all categories of vessels, but hopes to see an actual reduction of naval armament. In other words, as at the Geneva conference, Japan may be expected to do all in her power to bring about an effective agreement.

One of the happy results of the Washington conference of 1921 was the removal of Japan's suspicions as to the intentions of the rest of the world. She entered that conference reluctantly and fearfully, expecting that it sheltered some hidden purpose disadvantageous to Japan. Those present remember the distrust which some of her people could only with difficulty hide—distrust which disappeared under the magic of Mr. HUGHES's frankness. He made it plain beyond any doubt that the United States and Great Britain were moved with good-will toward Japan. To be sure, the big-navy men at Tokio came away from the conference with some of their suspicions only partly stilled. They began at once the construction of 10,000-ton cruisers, which were the largest vessels permitted under the new treaty. But the growing spirit of good-will after the conference, reinforced by the obvious fact that the United States was making no effort to build cruisers to match Japan's and that England's naval program was delayed, was already strong when the disastrous earthquake of 1923 made it impossible for the Japanese big-navy men to carry out a further large naval program.

The imperative need for retrenchment of government expenses, as well as the realization that Japan is in no danger from any other naval Power, determined the policy of the Japanese delegation at Geneva in 1927. It will govern Japanese policy in London. Despite occasional outbreaks about immigration restriction and the Singapore naval base, Japan knows that no Power threatens her in the Pacific. She also sees that as the cost of repairing the damage done by the earthquake has continued to mount up her burdens will be relieved if she can reduce her large naval budget without endangering her safety.

At Geneva the Japanese on several ocasions made an effort to act as mediators between the apparently irreconcilable English and American points of view. Although these differences are now happily ironed out, it is more than likely that Japan will find herself in a position to help out if divergencies between the points of view of the Continental and the English-speaking Powers appear to be difficult to adjust. She stands, in a sense, on both sides, wishing to see the navies limited and reduced, but not wishing to see the submarine abolished. Her influence in bringing about the final adjustment should therefore be considerable. It will be all the greater for the preliminary discussions which, it is announced, the Japanese will have at Washington before going to London.

TRAINING FOR SAFETY.

Chambers of commerce, educational institutions, labor associations, realty boards and numerous other public organizations have been striving for years to reduce the number of accidents throughout the country. Despite their efforts there has been a steady increase. Many thousands occur which cause permanent disability, temporary pain and loss of working time, or merely short time off and slight inconvenience. These are so common that the economic loss to employer and employe runs into large sums. Even more serious is the increase in accidental fatalities. At the Safety Congress held in Chicago recently it was announced that 97,000 persons had been killed by accident in this country during 1928. In the metropolitan district 10,000 more accidents were reported for the first seven months of this year than last, according to the records of the New York State Department of Labor.

Students of this problem, which is becoming more grave everywhere, declare that it will not be solved until leaders trained in accident prevention are developed. Safety engineers are not numerous, and the comparatively haphazard attempts made by men whose attention is largely taken up by other matters are not producing the desired results. Executives in industrial plants are interested in promoting safety, but they cannot devote the necessary time to the matter. Foremen try to make their departments safe, and workmen's committees use their influence for accident prevention. But apparently nothing less than concentrated energy on the situation will mend it.

Announcement by New York University that ten men will receive scholarships in its courses in accident prevention is encouraging. Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS, president of the Museum of Safety, will finance the training of these men, who will be selected by ten metropolitan organizations. They will be chosen regardless of previous academic training, provided they have qualities of leadership. First-hand studies will be made of factories and communities which are able to show success in their safety campaigns. A record of their work will reveal in a few years whether the way to relieve a distressing state of affairs has been found.

WHERE ORATORY STILL WITCHES.

In CHARLES MEEZ'S "The Great American Band-Wagon" the suggestion occurs that an excellent source of State revenue would be to charge admission to criminal trials. He pointed out the hippodromic nature of some of them, but even he did not foresee such a stellar performance as that given last week at Charlotte, N. C., by Solicitor JOHN T. CARPENTER of the prosecution in the Gastonia trial. There have been histrionic efforts by lawyers before, in New York City as well as in the rural regions, but probably none ever rivaled in variety and gymnastics the exhibition given by this North Carolinian.

Mr. CARPENTER impersonated every actor in the drama, changing with protean skill from male to female. He sank to his knees, for the moment the wounded policeman returning the enemy's fire. He rolled on the floor, victim of the shot. He read from the Bible. He seized the hand of the Widow ADERHOLT and pledged to her "the bleeding heart and tender sympathy" of the prosecution. He swore that he should be unworthy of his parents, his wife and his children if he did not visit vengeance upon the defendants, and he recited a catalogue of these estimable relatives. He wore out two boutonnières, got dust and grease on his new blue suit, wilted his collar and made a rag out of his tie. These were merely his physical demonstrations. In language the solicitor soared into the empyrean and beyond, knocking even at the gates of paradise and calling the attention of the Deity and the apostles to what the union agitators had done to Gastonia. Making tatters out of passions, he made shreds out of rhetoric and an oratorical combination salad out of figures of speech. Not the worst of these were the "cyclone and tornado which sank its "fangs in the heart and life-blood "of Gastonia."

When the eloquence was over Judge BARNHILL—and who can blame him?—adjourned court until Monday to think over his charge. Of the jury, for whom the show was given, we are told only that it "blinked." There will be great interest elsewhere to discover whether the South remains attached to this form of oratory:

> They stood it till the great Gob > looked down from the very battlements of heaven and broke the chains and traces of their patience, and caused them to call the officers to the lot and stop the infernal scenes that came sweeping down from the wild plains of Soviet Russia into the peaceful community of Gastonia, bringing bloodshed and death, creeping like the hellish serpent crept into the Garden of Eden.

THE DEWEY TRIBUTE.

The unchallenged place which JOHN DEWEY at the age of 70 holds in the front rank of distinguished Americans is not entirely dependent on his past record as educator and philosopher. He is at the present moment exhibiting a lively interest and participation in politics which add to his qualifications as one of our first citizens. He answers to nearly all the standard specifications of the "college professor" and to virtually none of the practical politician, yet he is not that queer intruder, the scholar in politics. It is natural enough for Mr. DEWEY to display in his later years an active concern with the public life of an American generation to whose schooling and to whose stock of ideas he has made a large contribution.

Professor DEWEY'S rôle in the history of education is chiefly that of one who identifies the classroom with life. As a philosopher he identifies thought with life, making the former dependent on the latter. He is the enemy of the metaphysical view of the world as a finished product, and the consistent advocate of creative experience. He qualifies as a democrat because the experience in which he trusts is the experience of masses of free men. He qualifies as an optimist because of the very absence of a predetermined goal in his scheme of things. It is not altogether unfair to describe the pragmatist as one who doesn't know where he is going but he is on his way. There is no getting lost for the philosopher of experience, since any port one strikes is the right one.

The revolutionary ideas in education connected with Mr. DEWEY'S name—a break with external control in the classroom and with formal curriculum—have wrought great changes in American education since the beginning of the century. There are not a few who think the changes have gone too far. President BUTLER at Albany the other day sadly admitted the "pretty "complete abandonment of formal "discipline," and with it self-discipline and the building of character, which is the object of education. What Dr. BUTLER calls character it is now the prevailing tendency to denounce as "standardization." That would be in no small measure the pragmatist alignment against fixity and for fluidity. Professor DEWEY'S reply to all doubts about the break-down of standards and the destruction of values would still be the supreme value of experience in itself. For the sake of its educative results he is willing to pay the frequently bitter costs of experience; as when he accepts the ruthless Soviet experiment in Russia for the very sharpness of its challenge to established things.

Professor DEWEY'S advocacy of experimentalism, coupled with his reputation as an educator, has brought him popularity in foreign countries engaged in breaking with their past and experimenting with new forms of life. He has been an honored visitor and adviser in Nationalist China, in Soviet Russia, in Kemalist Turkey, in revolutionary Mexico. His economic and political views are shared by a small minority among his own countrymen. But his basic democratic faith, his insistence on relating ideas to the practical life, his courageous acceptance of living as an adventure and his implicit faith in some form of progress, all place him in the American majority tradition.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Smoke Still Troubling Manhattan.

The Health Department recently reported considerable improvement in the atmosphere over New York, but much remains to be done if the smoke nuisance is really to be abated. Saturday's glorious sunshine managed to reach those in the streets of Manhattan only through air heavy with smoke. Some of it comes from New Jersey and much from the tugboats in the river, but the owners of factories and loft buildings in Manhattan must bear their share of the blame.

If a Health Department inspector had been perched on top of one of the skyscrapers in the neighborhood of Times Square Saturday morning, with spyglass trained and umbrascope in order, he would have observed one offending chimney over on Eighth Avenue belching soot which drifted over the square in a black cloud. The season is at hand when the department will need to redouble its vigilance if New Yorkers are to get the benefit of sunshine.

Not Money but Attention.

Today ushers in "Visiting Nurses' Service Week." When it began thirty-six years ago the service was in the hands of only two nurses, and it needed money to carry on the work of caring for the sick in their homes. The confidence of people on the lower east side was soon won. Those who could pay gave what they could. Public-spirited persons who saw how much good was being done, not only to the unfortunate sick but to the whole community in being protected from infectious disease, provided funds for more nurses. There are now 236, averaging about half a million visits to the ailing. They work from eighteen centres established in Manhattan and the Bronx.

This week the service is devoting to the spread of information about its work. It has enlisted the assistance of the department stores, of the radio, movies and newspapers, of prominent individuals who already know its value.

All that it asks of the public is attention. It is justifiably proud of the great good it has already accomplished. There is to be no appealing for money to continue it. If people will merely look at the exhibits in Fifth Avenue shop windows, loaned for the display, and lend their own ears to the story of a worthy cause, the visiting nurses will be satisfied.

The Pig Is Still King.

City folk, fed on an occasional lettuce leaf, a cream puff, a cold-storage egg and a cubic inch of "meat," will doubtless be surprised to learn that during the year 1928, according to the Department of Agriculture, the per capita consumption of meat in the United States was 153 pounds.

They will be even more surprised to discover that nearly half of this—74 pounds, to be exact—was pork and 15 pounds lard. We are not so far away from the old frontier fare as we had been led to believe. Most country-bred Americans had their full quota of salt pork during the Winter months of their childhood. In parts of the country the term "meat" still means bacon or pork.

Salt pork, corn bread and corn liquor made up the fare on which entire generations of pioneers were "raised." Many of them were a dyspeptic lot despite their natural strength. Their descendants long clung to the custom of frying everything in thick grease. But Americans clearly have not lost their relish for bacon. This, together with the export demand, accounts for the large part which the lowly pig still plays in American economics.

D'ye Ken John Peel?

JOHN WOODCOCK GRAVES once remarked to JOHN PEEL that he would be "sung long after both of them had been run to earth." One hundred years have passed since GRAVES, the author of "D'ye Ken John Peel With His Coat So Gay," first sang the famous hunting song in the bar parlor of the Rising Sun Inn at Caldbeck. It may have been on the occasion of the first fox hunt of the season and, "he munna be a dry un," PEEL said.

PEEL was no "pink-coated master of hounds." He never wore a "gay" coat; it was a long gray garment of coarse homespun which dropped almost to his knees—the usual garb of the fell-side hunter of those days. (GRAVES never wrote "gay" into the song.) But JOHN PEEL was a hero to GRAVES. He was "a fine figure of a man, of very limited education beyond hunting, but generous as every sportsman ever must be; his honor was never once questioned in his lifetime—a better heart never throbbed in man."

This hero hunted thirty-five years, hares during the early part of the season and foxes from Christmas on. He died in his saddle, it might be said, for it was of injuries received while riding. When the funeral procession passed his kennels the hounds set up lugubrious howls which continued until the cortège was out of sight.

> (Who saith a dog cannot feel?)
> Then singles to pine, all dejected, forlorn,
> And died on the death of JOHN PEEL.

The Senate Disliked.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to express my sincere appreciation of your editorial "The Same Senate." Is it any wonder that the public is thoroughly disgusted, as it certainly is a sorry spectacle to see the tactics the lobbyists are using and the complete chaos and utter lack of progress. Partisan politics has done much to retard and possibly defeat a bill that seriously affects the trade of the country.

> Once and once only shall the heart attain
> A shining height that sweeps all things before
> Its sudden soaring, like a star that takes

>
> Drink deeply of the wine that moment brings,

> Finger its burning beauty till it's gone.
> Though you may wait till death, it is in vain;
> Never the same high moment comes again.

THE TRUCKING SITUATION.

Agreement in Dispute Held to Violate Federal and State Laws.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reference to THE TIMES editorial "A Questionable Settlement," and to the strike in general, we may concede that the demand for an increase of the market truckmen's pay is justified but their method of obtaining it is totally unjustifiable by both parties to the agreement, as it clearly violates both Federal and State laws regarding combinations for the purpose of restraining trade. In addition to this, according to the statements made by both sides, they propose to ban privately owned vehicles engaged in interstate commerce and shipping from entering New York City unless they agree to pay tribute to the Market Truckmen's Association by handing over the contents of the private owners' cars to be hauled only a short distance to the stores of commission merchants and wholesale dealers.

I believe that Governor Larson of New Jersey is right in characterizing this as "graft" and a brazen outrage. Also it is good to note that officials of neighboring States are becoming aroused as to what effect the agreement, if allowed to stand, will have on their citizens engaged in agricultural pursuits.

New York State is fortunate in having such an agency as the Department of Agriculture and Markets to cope with any emergency of the present kind. And still more fortunate in having at its head such an efficient commissioner as Berne A. Pyrke has proved himself to be. He did not wait to be told or prodded as to his duties in the case. He immediately sensed his obligations both to the producer and consumer alike, and for this, he is entitled to the support of all citizens, to prevent the banning of privately owned cars engaged in transporting food commodities into our city. On this there must be no compromise, as that will mean increased costs to consumers on an already higher market than 1928, due to shorter crops of apples and potatoes, and experience teaches us that this means an increase all along the line of fruits and vegetables, not to mention the increases that will follow the pending tariff bill.

DENTISTRY AGAINST TIME.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of Oct. 16 there is an interesting letter from A. Heckscher, entitled "Dentistry for Children," which is timely because it calls attention to a great need which has heretofore received little attention.

Because of the importance to the public of the subject dealt with the data supplied should be correct. Analysis of the figures supplied by Mr. Heckscher indicates that if the number of chairs he specifies were to be kept busy every minute at high pressure for eight hours each day, for six days per week, it would allow fourteen and one-half minutes per child for the number of children stated as receiving service per week in the New York Foundation.

This average is not attainable because no such high-pressure service can be kept up either in public clinics or private practice.

With forty years of experience behind me, may I be permitted to say that in many cases fifteen minutes is scant allowance for adequate examination and diagnosis of the conditions that will be found in the mouths of underprivileged children and that hours of service and repeated visits are very often required for the attention needed by each child?

Professor Streit at Congress.

Among those attending the Congress of the Institut du Droit International at Briarcliff Manor is Professor Georgios Streit, a distinguished citizen of Greece with an international reputation. He was appointed, while yet a young man, Professor of International and Constitutional Law at the University of Athens, and was legal adviser to the Foreign Office, representing his country at many congresses. He was Minister in Vienna before the World War and left that post for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in the Venizelos Cabinet. This office he resigned when Venizelos started his fight against King Constantine, whom he accompanied on his exile in Switzerland. On his return to Athens following the King's death Mr. Streit was nominated Academician in recognition of his services to the State, even his political enemies acclaiming his selection.

Another Woman Revolts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What Paris seems to have forgotten is that culture and taste do not work backward. The American woman, having become conscious of the beauty of pure line, the dignity of the natural, the grace of the simple, is not suddenly going to go off the deep end into a turmoil of senseless and ugly and insanitary furbelows. Modern life demands simple and convenient clothing. Paris forgets that millions of young American women are in business and are not going to be pestered by tangling skirts that catch in subway doors nor sleeves that drag in and out of typewriter keys. A slightly lowered skirt is welcome, but corsets and sweep-the-ground skirts—à bas!

A Source of Gratification.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As one deeply interested in securing professional openings for women I am much gratified to know that the New York Infirmary for Women and Children is to continue and is to have a modern building and modern equipment. Though most of the other good hospitals in New York have positions for women both on the staff and in the clinics, the opportunities for women's advancement in them are few and they really do not provide enough posts to give experience to all the women doctors who need it. I hope that the public will support the appeal now being made by the trustees of the infirmary.

LATIN-AMERICAN FRIENDSHIP.

An Association Proposed to Cultivate It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An association is being formed by American citizens for development and colonization work to meet the requirements of Latin-American republics. They need capital, manpower and organization. The association, which will be based on sound business principles, will not only meet the requirements of those nations, but will enable us to help both the immigrant and the less fortunate Latin to work out successful careers for themselves. Its aims are to demonstrate our friendship by giving substantial assistance by developing some of their lands and industries in an effort to bring closer together the peoples of the Western Hemisphere.

The plans have been carefully worked out, and in order to make the project an outstanding success an equitable method has been adopted wherein all elements will be served: the nation, the immigrant and the men and women who support the organization. Besides government land grants and other concessions allowed by law, there is to be a parent plantation managed by experienced American agriculturists with young American assistants of high standards. The parent plantation will have a good portion of rich, fertile lands located in a healthful zone, which will serve as a training school for both the immigrant and the Latin-American laborer, and will provide for their physical and social well-being with adequate schools, churches, &c. The immigrant will be transported from his native soil to the parent plantation; besides being scientifically trained, he will be housed, fed and paid a salary, deducting his transportation expenses, &c., and further advances will be made until he becomes self-supporting. When the immigrant has become accustomed to his new surroundings and efficient in tropical farming, he will be settled on his own tract of land and will be helped and encouraged at all times by the organization, to the end that he may become a useful and successful citizen.

All conditions being favorable, it is likely that we will centre our first activities in Colombia. She needs immigration and development of her lands and industries. We will solicit the cooperation of the citizens of those countries, hoping that they will become members of the association.

Having spent many years in the tropics, I have sincere friends among the Latin Americans. Being interested in the welfare both of our country and theirs, and realizing that the misunderstandings that exist between us are caused by acts that are sometimes their fault and sometimes ours, I believe that an organization that will give the American people an opportunity to demonstrate their friendship and desire to be of practical assistance will meet with the approval of our people, who will welcome any solution that will lead to a better understanding.

Throughout history, colonization has played an important part in the material, intellectual and cultural development of the human race. The United States, long a haven for Europeans, having practically closed its doors to immigration, cannot close its eyes either to the need of humanity nor the requirements of other countries in the Western Hemisphere for new population, and imperialism having no place in the Western Hemisphere, consideration must be given to commercial colonization based upon sound economic principles to serve the desired purpose. We should take steps at once to do our part in development work in Latin America, which will be mutually beneficial, and it is our duty both to Latin America and our own future welfare.

GOOD AND BAD LOBBIES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In his interesting article about lobbies in THE TIMES Senator Walsh of Montana wisely divides them in two classes, good and bad, lest somebody consider all lobbies sinister in purpose and inimical to our democratic form of government. However, what he regards as good lobbies may be considered otherwise by somebody else, and vice versa. For instance, among the good ones he mentioned the all-powerful Anti-Saloon League, champion of them all and the most efficient and best organized. But, being a good dry, he considers the aim of the league pro bono publico, and disregards the methods they employ to accomplish their aim, as he figures that finis coronat opus.

To my way of thinking there are only two successful lobbies, those backed by a militant, powerful public opinion for a good cause which by nature should be encouraged and aided, and those backed by selfish individuals and corporations and helped by faithless public servants, which should be annihilated. The latter, which are the ones we all object to, are supported in toto by the parties responsible for them and do not cost the public any money. We can hardly get rid of them, but we can render them powerless by electing courageous, honest, intelligent public servants who cannot be bought or fooled by them. Our Congress, as at present constituted, is the best check against them, as they will not dare approach any Senator or Representative with any of their unholy proposals. They may, however, employ some faithless ex-public servant clever or crook enough to fool them into believing in their ability to influence Congress in any pet proposition of theirs.

This childish faith exhibited by many of our big business men could be easily dissipated if the Senate committee now investigating lobbies would obtain statements under oath from every Congressman and Senator to the effect that they never have been and never could be approached by these obnoxious lobbyists, because they will not dare do so, and then our magnates will see that they might as well stop throwing away good money in useless enterprises.

STEPHEN B. ELKINS DIES ON BIRTHDAY

HEADED MINING CONCERNS

Stephen Benton Elkins of Elkins, W. Va., a son of the late United States Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia, died yesterday of heart disease in his apartment at 381 Park Avenue after a fortnight's illness. Yesterday was his fifty-second birthday. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow in the chapel of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street. Burial will be at Elkins.

The near relatives who survive are Mr. Elkins's mother, who was Miss Hallie Gassaway Davis, a daughter of Henry Gassaway Davis, former United States Senator and Democratic nominee for Vice President of the United States, when she became the second wife of the future Senator, Stephen B. Elkins; two brothers, Richard Elkins and former United States Senator Davis Elkins, the latter of whom now resides at 133 East Sixty-fourth Street, this city; a sister, Mrs. William F. R. Hitt of Washington, the former Katherine Elkins, and two half-sisters, Mrs. Weiderseim and Mrs. Oliphant. During Mr. Elkins's illness, his mother, who lives in Washington, had been staying here at the Hotel Ambassador.

Mr. Elkins was born in Washington. He was graduated from Yale in 1900. His business interests included the presidency of the Elkins Coal and Coke Company and the National Fuel Company, both of West Virginia. He belonged to the Racquet and Tennis and Brook Clubs of this city.

Senator Stephen B. Elkins died in January, 1911. His widow was dissatisfied with the terms of the will, which gave equal shares of the large estate to each of the seven children, including the two daughters of the earlier marriage. Accordingly, she renounced the provisions that the will made for her and insisted on her dower rights, which, under the West Virginia law, gave her one-third of the property, both real and personal. It was estimated that she thus obtained between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000 and that each of the children would inherit approximately $2,000,000.

PRINCE OBOLENSKY HEARD.

With Nyra Derrance, Soprano, and Others, Basso Gives a Recital.

Prince Alexis Obolensky, basso cantante, and Nyra Dorrance, soprano, assisted by a string quintet and by Hans Blechschmidt, pianist, presented a long and varied program of songs last evening at Carnegie Hall. Prince Obolensky has been heard in this city and elsewhere to better advantage in past seasons. Last evening his voice seemed to lack flexibility and freedom. While the soloist had no difficulty in reaching some extremely low notes, the quality of these as well as of those at the other end of his range lacked carrying power. The basso was perhaps most effective in "Le Roi a fait battre tambour" by Severac, and in a group of Russian songs by Tchaikovsky and Rubinstein, and Schvedoff's arrangement of Russian folk songs.

Nyra Dorrance, who appeared in this city about eight years ago as a contralto under the name of Neira Riegger, possesses a voice hard to classify. Though the range is large, its quality is rather that of a mezzo, especially in the middle register. Notes of limpid, bell-like quality are interspersed between others of thin and weak texture. Miss Dorrance sings with authority and much musical understanding. A large and attentive audience applauded the singers.

RECITAL BY MAX ROSEN.

Max Rosen, violinist, gave a recital in Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon before a good-sized and cordial audience. His program ranged from the Chaconne by Vitali, the Concerto in A minor by Dvorak and the Bach Chaconne to "Deux morceaux," played here for the first time and dedicated by the composer, Wladigeroff, to the soloist.

Mr. Rosen possesses a naturally warm and full tone, which he marred by too much vibrato and an unpleasant habit of sliding up to a note. His interpretation of the Bach Chaconne suffered from concern over technical difficulties and a lack of breadth.

The natural communicativeness of his style did much to offset this, and his best moments brought their reward of hearty applause. The violinist added encores to the program. Richard Wilens was at the piano.

Metro Male Octet Sings.

The Metro Male Octet presented a program of Latin, German and English songs last evening at the Carnegie Chamber Music Hall under the conductorship of P. H. Boergermann. The singers showed evidence of careful training. Good intonation, spirited rhythm and varied dynamics testified to their preparation. The conductor secured his effects with extremely simple means and manifestly knew what he wanted and how to get it.

The program included selections which ranged from Palestrina and Schumann to Mendelsohn and Sullivan. W. Klaucke, baritone, presented "Spielmannsleben," by Lorleberg, and A. Kempf, pianist, Chopin's "Polonaise Militaire" and Schumann's "Valse in Ab Minor."

Maverick Theatre Guild Formed.

The Maverick Theatre at Woodstock, N. Y., has been leased by Louis Hallett and Gene Francois for the production next Summer of experimental plays to be alternated with stock performances on week-ends, according to announcement. The new organization, to be known as the Maverick Theatre Guild Company, plans to take its plays on tour at the end of the Summer season.

Plans Opera Subscription Drive.

Mrs. Charles E. Scribner, 950 Park Avenue, entertained on Saturday at the first of the group teas which are to be held in conjunction with the subscription committee effort of the Little Theatre Opera Company, which is headed by Mrs. Winthrop McKim of Tuxedo. This subscription effort will open with a luncheon meeting at the Town Hall Club tomorrow at 12:30.

He was one of New London's most prominent citizens and was quite active in his business affairs up to a few days ago, when he was confined to home by illness. He was identified with silk manufacturing for many years and at the time of his death was chairman of the board of directors of the Corticelli Silk Company, president of the National Bank of Commerce and connected officially with many other local institutions.

Benjamin L. Armstrong was believed to have been the dean of the silk industry, to which he devoted sixty-eight years of his life. Born in New London, where he lived all his life, on Dec. 10, 1843, the son of Charles and Lucy Palmer Brown Armstrong, Mr. Armstrong learned the business in youth while he worked for the Williams Silk Company.

He formed a partnership in that business line with James P. Brainerd in 1867 under the firm name of Brainerd & Armstrong, and the company remained active until it was merged with the Nonotuck Silk Company to form the Corticelli Silk Company in 1922.

Many other interests also claimed the attention of the venerable head of the company, chief among them being the presidency of the National Bank of Commerce, which he had held since 1904. He also was interested in the development of many New London enterprises being an incorporator and the first president of the Memorial Hospital there. He also was president of the G. M. Williams Hardware Company of New York.

He assisted many charitable and civic organizations and established a trust fund of $100,000, the income to be used for charitable purposes in New London, some years ago. In March, 1918, he announced a reduction by one-half of the rent of any of his tenants who were represented in the army, navy or shipyards.

MRS. LYDIG'S RITES TODAY.

Family Says Mgr. Lavelle Will Officiate at Private Services.

Funeral services for Mrs. Rita de Acosta Lydig, who died suddenly Saturday afternoon in her apartment at the Hotel Gotham, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Mercedes de Acosta Poole, 124 East Forty-seventh Street, it was learned last night from members of the family. The services will be entirely private and in the presence of only a few close relatives. Burial will be in Trinity Cemetery, at 153d Street and Amsterdam Avenue, the family said.

Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, will officiate, it was announced.

Although Mrs. Lydig had been a worker in the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Ascension, of which the late Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, to whom she was once engaged, was rector, it was explained last night by members of her family that she had always been a Catholic. Mgr. Lavelle, it was said, had long been a friend of the family.

Members of the family who will attend the services are her three sisters, Mrs. A. R. Sargent of Boston, Mrs. Poole and Mrs. Henry Breckenridge; the two brothers-in-law, Mr. Breckenridge and Abram Poole, and a brother, Ricardo M. de Acosta.

Efforts were being made to get in touch with W. E. D. Stokes, Mrs. Lydig's son by her first marriage. Mr. Stokes sailed for Bermuda Saturday afternoon, shortly after his mother died, without knowing even that she was seriously ill. He had been in ill health and had planned a trip to recuperate. Mrs. Lydig's illness took a critical turn so suddenly that members of the family were unable to inform the son.

Mrs. Anne Maxwell Jeffords.

Mrs. Anne Maxwell Jeffords, daughter of the late Samuel Maxwell, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in Nebraska, died yesterday in her home at 161-43 Eighty-sixth Avenue, Jamaica, Queens. She was the wife of Clyde R. Jeffords, formerly of the faculty of Cornell University, now head of the Latin and Greek Departments at Newtown High School and instructor of elementary philology at the College of the City of New York.

Mrs. Jeffords was born in Fremont, Neb., Dec. 20, 1879, was educated in her native State and was graduated from the University of Nebraska. She also held a master's degree from Wellesley College, was a member of the D. A. R., the Kings Manor Association and the Woman's Club of Jamaica. Besides her husband Mrs. Jeffords leaves two sons and a daughter.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Fairchild Chapel, Jamaica, and later the body will be cremated.

Is A Fitting Time to Consider All Electrical Servants

FIFTY years ago today Thomas A. Edison completed the first successful incandescent light bulb. Today it lights the whole world. Today, too, thanks largely to Edison, electricity is a domestic servant, ready to cook and wash and iron for us, ready to wax our floors and clean our rugs, ready to carry our messages, ready to amuse us, with phonographs and radio and moving pictures when the day is done.

The First Store in the United States Electrically Lighted was Wanamaker's "Grand Depot"

TODAY the world celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of the invention of the incandescent light bulb. In looking back over fifty years to do honor to its inventor, Thomas A. Edison, we find that the Wanamaker establishment began its praise and recognition of Mr. Edison almost fifty years ago. And the history of his first electric light bulb is interwoven in part, with the history of the Wanamaker store at Philadelphia.

Even before Mr. Edison's invention was perfected, Mr. Wanamaker had become interested in electric lighting, and had constructed in the Philadelphia Store, then called the Grand Depot, a generating plant for arc lamps, in the Autumn of 1878.

For all new inventions there is criticism as well as interest. Light by electricity was no exception. The illumination of the Wanamaker Store created a vast sensation. But the sputtering of the arc lights was not conducive to confidence. Many people predicted that they would burn the store down, many were afraid to go in; and crowds watched the Grand Depot from a safe distance, expecting it to blow up.

Although a few weeks' trial proved that the lighting experiment was practicable, Mr. Wanamaker was not satisfied, believing that Thomas A. Edison held the key to future lighting. He made a trip to Menlo Park to visit Mr. Edison in his laboratory, and afterward reported:

Edison's First Incandescent Bulb

"I found him in a kind of barn, over an electric bulb. His eagerness was like that of a mad man. He refused to eat or sleep, being infatuated with the idea which he so soon thoroughly developed. I saw what was to make him the pride of the world, when he took the Gold Medal at the Paris Electrical Exposition."

◆

This was the first of many meetings between Mr. Edison and Mr. Wanamaker. When the Edison incandescent lamp was put on the market in 1879, Mr. Wanamaker was the first merchant in the United States to use it in his store, which he gladly did, feeling that Mr. Edison had removed both the danger and the uncertainty of electric lighting.

We honor Mr. Edison for his invention of the incandescent light bulb, for the genius, the confidence, the patience which made it possible.

And among ourselves we honor no less the merchant pioneer who had the vision and the courage to risk his whole establishment in the cause of progress.

With T. W. Lamont and S. H. Strawn, He Is Listed With World Court Backers.

BOK URGES OUR ADHERENCE

EXPECTS SENATE TO RATIFY

The addition of three internationally known names to the Committee of the American Peace Award, which advocates the adherence of the United States to the Permanent Court of International Justice "on the terms of the new protocol embodying the formula worked out by Elihu Root," was announced by the American Foundation through Edward W. Bok yesterday.

The new members of the committee are:

Citing President Hoover as among those who believe that the United States should adhere to the World Court, Mr. Bok, founder of the organization, addressed the following public message of welcome to the new members of the committee:

"The World Court matter has been hanging fire for a long time. Our committee hopes that the end is now in sight. Mr. Root, whose ability to define and protect the interests of the United States no one questions, has worked out a means of adjusting the difficulties with reference to advisory opinions that have delayed the adherence of the United States to the court.

Fifty Nations Have Signed.

"The protocol embodying this adjustment will go into effect when it has been signed and ratified by the member nations of the Court and by the United States. Fifty of the fifty-four member nataions of the Court—all except Albania, Abyssinia, Costa Rica and Lithuania—have signed this agreement and the other four are expected to do so within a very short time.

"On our side Secretary of State Stimson clearly expressed a few weeks ago his own belief that the protocol would fully protect the United States against the dangers anticipated by the Senate' when in 1926 it wrote the fifth reservation regarding advisory opinions. The Secretary also announced his intention, when the protocol had been signed by the member nations, of recommending to the President that it be signed by the United States and transmitted to the Senate for its consent to ratification. Our committee rejoices at the evidence of keen interest on the part of the administration and at the prospect that the signature of the United States may soon be added to the fifty-four signatures of the member nations of the court.

Quotes President Hoover.

"Thousands of persons who have long been interested in the adherence of the United States to the court will hope that ratification in the Senate will soon follow our signature to the protocol. President Hoover, in his inaugural address, clearly expressed his desire that the adherence of the United States to the court should be completed: 'The way should, and I believe will, be found by which we may take our proper place in a movement so fundamental to the progress of peace. * * * No more potent instrumentality for this purpose has been conceived and no other is practicable of establishment.'

"This view of the court is confirmed by Mr. Hughes, who, just returned from his first session as a judge of the permanent court, characterizes the court as the 'most important of all undertakings for peace' and as 'the absolute minimum of intelligent effort for the promotion of world peace.'"

The other members of the committee include:

James R. Angell	Miss E. F. Pendleton
Gen. Tasker H. Bliss	Roscoe Pound
Irving T. Bush	Mrs. Ogden Reid
John W. Davis	Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt

PARROT DISEASE HITS BUENOS AIRES THEATRE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 20.—Two persons are dead, seven others seriously ill in this city and several others are reported to be dead in the Province of Santa Fe from the effects of a strange disease contracted from parrots and described by the Buenos Aires Public Health Service as psittachosis, or parrot disease.

Nine actors and actresses, including Argentina's famous comedian, Florencio Parravicini, became seriously ill within a few days of each other. One actor and one actress died before physicians were able to diagnose the trouble.

Then a parrot which had taken part as a sailor's pet in their play also died. The Public Health Service investigated and issued a statement that the players were suffering from parrot disease and published a warning to the public either to get rid of pet parrots or to keep them away from rooms in which people live.

The disease is described as a form of poisoning contracted from parrots, which first affects human beings in the lungs and the intestines and is accompanied by severe vomiting. The Public Health Service says the disease is better known in the warmer northern provinces where parrots are plentiful and that several persons recently have died [illegible] from its effects.

Italianizing Stirs Anger Among Aosta Valley Folk

GENEVA, Oct. 20.—In the beautiful Valley of Aosta, under the shadow of Mont Blanc, there was much indignation today when the local prefect started to enforce the recent decree from Rome making Italianization of the district obligatory as in the Tyrol.

By tradition the customs and language of the 6,000 inhabitants of Aosta Valley have been French for centuries. Now, by command, the French names of villages, hamlets, streets and even the neighboring mountain peak must be changed into Italian.

MUSEUM HERE GETS RARE GREEK MARBLE

NEEDLEWORK ON DISPLAY

English Embroidery, Some of It 600 Years Old, Shown—Art of Old China Exhibited.

A Greek marble relief which was carved in the fifth century B. C. and started its travels westward as an antique some 2,000 years ago has finally come to rest here in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

This recent acquisition by the museum is a fragment of a battle scene, carved in Pentelic marble. In its present state it is a narrow slab only some twenty-two inches in height, but in its original condition was much wider, although the exact proportions have not been determined.

"Since it depicts a number of persons," Miss Gisela M. A. Richter, curator of classical art at the museum, points out "it was probably not a private monument but one erected by the State to soldiers killed in war. The battle commemorated by our relief was probably one of the many encounters of the Peloponnesian War."

Portrays Fallen Youth.

The relief portrays a youth who has fallen on the field. One arm is limp at his side, the other raised over his head, still clutching a sword. Behind him is a fleeing soldier, wearing a short chiton and a conical helmet. To the left another warrior, wearing a similar chiton and helmet, is collapsing under the onslaught of his opponent. On the background is an upright wavy groove, perhaps outlining a tree or rock of which the details were indicated only in color. The period of the relief appears to be the second half of the fifth century B. C.

Detective work by the classical department of the museum indicates that this marble was once in the collection of an ancient Roman connoisseur. In explaining this Miss Richter points out:

"It will be noticed that the back of the slab is smooth except for a ridge about 3¾ inches from the bottom. This suggests that the relief was cut with a [illegible] as far as the ridge and then broken, as was customary in Roman times and is still today. As the surface of the back shows marks of considerable age, the sawing evidently took place in antiquity—presumably by the Roman plunderers who carried the relief from Greece to Rome in order to lighten its weight. Lord Elgin did the same to the slabs of the Parthenon frieze.

"This accounts for the unusual thinness of the slab. Our slab originally was perhaps twice as thick as it is now. The face on the right side shows no smooth edge, so that presumably no slab adjoined here; a small round hole about 9¾ inches from the bottom and remains of a clamp hole on the upper face are probably of Roman date, and may be explained as traces of the fastenings devised by the Roman owner for the enjoyment of his 'antique.' With such a history it is perhaps fitting that the relief should now find a home in the New World, which is taking its turn in the importation of works of art."

Museum Gets Rare Fabric.

Among other recent acquisitions announced by the museum is a fragment of rare Hispano-Moresque textile, showing o seated figures, within a medallion, facing each other, holding tambourines. The portrayal of human figures is rare in Mohammedan art, since their use was banned by religious convention.

A special exhibition is now being held at the museum of rare English embroidery, arranged to indicate the development of needlework in England from the time of its unrivaled supremacy, about 1300 to the present day. An exhibition of Chinese paintings, largely the work of Sung and Ming artists, is also being held.

The museum has also announced the dates of three coming special exhibitions. The International Exhibition of Industrial Art, under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts, and consisting of contemporary glass and rugs, will be opened to the public on Tuesday, Nov. 5. An exhibition of Egyptian tomb paintings will be held from Jan. 7 through Feb. 9, and a memorial show of work of the late Arthur B. Davies from Feb. 18 through March 30.

The museum also announced the resignation of Miss Frances Morris as associate curator in charge of textiles. Miss Morris joined the museum staff in 1916.

Scouts to Visit Roosevelt's Grave.

The annual Boy Scout tribute to Theodore Roosevelt on his birthday anniversary will be given next Saturday, when 2,000 members of the organization will march from Oyster Bay to his grave. The boys, who will pay ceremonial honors to the memory of the only Chief Scout Citizen, will gather from New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. Similar services will be held by Scouts throughout the country.

POLICEMAN DIES OF THUG'S BULLET

HIS ASSASSIN IDENTIFIED

Escaped, but Two Confederates Who Were Captured Reveal Name to the Police.

Patrolman Charles A. Sauer of the Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn, Police Station, who was shot in the head early yesterday morning while breaking up a hold-up at 59 Summit Street, Brooklyn, died shortly before noon in the Cumberland Hospital. Patrolman Sauer, who was 46 years old and married, lived at 115 Vermilyea Avenue, the Bronx.

He and Sergeant John McGarty surprised three robbers who had held up three men in the rear of a barber shop at the Summit Street address. McGarty shot one of them in the hand, subduing him and another robber, while Sauer pursued the third into the hall, where they exchanged four shots. The thug escaped after fatally wounding Sauer, but the police learned his identity and the fact that he is a taxicab driver from his companions. With the aid of his photograph and finger prints, on file with the Hack Bureau, they expect to capture him soon.

The prisoners, who said they were John Zoni, 25, alias John Singer, of 268 Union Street, Brooklyn, and John Maimone, 21, of 412 Henry Street, admitted participation in the hold-up, according to the police. They were charged with homicide and will be arraigned in the Brooklyn Homicide Court this morning. Both have criminal records, according to the police.

Patrolman Sauer was visited at the hospital by Police Commissioner Whalen yesterday morning, but the patrolman was unconscious. Mr. Whalen commended Sergeant McGarty for the second time in a year. On March 19 he shot and killed Patrolman Daniel Maloney, who was said to have been acting as gun bearer for a gang of bootleggers, during a bootleggers' fight in Bay Ridge.

LACEY TOPS TROUBLES ON AIR TOUR FLIGHT

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Before a crowd of more than 200,000 persons, the National Air Tour fleet of forty airplanes landed at the new Curtiss Airport here this afternoon, just one day's flight from the close of the sixteen-day trip from and to the Ford Airport at Detroit. All but one of the planes came in without trouble, Steve Lacey having been forced down when a hole blew in one of the cylinders of his engine.

As no other pilot had actually seen Lacey land, Lieutenant Commander George Chapline, pilot of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation's Ford trimotor craft in the tour, braved a long flight over wild country again to find the missing plane.

When he had been gone less than five minutes, Lacey in his little Cessna monoplane dove at the finish line a half hour before darkness set in. At 9:20 P. M. a telephone call came from Chapline that he had run into rain squalls and lightning at Morrison, Ill., and had set his plane safely down in a charted emergency landing field. He said he would pick up the tour before the start tomorrow.

Lacey, who has been one of the fastest fliers in the tour, said as to his forced landing that, when he found that the motor would run on its eight remaining cylinders, he took off again without disposing of any of his capacity load so as not to lose any points in his score.

John Livingston, top flier in the scoring, again led the day's run, which was from Milwaukee via Moline, Ill., Livingston's total is now such that, barring an accident on the final leg to Detroit, he has won the tour. Arthur Schlosser, official scorer, said that he did not think any place changes had occurred in the first ten, and that he would not compile any new standings until tomorrow.

ZEPPELIN LINE GETS AMERICAN CHARTER

Organizing of International Company Brings Transoceanic Service a Step Nearer.

Another step has been taken toward a transatlantic Zeppelin line between the United States and Europe, it was learned yesterday, with the formation under a Delaware charter of the International Zeppelin Transport Company.

Coincidental with the formation of this company, which was chartered with a nominal capitalization of 1,000 shares, is the return here tomorrow aboard the Majestic of Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the board of the National City Bank, which is among the banks whose representatives discussed with Dr. Hugo Eckener the possibilities of such a line on his recent visit to New York.

According to dispatches from Berlin two weeks ago, Mr. Mitchell had conferred with officials of the Darmstadter Bank of Berlin, which is interested in the transoceanic airship plans. On that occasion Mr. Mitchell said that he had talked with Dr. Eckener concerning the "future financing" of the Zeppelin lines.

Officials of the bank who reached here last night had nothing to say concerning the new Delaware corporation beyond confirming the report that the bank was definitely interested in the prospects of airship lines across the Atlantic.

Plane Ambulance Service Is Started Here To Offer Emergency Aid to Entire Nation

Colonial Flying Service, and the Scully-Walton Ambulance Company have made an arrangement, it was announced yesterday, whereby patients can be rushed by air to New York hospitals for emergency treatment and operations. Use of the airplane ambulance, it is believed, will save many lives.

The flying service will transport patients day or night between New York and any point having an adequate landing field. Planes used will vary in type according to the nature of the case to be transported. Colonial has Fairchilds, Sikorsky amphibians and trimotored Fords available at all hours for the use of the Scully-Walton Company.

Colonial Airways System, of which the flying service is a subsidiary, it was said, has made a national arrangement through contracts with other ambulance companies either to bring patients from their homes to a field near New York or to transfer convalescent patients unable to endure the rigors of a slow train ride to their homes by plane from New York.

Cities where these arrangements have been made include Atlanta, Birmingham, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, St. Petersburg, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Springfield, Mass.

DR. POLING RESIGNS 5TH AVENUE PULPIT

PLANS MANY TRIPS ABROAD

Will Serve Out Term as Head of General Synod and Continue Weekly Radio Sermons.

The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling announced his resignation yesterday morning as pastor of the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street. It takes effect Jan. 1, but Dr. Poling will preach at intervals for some time longer. The resignation came as a surprise except to the officers of the church.

Since the time of Jonah Michaelius, the first pastor, who served from the establishment of the church in 1628, Dr. Poling is the first pastor of the church—and there have been thirty-eight—ever to resign. He will devote his entire time to his many other activities, which are primarily for youth. The salary of Dr. Poling at the church is said to be $18,000. He has been there ten years and is 45 years old.

Will Work for Youth.

"This church can get another pastor and its work will go on; but I have become more and more convinced that my work for youth cannot continue to be done as it should be done while I am tied down to a full-time pastorate," said Dr. Poling after the service.

Dr. Poling was recently elected president of the International and World's Christian Endeavor Unions to succeed the Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the movement. Dr. Poling had been the vice president. He was the organizer and is the preacher every Sunday afternoon at the National Youth Radio Conference over the WJZ network. Yesterday eleven new stations were added to its hook-up. He is editor-in-chief of The Christian Herald, president of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, in which post he will continue out his year's term, which will end in June. He is a director of the J. C. Penney Foundation, and until a few years ago he held a part-time salaried office with it. "Later there will be a statement of my enlarged activities with this foundation," Dr. Poling annouced.

Plans Trips Abroad.

"I will make a hurried trip to London and Berlin in January. On my return I will occupy the pulpit of the Marble Church at intervals until after Easter. I shall be in Europe in August again to attend the World Christian Endeavor Convention."

Dr. Poling said that in 1931 he will make a trip to Australia and New Zealand in connection with his Christian Endeavor presidency, and to India, China and Japan for the Student Volunteer Movement. He will shortly publish his fourth novel.

In announcing his resignation Dr. Poling said:

"On Thursday, May 2, 1929, I submitted to the consistory of the Collegiate Church my resignation as a minister of the Collegiate Church, to take effect Jan. 1, 1930.

"The consistory, with generous words of appreciation, appointed a special committee, which held conferences with me, requesting the withdrawal of my resignation. After five months of prayerful deliberation and having withdrawn my resignation in order that this deliberation should not be prejudiced by a previous decision, I found no alternative but to resubmit my resignation. This I did on Thursday, Oct. 3, 1929. With a resolution brotherly and generous, my resignation was accepted.

"It is hard, beyond words it is hard, for me to go; but go I must, to be obedient to the One who led me here and who called me first. For you I pray, and pray expectantly, the yet greater things of Divine Promise. After all, the real test of our work together lies ahead. Not to our gains of the past, however gratifying, but to your continuing labors shall I look for the vindication of my ten years with you."

After the benediction the officers of the church, who had been sitting in front pews, filed by Dr. Poling, clasping his hand. Scores of worshipers gathered about Mrs. Poling, who was visibly affected.

Dr. and Mrs. Poling have seven children of their own, and a few years ago they adopted a war orphan while in England.

DUFFY PARISH GETS ADVICE, BUT NO AID

Former War Chaplain Asserts He Has Many Suggestions on Meeting $65,000 Budget.

SOME FROM RACKETEERS

Realty Speculators Send Offers for School Property, but Pastor Says He Is Unwilling to Sell It.

Holy Cross parish, in midtown Manhattan, has been flooded with suggestions for the relief of its financial difficulties, the Rev. Francis P. Duffy, its rector, said yesterday, following his announcement a week ago that inroads of commercial development were seriously reducing the parish revenues. Very little practical aid has been forthcoming, however, the famous war chaplain declared.

Fighting with the old Sixty-ninth Regiment in France was mild compared to the meeting a $65,000-a-year budget with parish funds falling from $5,000 to $7,000 annually behind the needs of the church, school and rectory, Father Duffy intimated, but he said that he and his parishioners would carry on to the limit of their resources.

Real estate speculators, Father Duffy said, were quick to react to the possibility, touched upon in his talk from the pulpit a week ago, that the parish might be forced as a last resort to abandon its school at 332 West Forty-third Street and sell the site. The pastor's desk was piled high yesterday with letters from real estate men, he said.

"We have been besieged with offers," said Father Duffy. "The real estate people seem to think the school is going to be sold right away. But I am hoping they will be disappointed. I want to save the school if I can. It is indispensable to the parish. If I have my way the school will be there five or ten years from now.

"We have received a lot of letters—some of them from racketeers telling us how we can make money. Most of the suggestions, unfortunately, are of the get-rich-quick type."

One consolation, Father Duffy added, is that he has received several messages from his "old pals in the army" wishing him a successful solution.

Yesterday the annual collection for the support of the parish was taken up at all the masses in Holy Cross Church. Father Duffy said the amount contributed would be announced shortly in the parish bulletin. He said he was certain, however, that the gifts of his own people would go only a small way toward meeting the parish deficit. Where 1,200 persons came to worship ten years ago, he said, there are now less than 600, and "they are doing the best they can."

"What makes our problem particularly acute," he said, "is that four parishes send their children to Holy Cross school, yet from only one of these do we receive any financial support, and that is from Father Edward Leonard at St. Malachy's.

"We have no wealthy parishioners. Our people live in four or five story walk-ups. Most of them are in Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, between Eighth and Tenth Avenues. They represent the old population, going back fifty years to the time when it was just a big family neighborhood."

THREE OVERCOME AT FIRE.

Three persons were injured seriously and 200 driven to the street in night dress by a fire that damaged a double six-story tenement at 320-322 Cherry Street early yesterday morning.

Two women and a young girl were found overcome by smoke and burned about their faces and arms, lying just inside the door of their apartment, by firemen who summoned an inhalator crew to revive them. The three, who were treated by Drs. Goldman and Sachs, and sent to the Gouveneur Hospital, were identified as follows: Lotta Katz, 23 years old; Henrietta, 3, her daughter, and Pearl Rosenstein, 65.

The fire was discovered by Patrolman Charles Daugherty, who with two men awakened the occupants of the building and aroused those in a building next door.

The fire was subdued after a half hour fight by firemen under the direction of Battalion Chief Lennon and Deputy Chief Thomas Daugherty. The damage was estimated at more than $10,000. The origin of the blaze was undetermined.

SIR PHILIP GIBBS ON THE UNSHACKLING OF THE MIND

"That war which ended in 1918 took millions of men beyond their garden walls—Orientals as well as Western peoples began to think differently. They began to think in terms of the world, instead of within the narrow boundary of the rice field or the cabbage patch."

SOUTHERN RAILWAY TO PENSION FORCE

Will Pay $2,500,000 to Insure Employes Against Age, Mishaps and Sickness.

WORKERS TO SUPPORT FUND

Retirement to Be Optional at 65 and 70—No Examinations Will Be Required.

Creation of an ex parte pension plan and a plan of group accident and health insurance protection for the 60,000 employes of the Southern Railway System, with an annual premium in excess of $2,500,000, was announced yesterday by J. B. Mahoney of Chattanooga, Tenn., chairman of the Southern Railway System Employes' Pension Association.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society will underwrite the pension plan, and the Provident Life and Accident Insurance Company of Chattanooga, will carry the insurance.

All employes of the Southern and its affiliated companies with a continuous service record of two years, who are under 70 years of age, are eligible for membership in the pension scheme. The plan provides for the purchase of units of a minimum premium of $2.50 a month. Any employe will be permitted to purchase as many units as he may desire, depending upon the amount of income desired at the time of retirement.

Retirement Not Obligatory.

While this group pension plan does not impose or suggest an obligatory retirement age from service, it provides, for premium-contribution purposes, for those aged 50 and under at date of entry a retirement age of 65 years, and for those aged 51 and over at date of entry a retirement age of 70. However, a member of the group pension plan may continue monthly premium payments beyond the ages of 65 and 70, and the amount of the income will be increased accordingly.

In the event an employe dies after entering the plan, but before the normal retirement age, his or her beneficiary will receive the full amount of the employe's monthly premium payments and the pension payments received by the deceased member prior to death.

Should an employe leave the service of the companies for any reason other than death, he has three alternatives. He may continue to make premium payments directly to the Equitable Life Assurance Society on an annual, semi-annual or quarterly basis; cease making monthly premium payments and accept a certificate for the deferred paid-up pension, commencing at the normal retirement age, which has already been purchased by the contract and receive in cash the total amount of monthly premium payments to date, less a small surrender charge if it should occur before the end of the second year.

No Examinations Required.

All employes of the Southern and its affiliated companies, regardless of length of service, age, sex or color, who are at time of application actively in the service are eligible for membership in the group accident and health plan without a medical examination, provided the application is made within sixty days from Nov. 1, or within sixty days after entering the service of the company.

The group accident and health insurance will automatically cease with the termination of any employe's active service with any of the companies or on account of retirement on pension because of old age or physical disability. In the event an insured employe is temporarily laid off through no fault of the insured, the insurance will continue to the end of the month for which payments have been deducted from his earnings. The insurance may be continued thereafter for a period not to exceed six months if the employe will pay in advance to the Provident Life and Accident Insurance Company during the time laid off the regular monthly premium.

The insurance and pension plans will become effective at the end of the current month. A. H. Plant, assistant to the president of that company, has been placed in charge of the work.

Plunging twenty-seven stories to the pavement of Wall Street in the nearly deserted financial district yesterday evening, Frank Zuiger, 24 years old, an assistant librarian in a Broad Street law firm, terminated a period of ill-health and despondency with instant death.

He jumped from the Equitable Trust Building, which is at 15 Broad Street, but has an extension reaching to Wall Street. On the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth floors are located the offices of Swaine & Wood and Cravath De Gersdorff, where Zuiger was employed. He was alone on the lower floor, where he had gone to compile data for the attorneys' use today, when he leaped from a window.

The body landed on the street between 35 and 40 Wall Street. It narrowly missed striking Arthur J. O'Keefe of 1,926 Third Avenue, foreman of a subway construction crew, who was supervising eighteen men in the laying of an electric conduit in the street. Nearby also was a parked automobile with several women who witnessed the fall. Otherwise Wall Street was empty.

At first it was thought that Zuiger, identified by an automobile operator's license, might have jumped from the Bank of Manhattan Company building now under construction and planned to be the highest skyscraper. In the office of the de Gersdorff law firm, however, the police found S. W. Meyer of 168 Radford Street, Yonkers, who said that Zuiger had been at work on the floor below.

Zuiger, who lived at 820 Eighth Avenue, Astoria, had been under the care of a physician, the police said.

Will Rogers to Thank Edison In Behalf of Air Travelers

To the Editor of The New York Times:

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 20.—Got a lovely invitation from Henry Ford to come to Dearborn tomorrow and hear Mr. Hoover tell Mr. Edison what the electric light had meant to him before becoming a Republican. Was headed over there and ran into a thick fog and had to come back here. Besides, Mr. Ford's field is not open on Sundays, and we couldn't fly around till Monday, but will be over there as soon as the Sabbath is over.

Old Chicago might be wicked, but that lighted field looked mighty good at night, and I sure want to thank Mr. Edison personally tomorrow for inventing those little things.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

KINGS HOSPITAL BIDS TO BE OPENED TODAY

New Building Will Be Fourth Project Launched by Dr. Schroeder Since February.

COST PUT AT $6,300,000

Will Have 1,500 Beds, With Space for Emergency Expansion—To Be Ready Early in 1931.

Sealed bids for the construction of the new Kings County Hospital, which will be the second largest city-owned hospital, will be opened at the Department of Hospitals this morning, Dr. William Schroeder Jr., Commissioner of Hospitals, announced yesterday. The estimated cost of the structure, housing 1,500 beds, has been placed at $6,300,000.

The bids will concern three contracts: general construction, to be completed in 550 days; preliminary plumbing work, and preliminary heating work, each in ninety days. The building is expected to be completed early in 1931.

The hospital, which will contain 400 more beds than the present one, is the fourth project of its kind to be undertaken by Dr. Schroeder since his department was inaugurated in February, when $18,000,000 for hospitals was placed at his disposal. The new Morrisania Hospital, in the Bronx, was opened in July; plans for the new Queens General Hospital, to cost $3,500,000, were announced in August, and the new psychiatric hospital unit at Bellevue, to cost about $5,000,000, was announced last month.

To permit extension of the bed capacity in emergencies, it was announced, the new Kings County Hospital will have an arrangement of intermediate chambers between wards that may be pressed into service, adding 200 to 300 beds.

The building will front 415 feet on Clarkson Avenue, be 320 feet deep and set back 120 feet from the street. It will be in three units, one ten stories high and the others of eight stories.

The base of the structure is to be of granite, the walls of variegated rose tint, trimmed in gray limestone and tile. The porches will be of decorative metal design. The first floor will house the receiving rooms, an out-patient department, kitchens, service, reception and record rooms. Administration offices and a library will occupy the second. The x-ray and special treatment room will be on the top floor, with wards on the others.

SAN JUAN DISASTER LAID TO 3 OFFICERS

Third Mate of Pacific Coast Ship on Which 70 Died Loses His Papers for Life.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20 (AP).—Blame for the sinking of the coastwise passenger steamer San Juan with a loss of more than seventy lives on Aug. 29 was officially placed on the shoulders of three ships' officers by United States steamboat inspectors here late yesterday.

Captain Adolph F. Asplund, master of the San Juan, who went down with his ship, was held equally responsible with his third officer, Robert Papanfuss, and Otto Saunders, third officer of the Standard Oil tanker S. C. T. Dodd, which rammed the passenger vessel off the Santa Cruz coast. Captain Hugo Bleumchen of the tanker, tried on charges of inattention to duty, was exonerated.

The penalty imposed on Papanfuss is the most severe within the power of local inspectors, because of his error in sending the San Juan across the course of the tanker, for his failure to call Captain Asplund to the bridge and for reversing engines of his vessel, the inspectors ruled. Papanfuss must permanently lose his licenses as mate of steam and master of sail. He can never again hold a post of responsibility on an American steamer.

WON'T SUE OIL DRIVERS.

Standard Official Denies Planning Action Against Strikers.

The Standard Oil Company of New York does not plan to take legal action against the officers of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters Chauffeurs and Helpers, it was intimated yesterday by Peter P. Prunty, assistant general sales manager. Questioned about an announcement of Saturday purporting to have been made in behalf of the twelve companies that refused to recognize the union in the recent strike of oil truck drivers, he said, "I don't think we will do that."

"All the striking drivers have returned to work, and every one is back on a 100 per cent basis, both as regards employes, and the amount of gasoline and oil being transported," Mr. Prunty said. "We are back to normal. The strike is a thing of the past."

Philadelphia Welfare Asks Aid.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—More than 5,000 volunteers will begin a campaign tomorrow to raise $3,545,000 for the maintenance next year of the 122 agencies of the Welfare Federation. The campaign, under the chairmanship of Edward Hopkinson Jr., will continue until November 4.

TRIAL OF WARDER WILL BEGIN TODAY

Bribery Charge Will Be Heard First Against Former State Banking Superintendent.

INDICTED ON TEN OTHERS

Jury in City Trust Case Will Be Selected From Special Panel of Two Hundred.

TWO EXPECTED TO PLEAD

Di Paola and Frederico Ferrari, Who Aided Prosecution, Probably Will Be Arraigned Today.

Frank H. Warder, former State Superintendent of Banks, accused of accepting a $10,000 bribe for omitting an examination of the City Trust Company, which failed subsequently for $5,000,000, is scheduled to go on trial this morning before Supreme Court Justice Tompkins.

Before the task of selecting a jury from the specially drawn panel of 200 begins Justice Tompkins expects to receive the pleas of two officials of the defunct financial institution, who, with twelve others, including former Judge Francis X. Mancuso, were indicted last week. These two are Anthony Di Paola, treasurer of the City Trust Company, and Frederico Ferrari, executive vice president and brother of the late Frank M. Ferrari, president of the company.

Two Aided the State.

Of the fourteen indicted, the twelve already arraigned have pleaded not guilty to charges of misdemeanors and some felonies which might have brought about or contributed to the bank's insolvency. Di Paola, who turned State's evidence, is said to have helped materially in providing the evidence warranting indictments of others. Ferrari, it is understood, helped materially, though less so than Di Paola.

The charge on which Mr. Warder is to be tried is only one of eleven brought against him by the special grand jury which was convened after Governor Roosevelt appointed Justice Tompkins to call a special term of court for the handling of all cases developing from the failure of the bank. Nine of the indictments against the former head of the State Banking Department are for felonies. The other two are for misdemeanors.

Special Prosecutor Hiram Todd and Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings probably will summon about twenty witnesses for the State. The defense may have as many. The trial is expected to last several days.

Much Documentary Evidence.

A great deal of documentary evidence is expected to be introduced by the prosecution. Among the State's exhibits, it is understood, will be the lease for Mr. Warder's apartment, guaranteed by the City Trust Company's late president.

The trial, which now seems about to start, was scheduled to open a fortnight ago, but an attempt by James I. Cuff, attorney for the former Banking Superintendent, to obtain a change of venue for his client, delayed it. The application for transfer of the case to another county was based on the contention that public feeling in New York County had been so aroused by newspaper stories of the bank's failure that a fair trial was impossible here. Supreme Court Justice Townley, before whom the motion was made, refused to accede to the request.

FOR HOUSING LAW CHANGE.

La Guardia and Thomas Favor Revision of Tenement Measure.

F. H. La Guardia, Republican candidate for Mayor, and Norman Thomas, his Socialist opponent, have announced themselves as favoring amendments to the multiple dwellings law to aid housing in the city. Their attitude was expressed in letters answering queries sent to them by Stanley M. Isaacs, chairman of the housing committee of the United Neighborhood Houses. A similar query was addressed to Mayor Walker, but according to the announcement of the organization no reply was received.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

Harold Lloyd's Talking Comedy.

WELCOME DANGER, with Harold Lloyd, Barbara Kent, Noah Young, Charles Middleton and William Walling; Paramount Sound News. At the Rivoli Theatre.

One after another the hitherto silent players are heard in talking films, and the latest is Harold Lloyd, whose audible comedy, "Welcome Danger," is now at the Rivoli. Mr. Lloyd's voice may not be particularly impressive, but it suits his personality. And what more can one ask?

This film provoked gales of laughter yesterday afternoon and at the same time quite a number of those in the audience appeared to be thoroughly satisfied at the outcome of the feverish happenings. It is a picture filled with many ingenious gags, but the dialogue is invariably amateurish. It is hilarious, but never as appealing as "Speedy," Mr. Lloyd's last effort. It has a series of wildly farcical incidents which are none the less frequently funny. While one laughs at them, one may also comment on how silly they are, especially the antics down in a cellar in some place in San Francisco's Chinatown.

This film has, however, the virtue of being original in most of the escapades, and Mr. Lloyd seizes upon opportunities to gain some effects from silence when he is alone in a scene.

Mr. Lloyd's character this time is, for some vague reason, a Boston botany student. Little is made of this fact, for Harold Bledsoe (Mr. Lloyd) is called to San Francisco, where his father had been chief of police.

While en route to California Harold decides to have his photograph taken by a coin-in-the-slot machine. He is not aware that Billie Lee, played by the attractive Barbara Kent, had tried the machine before him without success. He is naturally astonished when the picture is forthcoming to see a girl with him in the photograph.

Yards of this film are used up with scenes of a ride in a rough-and-tumble automobile, owned by Billie, who is driving her crippled brother to the Golden Gate City, where she believes that a Dr. Gow can cure the boy.

Harold, who is an absentminded young man, at first believes that Billie is a youth, because she is dressed in overalls. After he has scolded Billie and treated her none too gently, he is amazed one afternoon to see her emerge from a camping tent with her hair nicely done and wearing a becoming frock.

Nobody can complain about the mass of material in this production, for when Harold reaches San Francisco what strikes one as a new story begins. Harold finds himself absorbed in the Bertillon fingerprinting system, and it is his idea that the Police Department ought to have the fingerprints of everybody, which, to the discomfort of the uniformed men, he sets out to do.

John Thorne, the head of a drug ring, who poses as an influential reformer, finds Harold a pest, for the young fingerprint expert chances to see Thorne's thumb mark on his (Thorne's) panama hat, and forthwith, while Thorne's attention is monopolized by Police Captain Walton and others, Harold cuts out a piece of the brim.

In this cumbersome yarn Captain Walton and others finally give Harold a fingerprint of Thorne's, telling the diligent youth that it is that of "The Dragon," a sinister character sought by the police. "The Dragon" is suspected in the course of events of knowing something about the kidnapping of Doctor Gow.

Eventually Harold proves that he isn't such a nurnbskull as Captain Walton and the other policemen imagined.

Mr. Lloyd might easily curtail some of the lengthy episodes in Chinatown, for there is a great deal too much of the pummeling, the scurrying around in the dark and other farcical actions.

During the siege in the Chinatown building, Harold and Policeman Clancy are forced to use candles and Clancy puts his candle on the back of a turtle. Slow though this animal's movements are, they are fast enough to get the candle out of sight for the moment while Clancy's head is turned. Then there is the ludicrous idea of the candle reappearing.

RASPUTIN, with Vladimir Gaidaroff, Suzanne Delmar, Ernst Ruekert, Fritz Alberti, Hedwig Wangel, Gregor Chmara, Mary Kid and Hans Albers, produced by the Memento Film Company, of Berlin; directed by Nikolaf Larin; "Mickey's Follies," a cartoon; "Dear Vivian," a talking comedy; "The Song of the Builder;" A Ufa undersea film. At the Cameo.

Considering what it might have been, the Russo-German motion picture dealing with the last two years of Rasputin's existence is most disappointing. Nikolai Larin, the director, and Boris Newolin, the author of the manuscript, stress the monk's licentiousness and his repellent appearance, but the expected dramatic incidents connected with his murder are wholly ignored. M. Larin contents himself with a reference in a subtitle to the killing of the monk and by showing an overshoe, supposed to have belonged to Rasputin, on the Neva embankment.

Gregor Chmara plays the debauched priest, and although his make-up is singularly effective, he is often guilty of overacting to an extent that causes some of the sequences to border on the ridiculous. Granted that many of of those associated with the monk were either fools or knaves, they could never have been so utterly blind to his conduct as they are in this film. In one scene, which has some little drama that proved somewhat effective to an audience yesterday afternoon, Rasputin is ingloriously inebriated. He dances on a table from which he eventually falls. A young soldier, the son of a prominent family and the only one apparently gifted with common sense, tosses the contents of a wineglass at the monk and then slaps the drunken priest's face.

The monk is introduced by emphasizing his dirty foot-prints on the broad palace stairway. M. Larin has seen to it that there is enough mud on Rasputin's shoes to last for every step and then he emphasizes the effect by flashing to the stairs again.

The full figure of the monk comes to view when he is gazing at a nude painting in a hall. He winks then pulls out a knife and cuts a cross on the picture. Later, when surrounded by a sychophantic throng of men and women, he makes a sign of a cross as he gazes reproachfully at the painting from a distance. When Rasputin has left, the picture is examined and it is believed that the cutting was a result of his mystical power.

Rasputin is also perceived having a much needed bath and one is surprised that he does not change his clothes or have his boots cleaned.

Inasmuch as the producers went to some trouble to make this picture, it is astonishing that they did not take a little more trouble, not only in illustrating the details of the slaying of the priest, but also in sketching his early life, which could have been unusually compelling, for Rasputin was a thief before entering the monastery where he studied the Scriptures.

During one juncture in this film singing is heard, and while there is a man supposed to be singing the voice does not synchronize with the movements of his lips.

Among other films on the surrounding program is an amusing cartoon called "Mickey's Follies" and a talking comedy, with Sam Hardy and Raymond Hatton, which is a crude piece of work. A short Ufa undersea film is quite clever and "The Song of the Builder" is not without merit.

A FAST-MOVING FILM.

"Sailor's Holiday" Abounds in Unreasonable Situations.

SAILOR'S HOLIDAY, with Alan Hale, Sally Eilers, George Cooper, Paul Hurst, Mary Carr and Charles Clary, directed by Fred Newmeyer; "Fifty Miles from Broadway," musical short; "Musical Marionettes," a sound novelty. At the Colony.

The first of the films that might be expected to appear in the wake of "The Cock-Eyed World" has arrived at the Colony, tagged "Sailor's Holiday." Slightly disguised in naval garb and replete with "Oh, yeahs?" dance-hall sequences and unreasonable situations, which only sailors, at least those in this film, seem to understand, this robust story of a sailor's holiday falls short of being good entertainment.

Coincidence is not only the root of all evil in this story, but the panacea as well, for if Shorty, the smaller of the two shipmates, hadn't fallen for a single "fall gag," he and Adam, the other gob, wouldn't have entangled themselves in so many difficulties. Moreover, the member of the naval police who haunts their waking hours wouldn't turn out to be the long-lost brother of the girl falsely accused of larceny.

There are many points in this film that might bear explanation. For example, the advisability of allowing an intelligent-looking heroine to stop every sailor she meets to ask him if he knows of her long-lost brother named Jones, who ran off to sea when young.

A MOST IMMORAL LADY, with Leatrice Joy, Sidney Blackmer, Walter Pidgeon, Montagu Love and Josephine Dunn; directed by John Griffith Wray; a program of sound shorts, sound newsreel; Herbert Heidt and orchestra. At the Hippodrome.

With a few flourishes of extravagance, characteristic of so many motion pictures, and a rather slow tempo, "A Most Immoral Lady" has been brought to the screen of the Hippodrome, with Leatrice Joy playing the rôle in which Alice Brady was seen on the stage.

Miss Joy is a mature player, and while her acting is not distinguished by any particularly brilliant performance, she neatly, if a bit stolidly, interprets the part of the lady who is a partner to a scheme to mulct millionaires by compromising them.

The talking picture reaches a crisis when her husband, the other member of the combination, carries on the scheme once too often, attempting to victimize a man she really loves and had not intended to betray. Subsequently, the blackmail plot is uprooted as is the marital combination. She goes off to Paris where, as an entertainer in a night club, she is found again by her true lover.

The story has not gained by being transferred from the footlights to the screen. The few additions, one in the form of a lavish entertainment by the younger set, hardly propel the story forward. Judged as cinema, the film is immobile and remains too long in an identical atmosphere.

As the malicious husband, Sidney Blackmer is most credible and gives a restrained performance. Walter Pidgeon, as the lover, is stalwart and conventional.

On the same program, besides an uproariously funny "Mickey the Mouse" cartoon, is to be seen Horace Heidt and his orchestra, with which he goes through a series of speedy musical numbers, including the rendition of a tender college song that reverberated strangely in the vast reaches of the Hippodrome. The audience at the matinee yesterday liked it.

Other Photoplays.

Cohan; "Sunny Side Up," at the Gaiety; "Disraeli," at Warner's, and "Gold Diggers of Broadway," at the Winter Garden.

William Hain, Tenor, Sings.

William Hain, tenor, presented a program of short solos at the Barbizon yesterday afternoon delightfully. The singer's voice possesses much variety of tone color, especially in the extreme low register, where its fullness suggests a baritone. Mr. Hain's enunciation was not always what it might have been.

The Barbizon String Quartet, which has assisted at these intimate recitals for the last few weeks, was not up to its usual standard. Its playing of Mozart's "Quartet" in B major (K. V. 458) suffered from a tendency of the first violinist to force his tone above the other members of the quartet and by a tempo which seemed to the hearer much too fast.

STARS UNVEIL STATUES OF WOMEN OF STAGE

Four I. Miller Building Marbles Depict Actresses and Singer in Famous Roles.

Four marble statues of women of the stage, which have been placed in gold-lined niches in the south wall of the I. Miller Building at Broadway and Forty-sixth Street, were unveiled yesterday afternoon before a crowd of 3,000. Mayor Walker made the concluding address, paid tribute to the late I. Miller, who planned the statues two years ago as a gift to the city.

Two of the actresses represented in characteristic rôles by the stone figures executed by A. Stirling Calder, Marilyn Miller and Rosa Ponselle, took part in the ceremonies, jointly unveiling the statue of Mary Pickford as "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Miss Miller's statue, which portrayed her in her favorite rôle of "Sunny," was unveiled by De Wolf Hopper.

Daniel Frohman reminisced of the triumphs of theatrical families of the past generation as he drew aside the canvas curtains to reveal the carved figure of Ethel Barrymore as Ophelia. Miss Ponselle's statue, in the rôle of Norma, was unveiled by Elsie Ferguson.

Others present included Gertrude Lawrence, Willis Howard, R. H. Burnside, Paul Meyer, Bide Dudley, Rita Weiman, Mario Basiola, James Powers, Richard Herndon and Evelyn Herbert.

A PLAY OF MERRIMENT.

The Yiddish Folks Theatre is presenting, for its initial production of the season, "His Wife's Lover," a musical comedy by Sheine Rochel Semkoff, with music by Abe Ellstein and lyrics by Boris Rosenthal.

Herman Wyngard, a handsome young actor, is an ardent advocate for the tender passion; his uncle, Oscar Stein, owner of a large factory, is a bachelor and confirmed misogynist. Herman expatiates upon the raptures of love in a catchy song, to which Uncle Oscar replies by wagering $10,000 that a true woman doesn't exist. Idealistic Herman immediately challenges in defense of the maligned sex, and the play is on.

Goldele, a poor girl in Stein's employ, is chosen for the experiment. Herman disguises himself as an old but extremely wealthy man and Rolls-Royces it to Goldele's tenement. Goldele, whom Stein has forced to leave her job, is destitute and has a little sister to provide for. She bewails her fate in a beautifully written duet with her cousin, Frieda, and advertises in the newspapers for a husband.

Several burlesque prospects present themselves, to be driven out by Goldele's aunt. Finally comes Herman in whiskers and expensive clothes, and a match is made. Frieda also takes a spouse, as a will promises to keep her in linen and lingerie the rest of her days, providing she marries.

In the second act, which opens in Wyngard's garden at Sea Gate, much merriment is made over a disagreement between Cousin Frieda and her mate, and the burlesque attempts of the apparently old husband, Herman, to make love to his young wife. As the curtain falls Uncle Oscar's betting fortunes are in the ascendant, Herman having won a wife but obviously not her love.

Now comes the crux of the play—the young wife's trial! Herman is called away on business, and a handsome young actor, his bosom friend, arrives in his absence and lays siege to the affections of Herman's wife. Oscar gloats over the $10,000 that will be his when the married but lovelorn Goldele elopes with the suitor. As Goldele is on the edge of destruction, her womanhood reasserts itself, and she cries out: "Away from my sight, false friend! I will remain true to my husband!" This declaration convinces Uncle Oscar that love is a reality, after all. Frieda and her husband are reconciled, and Herman discloses his identity.

Hackneyed in plot, limited in the apparatus of production so essential to the success of this type of entertainment, "His Wife's Lover," nevertheless, makes a pleasant evening, partly because of the tunefulness of the music and partly owing to the burlesque acting of Ludwig Satz and the able support given by Fanny Lubritzky, Miriom Belavsky, Regina Zuckerberg, Peter Graff and Rebecca Weintraub.

MELODRAMA ON EAST SIDE.

LOVE AND POLITICS, a melodrama in four acts, by Max Gabel, with incidental music by Herman Wohl. Staged and produced by Mr. Gabel. At Gabel's Public Theatre, Second Avenue and Fourteenth Street.

Scar-Mike Hootch	Sam Sasson

In this play Max Gabel, the author, who is also leading actor, manager, owner and director of the Public Theatre, heaps incident upon incident. In the rough, the play is a fine piece of melodramatic technique. It is the skeleton of a perfect drama. Of all the Gabel plays this reviewer has seen he considers "Love and Politics" the best balanced and best performed.

But what a pity that the author has not learned to put flesh upon his skeletons, that he has failed to wed Caliban to Ariell Not to him was it given to create a Romeo and Juliet, though it is precisely what he attempts to do. The Montagues, the political party in power, and the Capulets, the reform party in the play, are fighting with their modern weapons—press, graft, blackmail. In the end the death of their two children unites the fighting chieftains.

Mr. Gabel uses his actors as the sculptor his clay. He is one of the few Yiddish stage directors who succeeds in ensemble playing. Much of the success reaped by the Gabel plays is due to the leading woman, Jennie Goldstein, in private life Mrs. Gabel. To her falls the task of interpreting human sorrow and despair. It is hard to act naturally in such circumstances, but Miss Goldstein does it.

An innovation on the Yiddish stage is the half-Yiddish, half-English dialogue. The rôle of the political boss, McManus, is played by a Gentile, and all in English.

RUSSIAN CHOIR APPEARS.

Gives Compositions Seldom Heard in This Country.

The Russian Symphonic Choir, in colorful attire, presented a long program of Russian choral compositions at Town Hall yesterday afternoon. Many of the arrangements were by its conductor, Basile Kibalchih. Music by composers seldom heard in this country covered a wide range.

The choir is uneven in tone, quality and interpretation in its various sections. The overuse of humming caused it to lose its appeal.

One of the best numbers of the afternoon was an encore sung in Russian, "God Have Mercy." In this the natural interpretation and feeling of the individuals were allowed full rein by the conductor.

Many of those in the large and enthusiastic audience were compatriots of the singers.

Immediate Relief!

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention, it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after-effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn — now — why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

BOY VIOLINIST, 9, CREATES A FUROR

Ruggiero Ricci Cheered on His Debut With Manhattan Symphony at Mecca Temple.

HAS PHENOMENAL TALENT

By OLIN DOWNES.

Plans of musicians and of a new organization for the wider dissemination of orchestral music were set askew last night in Mecca Temple by the advent of another very young and phenomenally gifted violinist, Ruggiero Ricci, whose first appearance in New York with the newly organized Manhattan Symphony Orchestra created a furor which reminded those present of the appearance of Yehudi Menuhin two years ago in Carnegie Hall, two blocks away. The audience broke into cheers at the first opportunity, which came at the end of the opening movement of the concert. The second movement and the finale confirmed the impression of the first, and in the intermission the lobbies buzzed with the talk of a new and precocious talent—just 9 years of age—come to town.

This is the predominant and almost regrettably conspicuous news of the occasion. The objectives of the concert were not concerned with the sensational exploitation of young talent. The occasion was the first concert of the new Manhattan Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Henry Hadley, performing at popular prices, and giving especial attention to the works of Americans. One distinguished American composer, Henry Gilbert, who will receive in years to come a greater recognition than is his today, was represented on this program by his Nocturne for orchestra, played for the first time in this city. There were other suggestive and provocative characteristics of the occasion, including a concert which began half an hour late, and put no one in good humor. But all these considerations were forgotten when Master Ricci stepped on the stage and without ado swung into the opening measures of the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

It was immediately apparent that the boy had something to say, that he was playing with a native fire, musical sensitiveness and taste which are much more phenomenal and rare than the mere physical dexterity which permits a very young person to fiddle his way through the difficulties of the Mendelssohn concerto. More than one young gentleman has fiddled nimbly and accurately through these passages, and been puffed in the press and in a little while has permanently disappeared. But there are sound reasons for the belief that the tone and the talent heard last night will develop and become more mature as regards physical strength and poetical expression, since taste, feeling and an admirable sense of proportion were the distinguishing qualities of last night's performance.

Its poise was the more surprising in view of the temperamental qualities of the playing. This was quickly shown, not in the rapid passages which in some respects are easiest to interpret, but when the diminutive performer came to the second theme of the first movement; when he enunciated with the utmost beauty and distinction of style the cantilena of the slow movement (especially its recapitulation), and in his firm grip of tempi in the finale.

This finale is a tempting bait for the unscrupulous virtuoso, and violinists much older, experienced and reputed than Master Ricci today rush through it to show what they are capable of in the way of bravura. Last night the orchestra was too heavy for the solo violin in this place and the conductor took a faster tempo than Ricci wanted. The result was a ragged relation between orchestra and the soloist at the beginning, and a remarkable tribute to clear thinking and self-control on the part of a young boy—the establishment by the violinist, and not by the orchestra, of the proper tempo of the movement. It was the boy who steadied the orchestra and not the orchestra which steadied the boy. The result was a finale taken at the just tempo—a tempo which, for a rarity, made possible the proper melodic expansion of the singing themes which alternate with the rapid figuration of other pages. Thus the finale, for once, had its true character, and was not butchered for a virtuoso's holiday.

Aural indications of the salad days of the performer were trills which now and again gave evidence of fingers not as strong as they will be, and a tone naturally lighter than the tone that is to come. But always it was a living, warm, and, on occasion, brilliant tone. It had a hundred shades of color in it, despite a violin with its own limitations of size and quality. It was the playing of an Italian, with the inborn suppleness, sensitiveness and lyrical feeling of his race, as also that clear precision which seems a characteristic of the best Italian minds. And it was the playing of one born to play his instrument.

Master Ricci was born in San Francisco nine years ago. He gave his first public recital in that city on Nov. 15 last. Three years ago he went to the studio of Louis Persinger, the teacher of Yehudi Menuhin, and studied with Mr. Persinger and his assistant, Miss Beth Lackey. He won two prizes last year in San Francisco. He will give a recital in this city on Nov. 28. It will then be possible to discover whether he is at present the gifted interpreter of one work, or whether he has already, so to speak, other strings to his bow.

The Manhattan Symphony Orchestra, which is of full symphonic dimensions, numbering more than a hundred players, is naturally not the perfectly finished and tonally adjusted orchestra that is possible only with years of rehearsal and the most careful selection and testing of the individual players. It performed with marked esprit for an opening number, the diverting music of Reznicek's overture to "Donna Anna." It followed this with concert transcriptions which are not particularly impressive or desirable of Liszt's "Liebestraume," Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song," and "Tambourine Chinois" of Kreistler—transcriptions which need not detain us.

The work of novelty and importance, aside from Tchaikovsky's fourth symphony, which closed the program, was Gilbert's "Nocturne," first played by the Philadelphia Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, at the Philadelphia concerts of March 16 and 17 of 1928. The music was inspired by Whitman's rapturous apostrophe to the night ("I am he that walks with the tender and growing night"). Gilbert desired, above all things, to write simply and in a melodic manner, and his score was in part a protest, as all his music, against the sophistications and artificialities of much contemporaneous music. The music of the "Nocturne" is poetic, inescapably sincere.

A single melodic thought is unfolded, in long lines, as one might say breaths, from the harmonies of wind instruments which make the beginning. The mood is lofty, the expression becomingly simple. At the same time we do not consider this one of Gilbert's most representative compositions. The instrumental coloring is delicate, quiet in its tints, but certain balances were open last night to question.

Whether this was due to the performance or not is a matter beyond present knowledge, but the impression was that the hiatus lay in the scoring. Mr. Hadley conducted with evident solicitude for the work of a former friend and colleague. The audience received the music well.

INDIAN BAND PLAYS JAZZ TUNES AT PALACE

The Palace supposedly is still the empurpled First Theatre of vaudeville and its bills the cream of that form of entertainment, or what remains of it in these talkie days. This week, however, is an off one at Forty-seventh Street and Seventh Avenue, and the show is little more than skimmed milk. It does have the virtue of getting better as it goes along, the second part being superior to the first, but it is decidedly below what should be the prevailing standard at the Mount Everest of the varieties.

In the course of the present program there is plenty of music, of one kind or another. The beneficent effects of civilization upon this country's aborigines are demonstrated by a full-blooded Indian band, which plays jazz tunes just as earnestly and as noisily as do the syncopated philharmonics of the Messrs. Whiteman, Lopez and Bernie, and then goes them one better—or worse—by including a rather servile plea to regard the poor redskin as no different from any other common, or garden, variety of homo Americanus, Broadway style. The Indians were the objects of great regard on the part of yesterday afternoon's audience, which refused time and again to let them disappear from the scene.

By way of further variety a Korean band, inclined toward the gentler, softer harmonies, turns up in the last act, which otherwise is mostly given over to the dancing of a pair who answer to the name of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lyte. There is more "hoofing" of a good enough sort in a revue turn contrived by Carl Shaw, which enlists the services of several none too prepossessing entertainers.

The actress who, in an unaccountable burst of optimism, once elected to take the stage name of Marion Sunshine has again teamed with Florenz Tempest in a sister act, the particular assets of which are Miss Sunshine's parody impression of Helen Kane and her impersonation of Lenore Ulric in Mr. Belasco's "Mima." Ina Williams, a Ray Dooley type of comedienne, cuts capers of a moderately comical sort with Jere Delaney, in the course of which one of the nicer Rodgers and Hart songs, "You Took Advantage of Me," fares none too well.

George K. Arthur, who, they say, has been funny in pictures, appears in an Al Boasberg sketch, "Port Arms," as the latest of the Hollywood somebodies to attempt an ill-advised invasion of vaudeville. In introducing the foregoing acts and the several others which make up the bill, the quick tongued Julius Tannen spares few laudatory adjectives as he entreats the audience to give each performer "a typical Palace welcome." In a brief number of his own he gets off some amusing quips.

PRINCETON'S DEFEAT UPSET OF FOOTBALL

Georgia's Victory Over North Carolina U. and Columbia's Rout Also Surprise.

THREE TEAMS STAND OUT

YALE AND N. Y. U. RECOVER

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

For the most part the football games of the past Saturday had their surprises in the type of scores rather than in the results. Princeton's defeat at the hands of Cornell, apparently a convincing victory, was a surprise and it had not been expected that Georgia would quite be able to stop North Carolina. Except for these two games and the crushing size of Dartmouth's score against Columbia, play went about as expected. Even in this game Dartmouth had been a reasonable favorite before the start.

With the season almost at its halfway point, the strength of the various colleges is becoming pretty definitely settled. Harvard, Dartmouth and the Army stand out among the teams of the East and Pennsylvania, with its fine effort against California, must be considered among the leaders of this section.

Cornell apparently is a good deal stronger than it has been in a number of years. The fashion in which the Cornell team held Princeton from any scoring, except that on a runback of a kick-off by Wittmer, indicates a brilliant defense, and the Red and White clearly earned its margin over the Tiger.

Princeton, already twice defeated, and with its only victory a 7-to-0 decision over Amherst, is weaker than it has been in some years and faces anything but a pleasant prospect during the next two weeks with Navy and Chicago coming to Princeton. Injuries have held back the Tiger to some extent, but the team has not been playing good football.

N. Y. U. and Yale Recover.

Two teams defeated the previous Saturday in surprising fashion came back to the winning column. Yale turned back Brown and New York University, with Myers in his new rôle as a running back, stood off the determined challenge of Penn State.

Both of these victories were very valuable to the winning side from the standpoint of morale as well as the actual triumph. If either had been defeated again the coaches would have had a hard job bringing them back for the last half of the season.

Myers, New York's running guard, made good in his first game as a back-field man. Myers had been used to some extent in the back field, but this was the first game in which he had been the mainspring of the attack, and he came through handsomely.

Fordham, following its sensational toppling of New York University, had a desperate fight on its hands with Holy Cross and came near to failing. In the end it was the air that gave the Maroon its victory, with a fine catch and run by Murphy. Fordham, facing unexpected resistance, played courageous, heady football to come back.

Pennsylvania's fine stand against California was a real achievement and it added to the worth of the Westerners' victory that came to them after their long trip across the continent.

Lom Proved Great Star.

California's Benny Lom proved to the East that he is among the game's best, but Pennsylvania also proved that it is among the strongest teams of the district and apt to improve as week succeeds week.

The 24 to 0 defeat suffered by Columbia was a bitter disappointment to those Columbia men who had built high hopes for their team. Succeeding weeks may prove, however, that Columbia was facing the outstanding team of the East. Dartmouth played excellent football and Al Marsters continued among the fine ball carriers of the game. This Dartmouth team has the first real running attack that the Green has had in years with apparently a fine line in front of it. After Dartmouth's game against Harvard this week, Columbia people may not feel so badly over their defeat.

Harvard and Army Strong.

The thrilling tie game at Cambridge proved to the satisfaction of all 60,000 in the Harvard Stadium that the Crimson has its strongest team in years, perhaps since the war, and that Army, despite its awkwardness in its opening games, has another great Army team; that Captain Biff Jones in his final season as coach is building as well as he has done during his régime.

There have been few more exciting games than this one and few rougher ones. The play was fierce from the opening whistle, with the officials working hard to keep it in control and the players of both sides giving everything they had on every play.

None of the scores came through opponents' weakness. They were all clearly earned; even Harvard's last minute pass, though a long chance, was a finished, polished play. The game was one of the best Eastern gridirons have seen in years.

Georgia's defeat of North Carolina in the South filled the Southern Bulldog's cup to overflowing and made them the outstanding eleven of the section. Florida fell before the already beaten Georgia Tech team, Navy and Georgetown each came through with something to spare.

In the West, Notre Dame continued its great football to decisively outplay Wisconsin, and Colgate gave further proof of its strength with a clear cut victory over Indiana. Ohio State stopped Michigan and Iowa and Illinois played a 7 to 7 tie.

On the Pacific Coast the favored teams came through handsomely.

Syracuse Leads by One Point In Scoring; Dartmouth Next

Syracuse swept across the second century mark in the scoring of points among college elevens last week through its defeat of Johns Hopkins by 15 to 6 in their night game, played Saturday, and took the lead from Dartmouth by a single point, their respective totals being 223 and 222.

HARVARD TEAM FIT AFTER ARMY GAME

DARTMOUTH NEXT ON LIST

Running Attack and Defense Called Lacking Against Cadets—Biggest Gains Made in the Air.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 20.—The Harvard football coaches believe that no serious toll was taken in the Army game yesterday. The policy to keep the outfit away from hard contact football last week brought the squad to a fine edge for playing the Cadets, and Saturday's game, while hard fought all the way, brought no real injuries so far as is known.

For many of the players another light week is likely to be in order, with Dartmouth's strong eleven coming here again on Saturday. Harvard's big thrill out of the game with the West Pointers came mainly because of its ability to score its first and then its tying score by means of its forward-passing game, and to get another touchdown by means of intercepting an Army pass.

The running attack and the defense were far from satisfactory. The Soldiers gained about 300 yards by rushing and passing, and covered 38 yards in nine rushes in plays started inside Harvard's 25-yard line.

Harvard lost three chances to score by drop kick and missed a goal from touchdown. The big improvement over the Army game of last year was in the work of the ends and the backs, and that mainly measured by the efficiency of the pupils of Eddie Casey and Eddie Bradford on forward passes. In the game Harvard's running attack netted only about 86 yards, while seven completed forwards carried the ball over nearly 175 yards of ground, of which 150 was on the Soldiers' end of the field.

PLAYER'S NECK DISLOCATED

Delaware University Football Centre in Serious Condition.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Del., Oct. 20.—James Caleb Boggs, centre on the University of Delaware football team, who was injured in the Susquehanna College game yesterday, is still in a serious condition in a Wilmington hospital. His neck is dislocated and there is a possible fracture of one vertebra, physicians said tonight.

TWO YALE REGULARS OUT WITH INJURIES

Coach Stevens Says Team Showed Improvement Against Brown—Light Drill Today.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 20.—Yale has lost two and possibly three varsity football players for the Army game because of injuries received in yesterday's stubbornly contested game with Brown. Frank Marting, left tackle, and Dan Hickok, left end, are first-string players who are believed to have no chance of playing next Saturday in what may prove Yale's most difficult contest of the season.

Marting is believed to have broken a small bone in his foot. It will probably be two or three weeks before he is able to return to the play. If he fully recovers in time to take part in the games with Princeton and Harvard, the Blue's chances will be improved. Hickok has a badly twisted knee. The injury was painful today and he will probably not resume practice until next week.

May Be Used for Drop Kicking.

Harold Cruikshank, second-string fullback, suffered a badly bruised shoulder and may be able to practice late this week. He is Yale's best drop kicker, except Albie Booth, all-around star, and played most of yesterday's game at fullback. It is possible he may be sent against the Army for emergency drop kicking.

No other injuries were received yesterday, but the players will have light work until Tuesday, when three days of scrimmaging, planned by Head Coach Stevens in preparation for the Army encounter, will begin. The program for tomorrow will include a corrective talk and drill in the fundamentals, a department in which Stevens still feels his players are faulty.

Stevens said tonight that he felt that Yale has improved since the defeat at Georgia but that the team has yet a long way to go before it reaches its possibilities. He was pleased with the improvement in the play of the line yesterday, also with the defense for the Brown forward pass, which the Yale coaches regarded one of the most difficult problems of the season to meet.

Brown Aerials Not Effective.

The Fogarty-to-Edwards toss did not gain materially yesterday and the improvement in the line made possible the remarkable runs made by Albie Booth.

Stevens said tonight that it was not only impossible to name the players to succeed Marting and Hickok but that the coaches feel there are eleven open positions on the Yale eleven and that the daily practice this week will determine the line-up against the Army.

From all appearances Johnny Godman and Herster Barres will be the ends tried out to succeed Hickok at the opening of the week's practice for Army, and Ferris and Hawley will be the tackles to succeed Marting.

CANISIUS VICTOR, 13-6.

Conquers St. Vincent's Eleven, Scoring Twice on Passes.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 20 (AP).—Canisius registered its second football victory of the season today, defeating St. Vincent's College of Latrobe, Pa., 13 to 6.

Canisius scored in the second period when Fisher threw a thirty-five-yard pass to Mistretta, who was standing behind the goal line. Susty place kicked the goal. Ross's pass to Kirchner place St. Vincent's in position for the latter to plunge for a touchdown in the third period.

Canisius added its final score in the last period. Fisher took the ball to the seven-yard line and then passed to Bukaty for the touchdown.

COACH PRAISES WAKEMAN

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 20.—Princeton's football team arrived here this morning from Ithaca, smarting under the defeat administered yesterday by Cornell. Only one injury resulted from the Cornell clash, and that to Bill Barfield, tackle, the bulwark of the Princeton line.

With one victory and two defeats marked on their record, the Tiger eleven will begin work this week to meet the Navy next Saturday. In view of the fact that the two defeats which Princeton has received this Fall have been due to the Tiger inability to break up an aerial attack, it is believed Coach Roper will stress action in this phase of the game during the week. Captain Jack Whyte will be ready for the encounter next Saturday, having suffered no ill effects from taking part in three quarters of the Cornell game. Bill Moore and Dick Mestres, both guards, also are expected to be in the line-up against Navy.

Coach Roper said today that Cornell outplayed Princeton and deserved to win. He praised especially the pass defense of Cornell and the work of Captain Sam Wakeman, the Red and White tackle.

LEHIGH POINTS FOR PENN.

Will Put Powerful Eleven Into Saturday's Game.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Oct. 20.—Using reserve backs when the game against St. John's College yesterday was well in tow and barring injuries in scrimmage this week, Coach Tate will be able to toss the full strength of the Lehigh University offense against University of Pennsylvania when the Brown and White invades Philadelphia next Saturday after a lapse of twenty-four years.

Lehigh came through with the St. John's game without injuries, and will have available several of the men who had been on the sidelines.

The team will have two complete sets of backs to rely on in the Penn game, and replacements can be made with little impairment of strength.

N. Y. U. TO PREPARE FOR BUTLER GAME

Violet's First Intersectional Contest Will Be at Yankee Stadium Saturday.

SQUAD IS IN GOOD SHAPE

Coach Chick Meehan will begin today preparing the New York University football team for its first intersectional game of the season, scheduled for Saturday at the Yankee Stadium with Butler University of Indianapolis. The Violet squad came out of its game with Penn State in good condition.

The conversion of Dave Myers, veteran guard, into a quarterback, and the work of Charlie Marshall, an end, as a kicker, showed that Meehan's experimentations during the past week were to advantage. It is expected that the Violet coach will continue to use the La Mark, Bella, Jones and Myers back field in the practice sessions this week.

Saturday's game with Butler University will be the half-way mark on the most ambitious schedule New York University ever has attempted and leaves the Violet team with the task of still having to face Georgetown, the University of Georgia, Missouri, Rutgers and Carnegie Tech on successive weeks. The Georgia and Missouri games are the two other intersectional contests N. Y. U. will appear in this season.

Butler University will come here with a veteran team which last year won six of eight contests, losing only to Northwestern and Illinois. The team is coached by George (Potsy) Clark, a former Big Ten star.

FORDHAM GAME SHIFTED.

Maroon to Play Davis and Elkins at Polo Grounds Saturday.

The large advance sale for Fordham's football game with Davis and Elkins on Saturday has made it advisable to move the contest to the Polo Grounds from Fordham Field, where it was to be played originally, it was announced yesterday. The change is the second made by a metropolitan institution this season, the first being when the New York University-West Virginia Wesleyan game was transferred from Ohio Field to the Polo Grounds.

A scholastic double-header also is scheduled for the Polo Grounds on Saturday. At 9 A. M. Morris High School and Seward Park High School will meet on the field, followed at 10:45 by a contest between Evander Childs and James Monroe.

COLUMBIA ELEVEN NOT DISHEARTENED

Although defeated, 34–0, by Dartmouth on Saturday, the Columbia football team is not as disheartened or discouraged as one would believe. The one big objective of the Lions from now on is to redeem themselves for the defeat at the hands of the Green and to try to bring to Morningside Heights victories in the five remaining games on the Blue and White schedule.

Everywhere Columbians gathered yesterday they discussed the Dartmouth game, and while the large score rolled up by the visitors was rathed unexpected, they were generous in their praises of Jack Cannell's impressive squad. The Dartmouth victory was not begrudged a single bit as it was achieved by a superior team.

The Lions probably will have an easy day today in order to give the men a chance to recuperate from the hard-fought encounter with Dartmouth.

Many minor injuries were received by Columbia players on Saturday. Trainer Doc Barrett stated yesterday that none of the mishaps were serious, however, and that every man on the squad should be in good condition within a day or two. Jim Campbell, veteran centre, who collapsed during the second half, is nursing a deep cut over his left eye, which required five stitches to close. Remy Tys, Ed Weinstock and Bill McDuffee, have slight bruises.

CARLISLE ARMY BEATS NAVY YARD TEAM, 31-0

PLAY OF WILLIAMS A NAVY SURPRISE

NOW POINT TO PRINCETON

Players Will Be Accompanied to Saturday's Contest by Regiment and Band.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 20.—Encouraged by the work of the team in the larger part of the game with Duke yesterday, Bill Ingram and his helpers will start tomorrow to get the Naval Academy team in shape for its game at Princeton on Saturday, not forgetting Pennsylvania and Georgetown, its opponents next in order.

Yesterday's game was featured not only by better back-field work in general but by the surprising showing at quarterback of Rusty Williams, who had just been promoted from the second squad. Williams gained regularly from scrimmage up to 30 yards and did some high-grade passing.

Ingram now will have to choose among Kohlhas, Castree and Williams, all excellent quarterbacks, for the start of the Princeton game.

Clifton, the powerful fullback, who did not play against Duke, is expected to be in shape for the Princeton game, but it is unlikely that Johnny Gannon, who has been on the hospital list nearly the entire season, will be able to play.

The regiment of more than 2,000 midshipmen, with its fine band, will attend the game at Princeton. The contest is regarded as the big home game for the Tigers this year, as Yale is played at New Haven.

OHIO STATE LEADS IN BIG TEN RACE

IOWA SCORED AN UPSET.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20 (AP).—With Ohio State leading the parade, four teams remained in the running tonight for the Western Conference gridiron championship, with second round games out of the way.

The Buckeyes, with two victories, hold the spotlight, with Chicago, Minnesota and Purdue ranking next on the list with one victory apiece. Illinois, champion in 1927 and 1928, finds its progress to another undisputed championship blocked as the result of the 7 to 7 tie with Iowa yesterday. Michigan having lost twice, may be considered out of the race.

Four more games come up for decision next Saturday, but instead of clearing up the situation, these contests may only complicate it. Purdue, the first conqueror of Michigan this season, will engage Chicago at Stagg Field and one of the teams must fall by the wayside. Indiana will furnish the opposition for Ohio State at Columbus. The Hoosiers may be no opposition at all and may give the Buckeyes a chance to register their third straight victory.

Michigan will take the field against Illinois at Urbana with Iowa tackling Wisconsin at Madison. If the Wolverines suddenly come to life and defeat the Illini, they can change the complexion of the race.

With one exception, yesterday's games ran true to form. The big surprise was the achievement of Iowa in holding Illinois to a tie.

Minnesota, on sheer power alone, whipped Northwestern in the last ten minutes of play. Beaten, 14 to 0, the Gophers came back in the fourth period with a furious assault and piled up 17 points.

His sensational share in Minnesota's victory landed Pharmer at the top of the list of Big Ten scorers. Pharmer, in his first Conference game of the season, accounted for two Minnesota touchdowns, kicked two goals from the field and kicked two points after touchdowns to take the lead away from Alex Yunevich. Purdue's sensational sophomore fullback, who was idle yesterday.

The standing of the teams and the individual scoring in the Conference follow:

FRIEDMAN'S GIANTS WIN BEFORE 30,000

VICTORS SCORE ON PASSES

ONE FORWARD IS 43 YARDS

By ARTHUR J. DALEY.

Just to show a famous New Yorker what a New York team can do, the New York Football Giants crushed the Frankford Yellow Jackets, 32 to 0, at the Polo Grounds yesterday before former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Mrs. Smith and 30,000 other gridiron fans. Seated in a box in midfield on the Giant side of the field, ex-Governor Smith saw Benny Friedman, a New Yorker by adoption, toss three passes to give the Giants three touchdowns midway in the second period.

After Happ Moran had hauled down an 18-yard pass for the first touchdown and big Ray Flaherty had dragged down a forty-three-yard toss for the second and Jack (Ghost) Hagerty had plucked a twenty-five-yard heave out of the ozone for the third, the visitors were so accustomed to look up in the air for the Giant attack that they never saw Mule Wilson race 55 yards for a score in the third period. They also were unable to hold George Murtagh, a reformed centre who made his début in the back field with a 33-yard gallop for the final touchdown in the fourth session.

As soon as the game was over the crowd swarmed onto the field and carefully neglected their gridiron heroes in an effort to get a close-up of the former Governor. A cordon of police rushed to his rescue and managed to clear a lane through the crowd as Mr. and Mrs. Smith marched out of the Polo Grounds to the accompaniment of the loudest and heartiest cheering of the day.

Passes Gain 13 Yards.

The Frankford backs were stopped and checked all afternoon. They persisted in attempting to shatter that wall of beef and muscle known as the Giant line. Doing that was so much wasted effort, and since they had no passer that could compare with Friedman they completed only two passes for a total gain of 12 yards.

The game was opened with a 30-yard pass from Friedman to Jerry Snyder and with the ball on the Frankford 20-yard line the Giants made a first down on two plunges and Benny shot the ball carefully into the waiting arms of Snyder over the goal line, while the crowd roared, but Snyder dropped the pigskin.

Balked in that effort, Friedman started anew as soon as the Giants secured possession of the ball. He tossed 28 yards to Sedbrook and then passed over the goal line once more to lose the ball on a touchback. The Yellow Jackets managed to postpone the inevitable until the second period, when fourteen plays brought their downfall.

Whirls Ball to Moran.

First, Friedman sent the ball whirling to Moran in the corner of the field for the first score. The kick-off, two short Frankford plunges and a punt, brought the oval to the Giant 40-yard line. Feather wafted his bulk over the line for a short gain. Friedman passed to Moran for 20 yards. Two unsuccessful plays and a 40-yard pass to Flaherty and the resultant run unmolested over the goal line brought another touchdown.

Another kick-off followed, the Giants booting to the Yellow Jackets. On the first play Moran intercepted a pass on the Frankford 25-yard line. A line plunge failed and Friedman tossed a short pass to Hagerty, who whirled through the wide-open Frankford defense for a touchdown. That was the fourteenth play.

TIES STEAM ROLLERS, 7-7.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 20 (AP).—Buffalo held the Providence Steam Roller, professional football champions, to a 7-to-7 tie here today in a stubbornly waged National Professional Football League game. Buffalo came from behind to tie the score, counting on a 36-yard forward pass from Woodruff to Hagberg in the third quarter. Hagberg ran 8 yards after taking the pass for the touchdown.

Providence scored in the second period, hammering 19 yards through the line after Gibby Welch took a 12-yard forward from Jack McBride. Jack Cronin, former Boston College star, made the touchdown.

LEARY TALLIES 3 TIMES

The Stapleton football team swept over Atlantic City by a score of 37 to 0 yesterday at Thompson's Stadium, Staten Island, before 6,000 persons. Stapleton scored six touchdowns, mainly by means of a powerful aerial attack.

Ken Strong, former New York University back, hurled the ball to Tom Leary, Fordham end, for two touchdowns. He also intercepted a forward to score again.

Strong scored once, and on a long pass he gave the ball to Kuczo to score. Frank Briante made the last touchdown on a pass from Kuczo.

The broken field running of Hersh Martin of Missouri was another bright Stapleton spot. The diminutive back broke loose for several runs of twenty to thirty yards which were instrumental in taking the Stapes into the Atlantic City territory.

In the closing minutes of the last quarter the New Jersey team threw several successful forward passes, which carried the team to the Stapleton 10-yard line, a march of 80 yards. It likely would have terminated in a touchdown for Atlantic City had not the final whistle interrupted.

PEASE LEADS ORANGE TO UPHILL TRIUMPH

Former Columbia Back Figures in Two Touchdowns in 19 to 13 Victory at Boston.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—The Orange A. C. eleven staged a remarkable comeback against Boston at Braves Field today and before 6,000 fans defeated the Bulldogs by 19 to 13 in a National League contest. Pease, former Columbia back, figured in two of the touchdowns.

Boston started fast and Tony Latone, crashing fullback, scored touchdowns in the first and second periods when the Bulldogs blocked kicks deep in Orange territory. Wentworth place-kicked after the second touchdown.

Orange braced toward the end of the first half when Columbia George Pease gathered in a pass from Frank Kirkleskie and galloped forty yards to a touchdown. The New Jersey team continued its hard drive for a march of sixty-five yards in the third period, and sent Carl Waite crashing off tackle for their second touchdown and a 13-13 tie.

In the final period Pease passed to Kirkleskie after another 55-yard march for a ten-yard gain and the deciding score. Pease passed to Tomaini for the extra point.

MARSTERS RETAINS LEAD IN SCORING

Al Marsters of Dartmouth, who has been in the lead in the race for individual scoring honors among Eastern football players all season, still is well out in front and, in fact, is even further ahead of the field than he was a week ago. Scoring 12 points against Columbia last Saturday the Green speed king boosted his total to 90 tallies.

Although the Pittsburgh eleven triumphed over Nebraska, its scoring ace, Uansa, did not get a chance to improve his total, but he still remains in second place with 49 points. This means that Uansa, instead of being 29 points removed from the lead as he was last week, now is 41 behind Marsters. However, the season is not over yet, and there may be more changes.

While Marsters has compiled a huge total for this stage of the campaign, he still has quite a distance to go before he passes the top mark of last season when Ken Strong, New York University ace, finished his college career with 160 points. At his present rate, Marsters should eclipse this mark, but there are hard games ahead.

Has Thirteen Touchdowns.

Not only does Marsters set the pace in the matter of total points, but he is at the top of the field in touchdown making, with 13 to his credit. He has lost the lead, though, in point after touchdown making, despite the fact that he has added the extra point twelve times. He has not attempted any field goals.

Uansa of Pittsburgh and Dowler of Colgate come second in touchdown scoring, each having taken the ball across the enemy line on eight occasions. Several have performed the feat seven times and quite a group has taken the ball across six times.

Honors in extra point making are held this week by Ellert of Syracuse, who has fourteen successful tries to his credit. He took a big jump forward since the last list was compiled, as he made seven points after touchdowns in the night game with Johns Hopkins last Saturday when the Orange eleven won by a commanding score. Ellert is an end, and all his points have been made after touchdowns.

Wakeman in Third Place.

Back of Marsters, who is second in extra point scoring, comes Wakeman, the Cornell tackle, with 10 points to his credit. He is a veteran at this work, and last season also attracted considerable attention.

In total points, Dowler of Colgate follows Marsters and Uansa with 48 tallies to his credit, one fewer than the Pittsburgh ace boasts. The Maroon star is five markers ahead of Davidowitz of Lehigh, who has 43 to his credit. Davidowitz made a big jump forward last Saturday to gain a place among the leaders.

Six men follow him with 42 tallies each. They are Fowle of Williams, Hewitt of Columbia, Hinkle of Bucknell, Murrel of Army, Petrolonus of Albright and Sebo of Syracuse.

Latorre Wins Five-Mile Walk.

George Latorre of the west side Y. M. C. A. won the five-mile handicap walking race conducted by the Walkers' Club of America at Macombs Dam Park yesterday. He had a handicap of three minutes, and his actual time was 47:35. Sam Scott, 55-year-old veteran of the Pastime A. C., was on scratch. His time was 45:42.

There is no fancy name for SPIT

Price alone doesn't make a cigar safe for your mouth. At any price there can be no tastier cigar than Certified Cremo . . . and, in addition, it's clean.

You get the greatest enjoyment from Certified Cremo—free of the menace of the old filthy cigar shops where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers . . . and spit on the ends!

Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by United States Government approved methods. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the danger of spit. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

• • •

A suggestion, deliberately made with confidence to smokers of imported cigars: Try a Certified Cremo—made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, all ripe and mellow. Each leaf goes through a slow, expensive maturing process that develops the fullest flavor and mildness. You never realized how good Certified Cremo is—don't let its 5 cent price stand in your way. Your physician will recommend a mild cigar in place of heavy, expensive brands. There isn't a bit of scrap in Certified Cremo . . . not a trace of floor sweepings. All long filler . . . all fresh, tender leaves . . . and topped off with the finest imported wrapper! Crush-proof . . . immaculate . . . foil-wrapped . . . Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

Noted pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"Most diseases enter the body through the mouth . . . but I emphatically say that no smoker of Cremo ever runs this risk. Because the method of manufacture aims to give Cremo the same standard of purity that pasteurization gives to milk."

"I certify Cremo sanitary, and clean" Alfred W. McCann

DEULBERG CAPTURES MOTOR-PACED RACE

LETOURNER IS RUNNER-UP

Frank Deulberg, young German star, closed the outdoor bike season at the New York Velodrome yesterday with a victory in the thirty-mile national motor-paced championship race, the last of the series of forty. Alfred Letourner of France was second and Franco Georgetti, who clinched the title last week, third. George Chapman was fourth and Larry Gaffney fifth.

Eighteen thousand were present to see the curtain lowered on the outdoor cycling campaign and also to see Georgetti, Italian all-round star, crowned the 1929 motor-paced champion of America.

Dr. Commander Emanuele Frazzi, Italian General Consul in New York, was on hand and presented to Georgetti a silver loving cup. Judge Albert Vitale of this city and Sheriff Lester Patterson of the Bronx also were present.

Champion Cheered by Throng.

The crowd cheered Georgetti when he received the trophy and also when he rode around the saucer.

Deulberg, paced by Otto Miller, led all the way in the race. He was in exceptionally good form, got away to a big lead and Letourner and Georgetti were unable to make up the ground in the final stages. Georgetti was handicapped by a cold.

The final point standing in the motor-paced championship series was: Georgetti, 92; Letourner, 87; Chapman, 77; Jaeger, 70; Deulberg, 49, and Gaffney, 45.

CELTIC FIVE BEATS VISITATION, 25-20

Basketball made its return to Madison Square Garden last night and a crowd of 7,000 turned out to see the Original Celtics beat off a desperate second-half rally to defeat the Brooklyn Visitation quintet, 25 to 20, in a stirring contest.

With things looking dismal for Brooklyn at half time, when the Celtics led by 18 to 9, the Visitation quintet unloosed a junior rally under the lead of Joe Brennan, and managed to tie the county at 18-all, with only four minutes to go.

Then the Celtics, held scoreless for sixteen minutes, responded with a rally that brought them victory. Brennan was the star of the game, besides being the high scorer. He tallied eleven points for Visitation and held down his guard position effectively. Davy Banks led the Celtics in scoring with eight points.

The semi-final game brought together the Joseph Tuths Association team of Brooklyn and the St. Francis Catholic Club of Hoboken. The latter quintet took an early lead and carried through to win by 19 to 12.

The preliminary game was won by the McKeon Association of Hoboken over the Henry five by the score of 12 to 8.

In the afternoon the Celtics defeated the Ridgewood A. A. five, 35 to 34, before a crowd of 600 on the Glendale Palace court in Brooklyn.

NEW HOME OPENED BY FENCERS CLUB

Occasion Marked by Tourney, Pinchard Winning After Fence-Off With Santelli.

LARGE CROWD IS PRESENT

Inspects Quarters, Comprising Two Floors of Apartment Building—Two Outdoor Epee Courts.

The Fencers Club officially installed itself in its new home at 320 East Fifty-third Street yesterday, and marked the occasion by conducting a tournament. The tourney was by invitation, and the contestants included some of the foremost amateur and professional foilsmen in the United States.

Rene Pinchard, local professional, was the winner of the tournament, defeating George Santelli 5 to 2, in a fence-off, after each had emerged from the regulation round robin competition with an equal number of victories and defeats.

Santelli placed himself in the running by making a point on a marvelous riposte, but Pincard came back to secure his lead by scoring twice more in rapid succession, and sealed the victory by thrusting through Santelli's guard after the latter had scored his second touch.

A large crowd witnessed the tournament and inspected the club. Two complete floors in an ultra-modern apartment building, owned by the Fencers' Club Realty Company, form the headquarters for the fencers. The first floor contains a quietly appointed reception room, together with a thoroughly equipped salle d'armes. Two outdoor épée courts are also located on a balcony adjoining the floor.

The locker and grill rooms, the latter a novel feature, comprise the second floor. Several of the officers of the club attended the opening, and took occasion to familiarize themselves with the new quarters. Frederic R. Coudert Sr. is president of the organization and Leon M. Shoonmaker is treasurer. The vice presidents are Colonel Henry Breckinridge, Albert D. Smith and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish.

Rene Pinchard defeated Santelli, 5—4; Levis, 5—4; Dow, 5—1; Grasson, 5—1.

George Santelli defeated Calman, 5—4; Levis, 5—3; Dow, 5—2; Grasson, 5—1.

SWEETSER-BOURN HELD EVEN IN GOLF

BRITON SHOOTS A PAR 72

Held and Voigt Each Turns in 73 for Eighteen Holes, Sweetser Scoring a 76.

Special to The New York Times.

DOUGLASTON, L. I., Oct. 20.—George Voigt of the home club and Eddie Held of Lakeville were all square with Jess Sweetser of Siwanoy and T. A. Bourn of Great Britain at the end of their eighteen-hole best-ball exhibition golf match at the North Hills Country Club today. Voigt and Held led, 1 up, at the end of the first nine holes, but their opponents made up the difference on the incoming nine.

Held shot even par, a 35, on the outward journey, but coming home he was unsteady and had to be content with a 38, one over perfect figures, for a 73. Bourn equaled par 72 with 38s each way. Voigt went around in 73, the result of a 36 for the first nine and a 37 coming back, and Sweetser turned in a 76, going out in 36, but taking 40 on the way home.

Bourn and Sweetser got off to a lead on the first, when Bourn bagged a 3 to 4s for Sweetser and Held and a 5 for Voigt. On the third, however, Voigt and Held evened matters, both getting 3s to 4s for their opponents. Voigt carded another 3 on the fourth, which won the hole, as the others took 4s. That gave Voigt and Held a 1-up advantage, which they still possessed at the turn.

Bourn's 4 on the tenth to 5s for the other three brought the two pairs up on even terms again. They exchanged the lead on the eleventh and twelfth holes, Held's 3 winning the former and Bourn's 3 the latter. Again on the thirteenth and fourteenth they swapped the advantage, Bourn taking the former with a 2, both Voigt and Held had 5s on the fourteenth to win the hole, Bourn and Sweetser each carding 6s. All even again, they halved the last four holes to end the match on the eighteenth in a deadlock.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Oct. 20.—George (Mule) Haas, brilliant young centre fielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, played with the old Claremont Baseball Club, the team with which he began his career eleven years ago, in a special game with the McConnell A. C., last year's town champions, today. A crowd of more than 3,000 turned out to honor the native son.

Haas performed in centre field and also twirled for four innings. The McConnells won, 12 to 3. Haas failed to come through with any homers, such as made him a hero in the world's series, but hammered out three doubles into the overflow crowd in the outfield.

Congressman Fred Hartley Jr. of Kearny called Haas to the home plate just before the game and presented him with a radio set.

MEHLHORN-BURKE WIN IN EXHIBITION

BURKE SHOOTS LOW SCORE

Turns in a 71, One Over Par—Farrell Has 73, Cruickshank, 74, and Mehlhorn, 77.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Wild Bill Mehlhorn and Billy Burke defeated Bobby Cruickshank and Johnny Farrell, 1928 national open champion, in their eighteen-hole best-ball exhibition golf match at the Fenimore Country Club today. The score was 2 and 1, but they finished the round, with Cruickshank and Farrell winning the final hole.

Burke and Cruickshank were the mainstays of their respective teams, the latter shooting a 35 going out. It was Burke who won the only two holes which he and Mehlhorn captured going out. They both had 4s to share in winning the tenth from Farrell and Cruickshank. Mehlhorn's 3 enabled the victors to take the eleventh and Burke got a 4 to win the thirteenth, while the others carded 5s.

Cruickshank gave his team a 1 up lead by scoring a 3 on the first hole. He also was low scorer on the fourth and fifth holes with a 3 and 4 respectively. As the players rounded the turn, Cruickshank and Farrell enjoyed a 1 up advantage, but they did not win a hole to the seventeenth, where the match ended.

Burke turned in the best score of the quartet, having a 71, one over par. He was out in 34, one under perfect figures, and took a 37, two over, coming home. Farrell scored a 73, one under Cruickshank's total of 74. Mehlhorn had to be satisfied with a 77.

SINGER BOXES ABAD IN GARDEN TONIGHT

CARD HOLDS KEEN INTEREST

$100,000 Expected to Be Realized for Fund—1,000 Disabled World War Veterans to Be Guests.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Al Singer, Bronx lad who bids fair to succeed to the place in fistic prominence vacated years ago with the retirement of Benny Leonard, will undertake to forge another link in his chain of successes tonight in Madison Square Garden. In the feature ten-round bout on a card of five ten-round matches arranged in the interests of the Palestine Relief Fund, Singer will match his skill against Davey Abad, stout-hearted little Panama lad.

This contest and the four others which will precede it are expected to be viewed by a capacity crowd. The occasion aside from its charitable motive, offers the last chance for the enjoyment of Garden boxing activities until Nov. 4, or after the departure of the rodeo, which opens Thursday. What is more, the card holds a competitive appeal which is expected to influence the attendance as much as any other factor.

From every walk of life spectators are expected in response to the untiring efforts of a committee consisting of Mayor James J. Walker, Chairman James A. Farley of the State Athletic Commission, Samuel Rosoff, subway contractor; Dr. William L. Sirovich, David A. Brown and Walter Weinstein, to crown the affair with the success it deserves.

Capacity Crowd Predicted.

Rosoff, leading figure in arranging the card, optimistically predicts a capacity crowd and is looking forward to realizing the sum of $100,000 for the fund.

Conspicuous among the spectators will be 1,000 crippled and disabled soldiers, survivors of the World War, who are to attend as the guests of Rosoff. Mike Jacobs, George Herrick, Nat Evans, Charles Manne, Sidney Solomon and Harry Winston. These patrons of the fund, it has been announced, have underwritten the purchase of the tickets for the disabled veterans and are providing their transportation to and from the Garden.

The other bouts will be between Maxie Rosenbloom, Harlem light-heavyweight, and Joe Sekyra, Dayton, Ohio, lad who has exhibited prom ising form; Jack (Kid) Berg, English lightweight, and Bruce Flowers, capable New Rochelle negro; Ruby Goldstein, east side welterweight favorite, and Joe Reno, rugged Trenton fighter; and Yale Okun, east-sider, and Matt Adgie, Philadelphian.

Bouts Mean Much to Four Men.

Their bouts mean much to Singer, Rosenbloom, Berg and Goldstein. Singer is tentatively matched against Pete Nebo in the Garden on Nov. 29 and has the prospect of a lightweight title bout in the Winter at Miami against Champion Sammy Mandell. Rosenbloom is seeking recognition as an outstanding candidate for Tommy Loughran's discarded light-heavyweight title and agreed to box on tonight's card without preference in the matter of opposition, as did Sekyra.

Berg, facing Flowers for the third time, after two sensational conquests of the New Rochelle lad, is anticipating a third triumph, which will qualify him for a meeting with Tony Canzoneri in the Garden on Nov. 15, and Goldstein, offered a bout against Jimmy McLarnin in the Garden on Dec. 9, must defeat Reno tonight to deserve the McLarnin match with its promise of a lucrative purse.

New contributions to the Palestine Emergency Fund received on Saturday amounted to $4,880.20, thereby bringing the total to $1,954,587.33, David A. Brown, chairman of the fund, with offices at 111 Fifth Avenue, announced yesterday.

The contributions of $100 and more were:

FIRST DIVISION FOUR TRIUMPHS BY 8 TO 2

KIEFER AND SCOTT EXCEL

Former Scores Four Times, but Scott Paves Way for Attempts Before Crowd of 7,500.

Before 7,500 persons, the largest crowd ever assembled to watch a polo match at the Fort Hamilton army reservation, the First Division four of Fort Hamilton rode to an 8 to 2 victory over the Governors Island quartet yesterday in the final game of the annual three-game series between the teams.

The triumph gave the home players the series by 2 to 1 for they won the second game, 8 to 7, after bowing to the Governors Island team by a similar score in the opener.

Lieutenant Homer F. Kiefer and Captain Don Scott were the big factors in the Fort Hamilton victory. It was Kiefer, high scorer with four goals, who furnished most of the spectacular shots and it was Scott's mallet that paved the way for Kiefer on many occasions.

After Captain Keith Wise had accounted for the first goal early in the initial period, Kiefer tallied on a fine 30-yard backhand shot after a well-placed set-up by Scott. Kiefer finished again in the fifth when he batted the ball almost the whole length and scored.

The victors had a 4 to 0 lead before Lieutenant Alex George gave Governors Island its first goal early in the third chukker. Scott retaliated for Fort Hamilton and in the fourth the visitors made their final tally when Sackman scored. After that the First Division riders registered thrice, two of the goals being made by Kiefer.

The line-up:

Suffers Possible Shoulder Fracture in Collision—Oraworth Four Beaten 11 to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

SADDLE RIVER, N. J., Oct. 20.—Jerry Smith, indoor polo player, received a probable fractured shoulder-blade as Saddle River defeated the Oraworth Polo Club today, 11 to 3.

Smith was injured in the fourth chukker when he and Earl Hopper crashed as they rode in on the ball, the impact causing Smith to be thrown from his mount.

He was treated by a local doctor and then taken to the Englewood Hospital. Frank Hennessey of the Oraworth team accompanied Smith to the hospital and the game was continued with three-men teams.

In the sixth chukker, Clough rode into a backhand shot from Clark's mallet, with the result that his mount suffered a severe eye injury.

MARS CASSIDY DIES; NOTED TURF FIGURE

WAS STRICKEN LAST WEEK

Deceased Spent 35 Years on Race Tracks—Inventor of Barrier Device—Funeral Tomorrow.

Mars Cassidy, veteran starter at race tracks, died yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at his home at 90-73 198th Street, Hollis, Queens, after a short illness. Cassidy had been troubled with a stomach ailment for years, but it was not until last Wednesday, at the close of the Jamaica meeting, that he was stricken with such a severe recurrence that he was confined to his bed.

Cassidy was born in Ellicott City, Md., sixty-three years ago. He spent his life among horses and had varied experience as jockey and trainer. While he was known as Mars, that was only the short name for Marshall. As Mars Cassidy he became a noted turf figure.

Brought up in surroundings where horses were the centre of interest, Cassidy came by his love for the thoroughbreds naturally. He was always seeking new improvements for racing, and being of an inventive turn of mind, was responsible for perfections in starting devices in this country.

Spending his early years on a stock farm, he later entered the trucking business in and around Washington. His first position as a starter was at Alexandria, Va., thirty-five years ago. Without previous experience he nevertheless was so able a man in handling horses that he had little difficulty with them.

Joined Trainer Fitzsimmons.

He went to Bennings, near Washington, a track now out of existence, and later became associated with James Fitzsimmons, now trainer for the Wheatley Stables. He came to New York more than twenty-five years ago and received his first assignment on a metropolitan track at Aqueduct. At that time Chris Fitzgerald was starter there, and the two acted together for years.

Then Fitzgerald became an official of the Brighton Beach Racing Association, leaving Mars as the only regular starter on New York tracks. He had held the position since. A year ago his youngest son, George, was appointed assistant starter by the Jockey Club. He served at the Spring meeting at Empire when his father was taken ill. He also replaced his father at Empire in the last few days when Mars was sick.

Cassidy bridged the gap between the old "ask and answer" method of starting and the present ways and at the time of his death was perhaps the only man who was a veteran of both systems.

First to Use Barrier.

So far as is known he was the first man to use a barrier of any kind. The original barrier was a rubber device stretched across the track and snapped at the signal. The webbing type of barrier came in later, and Cassidy was responsible for perfections in its mechanical parts.

Although of a blunt, caustic nature, he, nevertheless, was one of the best-liked men in racing and was the friend of many of the sport's most distinguished followers. He was meticulously honest and absolutely fearless and held the deep respect of all.

It is estimated that he started nearly 100,000 races in his life. He sent horses away at practically every track in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Besides his son George, Cassidy is survived by two other sons, Marshall, who has been starting horses at Canadian tracks, and Wendell. He also leaves a daughter, Helen.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock at the Fairchild Funeral Chapel, Jamaica. Interment will be in Washington, D. C., where he will be buried alongside of his wife, who died twenty-five years ago.

Massey to Defend Title.

Petrone to Oppose Zazzarino.

Dominick Petrone, Harlem Italian, will be the next opponent of Leonardo (Young) Zazzarino, Jersey City, in a New York bout. They will meet in the ten-round semi-final to the Jack (Kid) Berg-Tony Canzoneri lightweight battle in Madison Square Garden Nov. 15.

Vince Dundee to Box Ketchell.

Vince Dundee, Baltimore welterweight, has been engaged to battle Young Ketchell, Chester boxer, in the main bout of ten rounds tomorrow night at the opening of the Newark Armory. Al Trainer and Jack Hoskie are paired in the ten-round semi-final.

Sports of the Times

By JOHN KIERAN.

THE Big Three got a stand-off over the week-end. Yale won, Harvard tied and Princeton lost. Fordham defeated a good Holy Cross team to continue the Maroon winning streak and N. Y. U. rebounded from the Fordham setback to conquer Penn State in a rousing fray.

That must have been a wild war between the Army and Harvard up Cambridge way. The Crimson horde was doing well until Cagle broke loose and big Murrel began to roll down the field in the rollicking style of an artillery caisson. It was all Army while the big drive was under way, but John Harvard, by hard scrambling, got up in the bitter end to tie the score before the armistice was signed.

Under the elms along the Charles River they say that the Harvard lads miss Big Tim Clark, the huge polo player, oarsman and football forward of former seasons. Late in the game, trailing the Army, they could have used not only Big Tim but the best polo pony he could muster to carry the ball in a hurry toward the Army goal.

Each team tossed away possible victory by the margin of a missed point after touchdown, which shows how important those little details may be when the scores are checked up at the end of the day. But it was a furious fray and perhaps a tie score was a good solution. At different times during the afternoon each team would have traded four faculty members and a chemistry laboratory for a tie score. There can be no complaint from either side over the result.

Making History.

Historians had to run back through the records to discover the last time that Cornell defeated Princeton. It was several decades ago. Scouts are bringing in reports that Cornell has the best team Ithaca has seen in recent years and it is just possible that Princeton is having trouble finding wingmen up to the standard of Stinson and Newt Lawler.

Just what good ends can do was shown in the Dartmouth-Columbia game, where Booma and Yudicky put on a fine exhibition for the Big Green team. They helped to block and mop up on the offense, but it was on the defense that they were particularly deadly. Columbia couldn't turn a flank all afternoon and the Lion plays were driven in against a piled-up line.

Al Marsters, of course, was in there cutting hither and yon, and other flashy Dartmouth backs, including Curly Wolff, Sutton and Johnson, were moving ahead from chalk mark to chalk mark, but one reason why Dartmouth had the ball so much was that Messrs. Booma and Yudicky were jamming up the Columbia plays for no gains and Columbia was forced to surrender possession of the ball by punting.

Strength Along the Line.

This doesn't mean that the Dartmouth guards and tackles were sitting around playing chess and letting the ends do all the work. When Booma and Yudicky obligingly turned the plays in, the guards and tackles did some very efficient guarding and tackling. For that matter, Columbia had several sturdy men in the line, but what set the tide running rapidly toward a Dartmouth victory was that the Hanoverian backs could break into the open through the danger spot between end and tackle whereas that was a forbidden zone for Lion ball carriers when Dartmouth was on the defensive.

Ralph Hewitt couldn't shake himself free to get away for long runs for Columbia, but he did show his speed when Wolff of Dartmouth intercepted a Columbia forward pass and seemingly had a clear field for a touchdown. Hewitt dashed diagonally across the field after him and though it was another Columbia player who made the tackle, it was Hewitt who hemmed Wolff in and made him a victim of the second pursuer.

The Columbia kicking was nothing extra and the few early game chances the Lions had to stem the tide were ruined by fumbles. It was a disastrous afternoon for the Lions.

True to Form.

There were surprisingly few reversals of form, considering the way the program worked out all across the country. Penn State was favored to beat N. Y. U. and the unblushing Violet came through with a victory, but it was no upset and not even a mild surprise. It figured to be a close, hard game, and that's just what it was, with Dave Myers, moved out of the Violet line into the back field, doing great work for the victors.

It was no secret that Holy Cross had a good team and rooters for the Purple really felt that the Worcester lads would put a dent in Fordham's winning streak, but the Maroon managed to keep the record clear and move ahead by the margin of one touchdown, the only one scored in a bitter battle. Now Fordham is looking up ahead to the Davis-Elkins game with more than a little concern. Davis-Elkins swamped the Quantico Marines on Saturday and those Marines are not in the set-up class.

Notre Dame ran up three touchdowns against Wisconsin, which must have made Knute Rockne, the Sick Man of South Bend, feel much better. During the Summer Knute said that he expected to have a good team this Fall and so far nobody can say that Knute was talking through his pearl gray fedora.

Passing the Ball.

Penn had California on the run, but the boys from the Coast came pounding ahead to win, which was what most football followers expected in the first place. It took some time for the Navy to get up steam against Duke, but once under way, Bill Ingram's Midshipmen rolled along to an easy victory.

Colgate went into enemy territory and ran up three touchdowns against Indiana. It was the third straight defeat for the Hoosiers, but they weren't falling back before third-rate teams. Before Colgate beat them, Indiana lost to Notre Dame and Chicago in fairly close games.

Bucknell jarred Lafayette by 6 to 3 and Villanova, the team that tied Boston College, led Catholic University by two touchdowns. The Pitt Panthers had a warm time out in Nebraska, but they finally managed to subdue the Cornhuskers. All along the main line football observers are tipping Pitt as a candidate for the mythical national gridiron championship of the year. The Panthers have four more strong opponents to face before any debate about championships, mythical or otherwise, can start.

Yale recovered some lost ground by defeating Brown, but Princeton now has two straight defeats on its record. Not only that, but this coming Saturday the Tiger will entertain Navy in the Palmer Stadium, and that won't be any tea party. The football prospect at Old Nassau is overcast and cloudy, with probable storms.

Did any one notice that Vermont defeated Union, a fairly strong team, by 13 to 7. Vermont lost to N. Y. U. 77-0, to Yale 89-0 and to Boston University 27-6. Possibly the Green Mountain Boys were holding back in those earlier games.

ALEKHINE VICTOR OVER BOGOLJUBOW

LOSER FORCED TO RESIGN

Exposed Position of King Causes This Step—Alekhine Now Has Margin of 7 to 4.

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—It required twenty additional moves to decide the sixteenth game of the world's chess championship match between Dr. Alexander Alekhine of Paris and E. D. Bogoljubow of Triberg, adjourned from yesterday, in favor of Dr. Alekhine at the Cafe Koenig tonight. Altogether sixty moves were recorded.

With a pawn to the good when play was resumed, the champion improved his position on the queen's side of the board, where he established two connected passed pawns. Bogoljubow, on the other hand, had a pawn plus on the opposite wing. Dr. Alekhine queened a pawn on the queen's rook's file at his fifty-eighth turn and the challenger queened another on the king's file a move later. The exposed position of Bogoljubow's king caused his resignation immediately afterward.

The present score of the match is: Dr. Alekhine 7, Bogoljubow 4, drawn 5. The seventeenth game is scheduled for tomorrow.

NEW YORK HAKOAH STOPS GIANTS, 3-2

NEUFELD STARS ON ATTACK

Scores One Goal and Makes Passes to Gruenwald and Wortman for Others—5,000 Attend.

The New York Hakoah soccer team defeated its great rivals, the New York Giants, by 3 to 2 in an Eastern League game at Ebbets Field yesterday before a crowd of 5,000.

It was a great game from start to finish. The winners, after a wonderful display, were thoroughly entitled to the verdict and the points which now sends them to second place in the standings, just behind Bethlehem.

Nemes Neufeld, Hakoah's outside right, played brilliantly and was responsible for the three goals scored by his team, netting the first himself. His clever passes to Gruenwald and Wortman enabled them to beat Brown.

The Giants kicked off and Hakoah attacked immediately, Wortman sending in a wicked shot which Brown saved at the expense of a corner. Haeusler followed with a hard drive, but again the goalie was in the way.

Giants Miss a Chance.

The Giants attacked and a foul by Mahrer gave them a fine chance to score but Lyell, only a few yards from the goal, shot feebly at Fischer. The Giants kept right on top of their rivals, Stone standing out with masterful work at right halfback. O'Brien broke through but Fischer ran out and saved a certain goal by picking the ball off his toes.

Sternberg's foul on Ballantyne led up to the equalizer. Adair took the kick and landed the ball in front of David Brown, who nodded it into the net. The time was 35 minutes.

Hakoah went ahead when Neufeld gave Gruenwald a pass and the national champions led at half time by 2 to 1.

Hakoah Increases Lead.

Right from the restart Hakoah increased its lead through another spectacular effort of Neufeld, who cleverly drew aside the opposing defense to slip the ball over to Wortman, who beat Brown.

Hakoah was now clearly on top, being altogether too speedy and clever for its rivals.

Just before the end the Giants staged a desperate rally and in a mixup Sternberg handled the ball in the penalty area. Ballentyne was entrusted with the penalty kick and made no mistake.

POTTER SEES TENETS OF FAITH DISGUISED

SCOFFS AT SUPERNATURAL

Holds Women Won Recognition as "Persons" Only When Humanist Point of View Came to Fore.

Christianity is trying, behind a smoke screen of clever casuistry, to get rid of the Virgin birth and bodily resurrection of Jesus, Charles Francis Potter declared yesterday morning in his address before the First Humanist Society of New York, at Chalif Hall, 163 West Fifty-seventh Street. Mr. Potter's address was a reply to critics who have asserted that humanism is not a religion at all because it rejects the supernatural.

Hailing Dr. John Dewey as a major prophet of humanism, Mr. Potter declared that the new religion gladly rejected magic and the supernatural, in whatever guise it appeared, and found its inspirations in the "twin visions of an ideally developed personality and an ideal commonwealth made up of such persons."

"What inspiration can the supernatural possibly be to an intelligent, educated person today?" he asked.

"The evolution of religion has been marked by the gradual elimination of the element of supernaturalism and its allies, magic, miracle and superstition. Take Christianity itself, for example. First it dropped the miracles recorded in the Apocrypha, then those of the Old Testament, then the less credible ones in the New Testament. It is now engaged in trying as gracefully as possible behind a smoke screen of clever casuistry to get rid of the Virgin birth and the bodily resurrection of Jesus.

"It is no wonder that representatives of Judaism and Christianity are saying that humanism is not a religion. They are only testifying that it is not their religion, and we do not accept their definition of religion.

"Day before yesterday one of the leading rabbis of this city paid me an unintentional compliment when he said, exasperatedly, 'I see John Dewey sticking out all over you.'

"I told the rabbi that I had never met Dr. Dewey and had read less of his writings than I could wish, but that by the path of religion I had happily arrived at the place Dr. Dewey has reached by the path of philosophy.

"Dr. Dewey is welcomed the world around by those upon whose faces shine the first beams of the dawning new day for mankind. He stands head and shoulders above his critics, stands as the bold exponent of a new philosophy, stands as the revered teacher of a new generation 'with flame of freedom in their souls and light of knowledge in their eyes.'

"The most significant event of this past week, however, perhaps to be later reckoned as after the World War, the most important of the twentieth century thus far, is the decision of the highest court of the British Commonwealth that a woman is a person.

"Bear in mind, please, that this achievement of recognition of woman as a person is not due to any supernatural religion. It is the growing trend toward humanism which has forced the courts to recognize the rights of women. Perhaps now the churches will permit women on the boards of trustees. I know of only one church in this city which does."

Since his clerical critics have refused to meet him in debate, Mr. Potter announced that he would continue, from time to time, to reply to their charges in his regular Sunday morning talks before the Humanist Society.

DECLINES POTTER DEBATE.

Rabbi Katz Holds Religion Is "Too Great for Controversy.

Replying to a challenge made a week ago by Dr. Charles Francis Potter, founder of the First Humanist Society of New York, to the ten foremost objectors to his teachings to debate with him publicly, Rabbi Jacob Katz of the Montefiore Synagogue, Hewitt and Macy Places, the Bronx, one of those challenged, told his congregation yesterday that religion was too great to be submitted to the smallness of debate.

"Religious disputations have always been of bad repute," Rabbi Katz said. "In the medieval ages one of the disputants, he who belonged to the minority, would even be burned at the stake for the glee of the spectators. Shall we revive such controversies today? Are the people ready to receive information and opinion about religion in a dispassionate manner? One hesitates to stage religious controversies unless they result in the instruction and edification of all concerned."

DR. BOWIE DEFENDS FAITH.

Assails Humanism and Says Prayer Proves its Own Worth.

The new faith of Humanism founded by Charles Francis Potter was discussed yesterday by the Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie in his sermon as rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Broadway and Tenth Street. The sermon was called "The Reality of God."

"The Humanist claims that there is any God except the organized better disposition of our own human nature," he said. "Why should we talk about praying,' the Humanist asks, 'until the proof is furnished that there is some objective fact to whom we pray?'

"The answer is that prayer itself is the way of proof. God cannot be found at the end of a syllogism. God cannot be experienced if we hold Him off at arm's length and defy Him to demonstrate Himself. That arrogant and overweening attitude makes religious experience impossible, exactly as the same attitude would make impossible the contact of human friends.

"The reality of God is not a thing to be settled in bawling debate. It is something that they alone can know who have entered into its immense and thrilling consciousness, who have felt their little personalities to be in the brooding presence of God's majestic otherness, who have lifted up the empty cup of their own limitations and have felt it filled, and have come forth from their communion knowing that they have been united with reality because a quality of life more real, more brave, and more abundant has been roused in them."

This is a money-mad generation, according to the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of Riverside Baptist Church, who preached to his congregation in Temple Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street, which has been lent pending completion of the new edifice of the Riverside Church. Dr. Fosdick added that the dollar-standards of the day were responsible for the "lurking fear of inferiority from which many people suffer."

"Undoubtedly a good deal of bunkum is mixed up with modern psychology," he said, "but one discovery is quite certain—more people are burdened by a humiliating sense of inferiority than anybody ever had supposed. The older type of sermon used to assume that human nature is proud.

"If some of us are to find spiritual recovery from this lost morale of an inferiority complex, we must think of success as something higher than our contemporaneous American life rates it. For little as one likes to have others say it of us, we may as well say it of ourselves, America is prevailingly dollar-minded. An English friend of mine, drawn out as to his impressions of America, said: 'Speaking frankly, I feel here just what I feel when I entertain Americans in England. I show them a beautiful picture, a glorious cathedral, or a lovely old country estate. They say, "It is beautiful," and then almost invariably they add, "I wonder how much it cost."'

"We do rate things in dollars. Human life itself comes to be valued in terms of ability to accumulate them. My impression is that the worst effects of this dollar-mindedness are to be found not among the rich—they often see pretty clearly just how little riches by themselves are worth. But the effect upon people who want to be rich, who hunger after wealth and cannot get it is terrific."

DECRIES TENDENCY OF MODERN THOUGHT

FINDS ATHEISM INCREASING

Tells Congregation at Broadway Presbyterian Church Science Is "Reducing Bible to a Pulp."

Looking back over the years since his ordination in 1899, the Rev. Dr. Walter Duncan Buchanan deplored the modern tendency to substitute "clean living" for the old-fashioned faith in religion, in his thirtieth anniversary sermon yesterday morning at the Broadway Presbyterian Church, at the corner of 114th Street.

"Atheism is growing madly," Dr. Buchanan asserted. "Agnosticism and scientific research are reducing the Bible to a pulp. Why? I'll tell you. It's because men don't like to be told they are sinners, or that Jesus Christ, Son of the Almighty God, died on Calvary to save them.

"Salvation is no postulate of my mind or of any theological school. It's in that beautiful third chapter of St. John for any child to read: 'For I say unto you that whosoever believeth on me shall not perish, but shall have everlasting life.' I marvel. I am breathless, at the sight of all the men I know who are drifting away to ethical culture, instead of retaining their faith in the salvation of the blood of Jesus."

Recalling that when he came to the church no one dreamed of living to see a traffic policeman at 110th Street, the preacher spoke of the "kaleidoscopic tendency of metropolitan life," which, he said, had taken away every one of the group which greeted him at his first sermon. He reiterated his belief in the articles of the Westminster Confession of Faith to which he had to subscribe when he was ordained.

"To those men who are crying against the supernatural," Dr. Buchanan concluded, "I say that I believe in God and in the Bible as a supernatural book. By its very preservation, the Bible is blessed by God and inspired by Him to guide our lives. I believe, as every rational man must believe, in the story of Adam and Eve, and the fall from grace which has left the curse of God on all men.

"You may say that the virgin birth of Jesus is a biological miracle. But is not God capable of biological miracles? My business is not to explain God's works but to teach them. I thank God for every minute He spares me to tell the old, sweet story which is beyond the love of a brother or father, the greatest story the world has ever known."

LINKS MORALS TO WEALTH.

Prof. H. F. Ward Says Method of Getting Money Rules Lives.

"The basic morality of a nation is always concerned with the way people get their money. If that root is not sound you can pick no sound fruit in any other department," said the Rev. Harry F. Ward, professor at Union Theological Seminary, in his sermon yesterday morning at the West Side Unitarian Church, 550 West 110th Street.

"In inquiring into the state of public morality, the historian of the decade since the World War will note as the most significant fact that this country made more money during that era than any country in any time in the history of the world," he continued.

"One of the things which distinguished us from Europe in the period before the war was our concern with productive labor. There was no serious leisured class in this country. We were a working people, performing honest labor and giving as much as we got. How is it now? From those with an unearned increment at the top to those who try to get by with as little work as possible, the emphasis is away from service, to get money as easily as may be."

CRITICIZES AIM OF CHURCH.

Dr. Seekman Says It Overstresses Salvation and Needs Censure.

Another pastor to touch on Humanism was the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman in his sermon yesterday at Madison Avenue Baptist Church, Madison Avenue and Sixtieth Street.

"The Christian Church," he said, "deserves the criticism of the Humanists and seculars when it interprets its evangelism as the caroling of wandering sheep for a heavenly sheepfold. The Church must reexamine her old use of the word salvation. If it would use the word salvage instead of salvation, it would make its meaning more accurate and more intelligible. We have so often thought of saving the lost in terms of bringing strayed sheep back to the fold. But the function of religion is not so much in rescuing wandering persons as in salvaging wasted powers."

WORLD PEACE SURE, DR. RAY DECLARES

Says This Generation May Not See It Established, but Feels Confident of Future.

FINDS IGNORANCE WANING

Stresses Need for Sound International Law and Praises Work of Hoover and MacDonald.

The Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray said in his sermon yesterday at the Episcopal Church of the Transfiguration, better known as the Little Church Around the Corner, 1 East Twenty-ninth Street, that world peace is assured, although it may not be achieved within the span of this generation.

"Ignorance is responsible for all that we are accustomed to call sin," he said. "We have made great advances in knowledge of all kinds, science, religion, investigations of all sorts, and today the world is full of knowledge. Sometimes this knowledge seems to have many loose ends and in order to bring them together we must have a unifying principle. Often these loose ends seem to have no connection with our individual lives.

"The simple, unifying principle, with the acquirement of knowledge, should begin in the individual life, with the knowledge of one's self, of the source of one's being, the relation of one's self to the cosmos. The words of our Creed, 'God the Father Almighty,' are so familiar as to mean little to us. Yet the Anglo-Saxon word goodness, which is really the meaning of the word 'God,' means a great deal more in its comprehensiveness than we ordinarily mean by 'good.' In the highest sense when we call a man or woman good we mean what has to do with God, a cosmic touch in their being. The word is really the best tribute you can offer.

"A world-wide international law is the solid basis for international peace. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler was right when he criticized those who in their pessimistic views, are doing everything they can to keep the world from throwing out its best thoughts and efforts. MacDonald and Hoover meeting together were a symbol of what nations can do, and showed that the world has changed from conspiracy to conference, from personal despotism to free democracy. The inner harmony of our individual lives is essential to the harmony in the lives of the nations."

DR. VILLELLI IS HONORED.

A Hymn Brought Pastor Into Ministry, Preacher Declares.

"A young Italian, while walking one day through a village in Italy, heard the appealing melody of a hymn floating out from a little Protestant chapel, and the resultant spiritual awakening in him brought your pastor, the Rev. Joseph A. Villelli, into the ministry and to this church, where he has completed twenty-five years of service to God and man," said the Rev. A. H. McKinney, secretary of the New York Mission Society, who preached the sermon at the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration service of the Protestant Church of the Sea and Land, Henry and Market Streets, yesterday morning.

Dr. McKinney preached on the answer to the question, "Is there a personal God?" and he declared that the acknowledgment of a personal God does not come through science or reasoning, but is an "indefinable something" which comes to a man's spirit. He said that the revelation accorded to Dr. Villelli when he was a young man without any special religious leanings, after hearing the hymn, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," which was later sung by the congregation, was similar to that of St. Peter when he answered Christ's question, "Who am I?" by saying, "You are Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God."

This evening Dr. Villelli will conduct an Italian service followed by a social hour, and tomorrow evening there will be an English reception.

URGES ALL TO BANISH FEAR.

Dr. Lynch Tells Unity Society Thought Will Conquer It.

Fear is man's greatest enemy, Dr. Richard Lynch said yesterday in his sermon at a meeting of the Unity Society, held at 33 West Thirty-ninth Street.

"There is only one way to conquer fear," he declared, "and that is through constructive thinking. All philosophic religion is based on the premise that the universe is a manifestation of a perfect mind. In studying the mind, its action and its working, we can chase away fear and anxiety. Power and authority come with an awakening of the spiritual self.

"There is within every man a strength which, when recognized, resists discouragement and conquers difficulties. Man knows that he may constantly create conditions through his thought. Courage is within the reach of every one who wills to think correctly and accurately."

FINDS PARENTS LAX AS RELIGIOUS GUIDES

HE URGES TWO REMEDIES

Conditions Call for Best Possible Teaching in Week-Day and Sunday Classes, He Asserts.

The character molding of children in the present day is being accomplished more outside of the home than within it, said the Rev. S. M. Shoemaker Jr. in his sermon yesterday in Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. His topic was "The Child in the Church."

"Parents are more indefinite in their convictions," he said, "more slipshod in discipline and spiritual training. This puts almost everything up to the day schools and the Sunday schools. I certainly do not defend this state of things. I speak of it only as a fact. This means two things: The need for the very best teaching possible in weekday religious education and in church schools; and second, that you send your children where they may be grounded in faith in God and righteous ideals.

"Some of you are disinclined to force your children, as you say, to go to Sunday school. Did you leave it to his own best judgment whether he should go to ordinary school, did you wait to let him make up his own mind about brushing his teeth, or learning the multiplication table, or whether good manners were desirable?

"Do not fear. You cannot force your child to be religious, though you send him to a hundred church schools, any more than you can force him to love you. But you can surround him with an atmosphere where faith and ideals are encouraged. The old adage is true: you can lead a horse to water but you cannot make him drink. But as one of our American philosophers, Dr. Hocking, has pointed out, force may develop into seduction.

"No educational theory can safely neglect the fact that many a horse, driven unwillingly to water, finds that it wants to drink. Many a small boy and girl has come reluctantly to our own church school at first, and then pleaded with our superintendent that the school should not be closed through the Summer."

DR. WISE HOLDS BRITAIN HAS IGNORED PROMISES

Jews Ask Only "Open Door and Security" in Palestine, Rabbi Declares.

Great Britain has kept its covenant with the Arabs in Iraq, Hedjaz and Arabia but has failed thus far to keep its promises to the Jews in Palestine in line with the spirit of the Balfour declaration, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise said yesterday before the Free Synagogue at Carnegie Hall. "In making this statement," Dr. Wise said, "I draw a sharp line of demarkation between the policy of the British Government and what I should characterize as the lack of policy in the Palestine Administration."

After sketching the history of Zionistic ideals, tracing them from the destruction of the second Temple in Jerusalem, 1,859 years ago, Dr. Wise said that the Jewish people asked "nothing more of Great Britain than guarantees of an open door and security in Palestine." These, he said, the British Government in Palestine has failed to give.

"We ask no vengeance or reprisal of the British Government," he went on, "or anything more than the end of the reign of hindrances and the beginning of the régime of the facilitation of the establishment of the Jewish Homeland in Palestine as promised in the Balfour declaration. The last thing we mean to do is rest our title on the strength of English bayonets. We have a far stronger, holier and godlier claim to the land of our fathers. All we ask is that the British maintain a true neutrality instead of the seeming neutrality supported by the Palestine Administration which permits the Arabs to retain their arms and deprives the Jews of means of defense. That is not neutrality. It is abetting murder."

CADMAN SEES REVOLT ON DIVIDED CHURCH

Time May Not Be Ripe for Union, but It Is for Federalized Action, He Says Over Radio.

The revolt against a divided Church has begun, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, radio minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, said yesterday afternoon in his first broadcast sermon of the season heard through stations associated with the National Broadcasting Company.

"The revolt against the divided Church has begun," Dr. Cadman said. "Men will not always tolerate in her the cults of incompleteness and sectarian assertiveness. The time may not be ripe for her organic union. But it is ever-ripe for her federalized action."

Dr. Cadman, in referring to the American visit of Ramsay MacDonald, declared that "interchanges of amity, candor and good-will between our President and the British Premier have displayed the most intelligent internationalism since 1914.

"Public opinion has crystallized in marvelous ways. Its sources are in the churches so far as peace is concerned. The League of Nations, the World Court, the Locarno compacts, the Washington conference on naval disarmament, the Pact of Paris and the Geneva conference are the outcome of recreated ethics in man and women of many lands. The whole peace movement springs from the plain folk of the world."

Dr. Cadman stressed the Christian obligation to labor for world peace and pointed out that a world unified in the practices of Christianity would bring about the long-desired ideal.

Views Suffering With Jesus As Need of the World Today

The truest expression of love is the desire to share the loved one's suffering, according to the Rev. Paul Andrew Kirsch, secretary of the United Lutheran Synod of New York, who preached yesterday morning in the English Evangelical Lutheran Church of St. James, Madison Avenue and Seventy-third Street.

"There is only one comprehensive and inclusive definition of God," said Mr. Kirsch, "and that is, God is love. And because God is love, God must suffer. We can't love Jesus without being willing to suffer with Jesus. That's what our world needs today; that we prove our love of Jesus Christ by suffering with Him for the redemption of the world."

SAYS MENTAL SLOTH IS FOE OF PROGRESS

Dr. Howard Urges Youth in Particular to Grasp Every Opportunity to Develop.

REGRETS WASTED HOURS

Active, Believing Men Are the Ones Who Are Leading the World, He Declares.

"The last thing the American people can be called is sluggish; but if we would be as busy for God and our fellow men as we are for ourselves, what a wonderful world this would be," the Rev. Dr. Henry Howard, senior pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, at Fifty-fifth Street, said in his sermon yesterday morning.

"Mental physiologists are unanimous in linking up mental dullness with physical sloth," Dr. Howard continued. "They assure us that the slow-witted man is the slow-footed man. Sluggishness in life has its counterpart, if not its cause, in sluggishness in thought.

"We are apt to forget today that spiritual life, like physical and mental life, can be developed only through constant effort and unremitting care. In order to bring physical death upon us we do not necessarily have to resort to the use of pistols and poisons; all we have to do is to adopt the policy of simple neglect.

"I can think of the hours and hours and hours that I have let go by during my lifetime without devoting at least some part of them to building myself up spiritually. I urge every young person here today to make the best of his life and grasp all the opportunities, for there is nothing more terrible than to go around with a sluggish outlook on the world's affairs.

"Who are the men who are leading the world in science and in commerce and in all the thousand arts of peace? Are they the men who are content to sit by idly; the men who have lost faith in their fellow men and in the future of the land? No, it is the believing men that are the achieving; the men, who in every walk of life are on the go and fighting for all that is right and good in this world. Not sluggish, but moving upward and onward to God in the service of their fellow men."

'AMERICA FIRST' CALLED BLASPHEMY

Dr. G. C. Morgan Says Similar Ideas Are Contrary to the Cause of Mankind.

GIVES THE CHRISTIAN VIEW

Betterment of All Nations Is Sought by Those Who See Vision of Humanity, He Asserts.

Such expressions as "Britannia Rules the Waves" and "America First" are blasphemous against the cause of mankind, the Rev. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, Bible lecturer and recently appointed pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, told the congregation of the West End Presbyterian Church, Amsterdam Avenue and 105th Street, yesterday morning.

"The Christian man is in a way supernatural," he explained. "He sees the vision of humanity. It does not mean that he is not patriotic nor sighted. Gazing on the future to the betterment of all nations. Christians should see the glory which is to be as if it were already here. They should not sit and wait for a mystic power to bring about the cause of God."

He spoke of "the two strong men," Premier MacDonald and President Hoover, sitting in a quiet little Virginia camp, and away from the prejudices and jealousies of the world, talking in the presence of God of the welfare of the human race.

Dr. Morgan asked his audience to look beyond the gainless things of life and to help truth and grace prevail. He declared: "Any man who only sees the ends of the earth is near-sighted. Gazing on the future with only a selfish motive is pernicious."

Truth and grace inspired the men of the Bible, he said, and in the same way these qualities brought about the understandings of Prime Minister MacDonald and President Hoover at their conference on world peace.

M'DONALD AND DEWEY CALLED MEN OF TRUTH

Dr. Norwood Says Both Refuse to Compromise—Likens British Premier to Lincoln.

Tribute was paid to Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald and Professor John Dewey, the philosopher, by the Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood in his sermon yesterday morning at St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal Church, Park Avenue and Fifty-first Street. Dr. Norwood said both men had made no compromises in life and compared Prime Minister MacDonald with Lincoln.

"All who have looked into the rugged face of Prime Minister MacDonald," Dr. Norwood said, "are convinced that here is no man merely advocating a new school of politics, but one who endeavors to speak the innermost truth.

"Only yesterday the nation honored a great philosopher, Dr. John Dewey. He stands out today not because of his learning. His theories may not be workable and the time may come when they are discarded. But he stands out because of the simplicity of his soul and because of his refusal to compromise with the truth."

Dr. Norwood called truth "not a formula or a code, but an inner freedom." He said Pilate was a leader and Jesus was not, because leaders "have shifting standards."

"Nothing counts but your inner freedom," he declared. "Whatever else that inner freedom may mean, it does signify a desire for the highest companionship, it must be identified not only with the highest of yourself but of every one."

WARNS THAT CHURCH FACES DOWNFALL

Dr. Farber Declares Christians Are Indifferent Though World Is Sunk in Sin.

The Christian Church faces extinction unless Christians practice the doctrines of Jesus, declared the Rev. Dr. Benjamin F. Farber in his sermon yesterday at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, West End Avenue and Ninety-first Street.

"We are living in days of terror and trial," the Rev. Dr. Farber said. "With all of our boasted conveniences and comforts we are passing through a mass of thought and conduct which bring terror to the heart and trial to the soul. It is a superficial optimism which blinds itself to the real facts of present-day life. A few days ago I picked up one of our daily newspapers and found five out of eight columns on the first page devoted to revelations of fraud upon the part of individuals or institutions.

"These are daily reports. They are indicative of the greed and lust for prestige and power. Family honor and personal reputation are put in jeopardy for the sake of selfish realizations. A casual acquaintance with what is going on about us is sufficient to make us pause. The truth is, and let us have the courage to face it, sin has a stranglehold upon humanity. Everywhere it crouches, unafraid and insolent, at the door. It seizes man by the throat, whenever and wherever it can. More than this, the banners of unbelief are flaunted in the face of those who believe. The colors of irreligion are nailed to the mast even on ships of respectable society. The flags of atheism are unfurled with their demands and denunciations.

"Now, what is to be the position of the Christian Church in such a world? Is it to be one of apathy and indifference or one of active and aggressive opposition? There is something wrong with the Christian Church when it stands before such a world with no message or one that has lost its passion for the souls of men.

"Desperate as the situation is, we are not without hope if the Church be reconverted to its real mission and lay hold upon the power at its hand. Last week I endeavored to show you that the pulpit is in need of a thorough reconversion. This morning I ask you to consider the necessary reconversion of the pew. Let us not forget that the pew and the pulpit must work hand in hand if our Christian faith and Christian Church are to be salvaged."

SCORES MILITARY HONORS.

Rev. C. E. Wagner Says They Were Out of Place for MacDonald.

The military honors paid to J. Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain, when he visited Washington were out of place, in the opinion of the Rev. C. Everett Wagner, who preached yesterday in Union Methodist Episcopal Church, Forty-eighth Street, west of Broadway.

"Since the Kellogg pact," he said, "it is now time to change the type of high honors which the United States pays a distinguished foreign guest. When a peace ship bearing MacDonald, a pacifist, is escorted into New York Harbor by naval cruisers, it is a paradoxical situation. When MacDonald, one of the world's most prominent peace advocates, is received in Washington with military honors—the highest kind at present accepted in national etiquette—it is certainly ridiculous and absurd. Strange inconsistencies lie down together!

"Of course, the type of national honors of any nation change slowly. But it certainly is a reflection upon the ingenuity of the American mind if we cannot create a new type of national honors which will be more appropriate for other distinguished peace visitors."

GERMAN BUSINESS REPORTED LAGGING

The Department of Commerce Agent Says Expected Revival Has Not Materialized.

IMPROVEMENTS CURTAILED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Developments up to the middle of October have made it clear that the business revival anticipated for this year in Germany will not materialize, and that hopes must be postponed until next Spring, according to a radio message received by the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attaché Miller at Berlin.

"All German commercial transactions," Mr. Miller reported, "have been affected by the reduced ration of foreign capital received this year. German economy has become accustomed to large investments of foreign capital each year, and cannot forego their continuance without some disturbance to business conditions.

"The increasing weakness of the stock market continues, based partly on the tightness of the domestic capital market, and partly on the political and psychological atmosphere.

"The present coalition government is faced by a number of unsolved problems, including the ratification of the Young plan, relief to unemployed and tax readjustment. The situation is further complicated by the fact that in 1930 the first repayments on foreign commercial loans made since stabilization begin falling due.

"Domestic municipal loans recently attempted have been comparatively unsuccessful. The city of Meissen has been compelled to sell its public utilities, while Berlin announces the curtailment of its municipal construction program.

"Bankruptcies, receiverships and the value of protested drafts are slightly declining. Unemployment is above the corresponding figure of 1928 by 235,000; industrial production is somewhat slackening, but export sales are holding up."

Mr. Miller said the status of the Reichsbank continues increasingly favorable, with the technical position growing strong enough to warrant a lowering of the present high discount rate of 7.5 per cent., providing international money market conditions become more favorable.

Gold holdings have somewhat increased, even after the rise in the British rate. Loans and discounts at the end of September totaled 2,827,000,000 marks, gold holdings 2,212,000,000 marks, but gold exchange increased to 335,000,000 marks.

Total holdings of gold and gold exchange at the end of September amounted to 2,547,000,000 marks, with note circulation reaching 5,347,000,000 marks, the highest for this year.

The trend of money rates continued upward. Mr. Miller said, with call money between 9 and 10½ per cent, thirty-day loans averaging 9.6 per cent and the private discount rate at 7.17 per cent.

"The loan market is still stagnant," Mr. Miller added. "Only 1,720,000 marks were borrowed abroad in September. Total foreign loans floated during the first nine months of this year amount to 600,300,000 marks—or less than one-half of last year's figure of 1,297,400,000 marks for the same period.

"Domestic loans were only 20,000,000 marks and the issues of new shares totaled 6,800,000 marks. The stock market is growing weaker, with support confined to a pool organized by Berlin banks, but not as yet strongly intervening."

M. & N. A. RAILROAD SOLD TO FRANK KELL

Texas Cereal Manufacturer Buys Property From St. Louis Investors for Less Than $3,000,000.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 20 (AP).—Frank Kell, cereal manufacturer of Wichita Falls, Texas, bought the Missouri & Northern Arkansas Railroad from St. Louis investors here last week, it was learned last night. The consideration was said to have been below the $3,600,000 mark, which the government placed as the lowest valuation of the property at bankruptcy hearings about eight years ago.

The sale was executed through W. Stephenson of Little Rock, Ark., president and receiver. He was here last week, but returned to the railroad's headquarters at Harrison, Ark. The road has a 300-mile right of way from Joplin, Mo., to Helena, Ark., and was originally promoted by the late Richard C. Kerens, former Ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

Since its establishment the M. & N. A. is said to have cost St. Louis investors approximately $11,000,000.

From Kerens's control the road passed to the late James Scullin of St. Louis; ex-Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, former Ambassador to Russia; Powell Clayton of Arkansas, former Minister to Mexico, and the late Festus J. Wade, bank president. Wade was appointed receiver in 1912, serving eight years. C. A. Phelan of Chicago succeeded him. It was reorganized in 1922 with the United States Government granting a $3,500,000 loan, secured by first mortgage bonds. At the same time 30,000 shares of common stock and $5,000,000 6 per cent mortgage bonds were issued.

TURKEY CROP SHOWS GAIN.

Production This Year Is 9 Per Cent Larger Than in 1928.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—This year's turkey crop will be about 9 per cent larger than last year, according to an estimate made public today by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture.

Practically all leading States have increased production, but the larger increases are in the Eastern and Southeastern States, where the crop has been small in recent years. Production has increased in the Western States, but was less marked than in 1928.

Provision Market at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Foreign and domestic interests have taken hold of cash lard and the near futures and there is a better call for refined lard than for several months past. Longs are said to have liquidated the near deliveries and the market has a better tone. At the close prices were within 5 to 12½ cents from the top, with net losses of 2½ to 7½ cents. October closed at $19.85, December $11.05, January $11.52½ and May $11.85. Bellies were pressed on sale at times and closed 25 to 40 cents lower, October being $11.50, January $11.95 and May $12.55. Short ribs were neglected, finishing at $11.25, a loss of 22½ cents for the week.

RESIDENT OFFICES REPORT ON TRADE

Cooler weather stimulated wholesale market activity in apparel and accessories during the week, a substantial increase in mail orders being reported. The demand for women's coats proved a feature, and some difficulty is reported in obtaining quick delivery, particularly of sports types. The black coat continues to dominate in more formal styles. Lines of Winter resort dresses are in course of preparation and will be shown in the near future. Recent additions to dress lines include models in new high shades, with sheer crêpe styles emphasized. Cantons and flat crêpes dominate in general lines. Satins appear to lead in formal gowns. Deep-colored fishnet styles are popular, but the supply is comparatively limited. Chinchilla coats are now held to lead in juvenile outer garments. The demand for fur coats continues to lack snap. Reorders for washed wiltons featured floor coverings. The trade is awaiting the showing of new lines on Nov 4, which are expected to reveal price advances.

The following excerpts from the market reports of leading resident buying offices indicate the major style and merchandise trends:

McGREEVEY, WERRING & HOWELL, INC.—"Palm Beach apparel is being given considerable attention by designers of better dresses, and lines are expected to be complete in about two or three weeks. High-shade dresses are the newest. Sheer crêpes are being emphasized. The 'Casino' dress, which has an accompanying short jacket, is popular for afternoon and dinner wear. In the inexpensive lines a great many of the new high shades are being shown for delivery in the next two weeks. At present the outstanding favorites are hunter green, dahlia, red and black. Black crêpes continue good and the demand for black satins is increasing. Sports coats are especially active, and there is some difficulty in meeting demands for immediate delivery on these garments. Dressy ensembles, fur trimmed, are very much in demand. Fur-trimmed hats have been sought in the past week, and it is believed this may indicate a vogue which will continue for some time."

Coats in All Types Selling.

FELIX LILIENTHAL & CO., INC.—"Coats are very active at this time and models of all types seem to be selling. The demand is for all black in general, but green seems to be selling very well. Long-haired furs are preferred, the greatest demand being for coats retailing from $95 to $125. Chinchilla coats lead all other types in the juvenile division. Inactivity continues in the fur market, and even the call for fur scarfs has eased up. In dresses, black is still in demand, with brown and green coming next. We are beginning to receive calls for high-shade dresses, although not in any large quantity. There is a scattered call for velvets in the business being placed. In the evening gowns, nets, chiffons, crêpes, satins and some lace models are important. Crêpe leads the soft materials. The new style features include button and beaded trims, combinations of fabrics and new metallics."

HART, FLANAGAN CO., INC.—"Demand for better dresses has been good, with cantons and flat crêpes in both long and modified lengths in the lead. Smart cloth dresses, such as lightweight woolens and jerseys, have also been ordered. These are made with skirts circular in effect through the insertion of slight gores and neatly belted normal waistlines. In orders for formal gowns, satins appear to lead, although crêpes and velvets are also strong favorites. The deep-colored fishnets with severe décolleté are extremely popular, but difficulty is noted in obtaining immediate delivery. Manufacturers claim that this fabric is not easy to procure, as the demand is much larger than production. Short dresses are being offered at great reductions."

MERCHANDISE REPORTING COMPANY—"While a few of the buyers in the market during the week were working on special sale merchandise, the greater number were trying to fill in stocks in order to be prepared for the coat business, should it be heavy during the next few weeks. Buyers say that it may take some little time yet for the consumer to be educated to the drastic change in dress silhouette and the longer coat. Evening wraps of metal cloth and transparent velvet with large fur collars are shown extensively and should prove good sellers from now on. Among our fur requests we have noticed that sealines and muskrats are ordered in greater number, with few requests for ponies."

Rug Openings to Show Advances.

McELROY-SHEEHAN, INC.—"Reorders for washed wiltons were a prominent factor in the activity which marked the floor covering market during the week. The demand was brisk from all parts of the country. A growing market for the higher-priced axminster rugs is also in evidence and the sale of such merchandise in retail stores was heavy. Hard-surfaced floor coverings were also in good demand and were re-ordered in substantial quantities. Interest in the trade at the present time centres on the opening of new lines on Nov. 4. The tendency toward a price advance in the majority of the new lines is apparent."

CONSOLIDATED CLOTHIERS, INC.—"Arrival of many retailers here to attend the first fashion forum in men's wear resulted in the placing of a good deal of business in men's and boys' apparel. There were numerous requests for 'prep' suits of every type and also an unusual demand for boys' suits in fancy fabrics. Overcoat orders were good in juvenile sizes. Blue chinchillas were in the lead, followed by high pile camel's hair coats in juvenile, boys' and 'prep' sizes. This type of coat is growing in popularity. With only a few manufacturers producing this garment, owing to tailoring difficulties, the supply is somewhat short of the demand."

JOHN M. BIGGINS, INC.—"The blanket business for the past week has been exceptional, with all classes of blankets in demand. Calls for cotton, part wool, all wool and crib types have been heavy and have taxed the resources of the market. As the activity continues and all indications point that way, we believe that an acute shortage of goods for immediate delivery will be felt. Hence we are recommending that retailers take quick action in covering their blanket needs."

BEN F. LEVIS—"The new Spring shades in dresses are beginning to come through, including bright reds, greens, blues and tans. These colors made quite a hit last year for wear under Fall coats. There is a decided vogue for the black and white dress. In basement dresses, the latest thing being shown in sports models is the black jersey dress with white piqué trimming. These are available in tailored and silhouette styles. The millinery demand during the last few days has been for metallic hats. Dressy velvet toques are in demand, trimmed with touches of feathers and adorned with pins. Felt hats are still in the lead."

JACK HARTBLAY, INC.—"Mail orders during the week were exceptionally heavy. In clothing, young men's single and double breasted suits with two pairs of trousers and in worsted and serge materials were in demand. The color demand centred on blues and browns. Men's topcoats were called for in browns and grays, with herringbone patterns preferred. The business in boys' overcoats stressed chinchillas and overplaids in sizes from 2 to 8. Leather and leatherette coats for men and boys are still wanted for immediate delivery. In $10.75 dresses, we find that the short dress from all indications is eliminated, regardless of price concessions."

FOREIGN RUBBER STOCKS UP

The range of price fluctuations on the Rubber Exchange of New York last week was 1 cent a pound. The daily average volume of transactions was approximately 1,000 tons.

Stocks in Liverpool and London continued to increase, and traders here report it difficult to foresee any appreciable advance in prices in view of these conditions. Arrivals of crude rubber at all ports in this country from Oct. 1 to 18 inclusive are estimated at 16,300 tons.

New Commodity Exchange Busy.

Sales aggregating 2,000,000 yards of burlap and 50,000 sugar bags were put through on the new Burlap and Jute Exchange last week. The Exchange opened for trading on Wednesday. Burlap activity was curtailed somewhat on Thursday and Friday, owing to the closing of the Calcutta market on those days.

COMMODITY AVERAGE DECLINES SLIGHTLY

Special to The New York Times.

The average of July 2 90.2, was the highest of the year to date; this week's average is the lowest of the year. The highest of 1928 was 100.3, in the second week of September; the lowest was 95.1, in the second week of January.

Crump's index number of British commodity prices, as cabled for the past week, and also based on 100 as the average for 1926, is 90.6, which compares with 91.2 a week ago, 90.6 two weeks ago, 91.6 three weeks ago and 91.9 four weeks ago. The average of April 5, 94.4, was the highest of the year to date; the average of June 21, 89.6, was the lowest. The average of May 25, 96.7, was the highest for 1928; the average of Oct. 12, 91.8, which was unchanged from the three previous weeks, was the lowest.

The index number of average Italian prices, compiled and cabled by the Chamber of Commerce at Milan and based on 100 as the average of 1926, is 72.0. This compares with 72.1 the week before, 72.2 two weeks before, 72.3 three weeks before and 72.3 four weeks before. The average of March 15 and 22, 76.4, was the highest of the year to date; this week's average is the lowest. The average of Dec. 28, 76.1 was the highest for 1928; the lowest was 74.0, in the first week of January.

CATTLE PRICES HIGHER.

Values Move Up on the Week Despite Large Receipts.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—A revival came to the cattle market in the week just ended despite largest receipts for the period in three years. Prices on best steers, cows and heifers were 50 cents to $1 higher; stockers and feeders 25 cents and Western range cattle 25 to 50 cents better than a week ago.

For fancy yearlings $16.40 was paid, with the best heavy steers at $16.50 and heifers at $15.25. Average of beef steers for the week was $18.95, a gain of 45 cents for the week compared with $14.60 last year. Packers have moved out a good part of their surplus dressed beef and the market is in better shape.

Although hog prices had a good rally, the close was 10 to 20 cents lower than a week ago, with an average of $9.55, a drop of 15 cents for the week and last year and $1.45 from two years ago. About 60 per cent of the 135,000 hogs received at Chicago for the week were of the new crop.

General quality holds good, although corn prices have been above those of last year and hogs below 1928 for several months. Receipts from early Spring to the present time have been more evenly distributed than ever before.

Fat lamb prices declined 50 to 75 cents, with heavy receipts making an average of $12.80, a loss of 10 cents from the previous week and 30 cents from a year ago. Sheep averaged $4.50, or the same as a week ago. Yearlings declined 25 to 50 cents and sheep prices were unchanged.

Non-Callable
A bond which is non-callable prior to maturity enables an investor to make a definite investment plan and, of even greater importance, it removes the possibility of his capital being unexpectedly returned to him for reinvestment at a time when money rates are low. The non-callable feature of Canadian Provincial and Municipal bonds merits your consideration.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

New Impressions of the Week—"Undigested Securities" and Old-Time Reminiscence.

The exceptionally violent decline on the Stock Exchange last week, the helpless throwing-over of unwieldy speculative holdings by "pools" and individual adventurers, and the seeming absence of support to the market from the promoters of the ill-fated speculation, caused a change in the financial viewpoint, as such occurrences always do. It may or may not last; that usually depends on the market's subsequent behavior. But for the time, at any rate, all Wall Street seemed to see the reality of things, and to discard the catchwords and newly invented maxims of an imaginary political economy.

The new attitude had some interesting results. For one thing, it caused immediate inquiry into analogies of the past; into causes and consequences even of that pre-war finance whose teachings were lately dismissed as wholly negligible in the present favored era. To that large part of the present Wall Street community, whose own financial reminiscence begins with 1925, comparison with 1903 by Colonel Ayres had as remote a sound as if he had cited the Grant & Ward failure of 1884 or the "Gold conspiracy" of 1869. But, somehow, every one vaguely knew that 1903 was a year of highly unpleasant reckoning for an era of undigested securities, and there were reasons why that impressed even the Wall Street of 1929. For what had happened this season was not only an utterly unparalleled underwriting of newly created company stocks but an increase in brokers' borrowings, at New York alone, of $400,000,000 during the Autumn's Stock Exchange liquidation, on top of a billion-dollar expansion in the preceding three months. Such a picture inevitably left uneasy doubt as to whether a great part of this year's abnormal outpour of new securities had not remained unsold and carried along on brokers' credit, in first or second hands.

The story of 1903 was simple enough in retrospect. The Wall Street of that day had come to believe that resources of credit were absolutely boundless. In one of the immediately preceding years, new industrial incorporations had footed up $3,500,000,000. In another the listing of new securities by the Stock Exchange was a thousand million dollars greater than the year before. The crisis came in 1903 with the market's sudden discovery that the huge mass of new "flotations," carried along expectantly on credit, could not be sold. That discovery was followed, first by the throwing over of high-grade existing stocks to protect the overstrained accounts, then by "unloading" of undistributed new securities for what they would bring. There were no "brokers' loan reports" in those simple days. If there had been, they would have shown what sweeping contraction in the "loans on stocks and bonds" was required to surmount the crisis.

So much for the faraway 1903 and its long-remembered "rich men's panic." The episode undoubtedly presented contrasts as well as analogies with the market of today, but Wall Street is just now in a mood to study both. What undoubtedly impressed the financial mind last week was the compilation of issues of new securities, showing September's outpour to have exceeded that of the same month in any other year by 125 per cent, the nine-months record to have overtopped any other similar period by $3,600,000,000, and the offerings by investment trusts alone in the year to date to have been $2,200,000,000, as against less than $800,000,000 in 1928. Confronted with this story of the requisitions of 1929 and skeptical, as it was bound to be, of the ready distribution of any such deluge of new stocks and bonds to ultimate investors, Wall Street inevitably began to look with deepened misgiving on the market.

The situation, unpleasant as one must recognize it to be, has its reassuring aspects. When Mr. Morgan admitted in 1903 the fact of "undigested securities," Mr. James J. Hill proposed a change in the title to "indigestible securities." There is far less warrant nowadays for that suggestion; the financial community's capacity for eventual digestion of the Gargantuan bill of fare that has been thrust upon it is at all events much greater. Nevertheless, if it should prove that promoters and speculators, when both had reached a pitch of unbounded confidence, have been able to overstrain the strongest imaginable credit mechanism, it would only prove what every one familiar with American financial history knew was probable beforehand.

LONDON IS ELATED AT STERLING'S RISE

Gold Reserve in Bank of England Expected to Be Reconstituted Rapidly.

SOME MAY GO TO PARIS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Developments since the bank rate was advanced three weeks ago have fulfilled the more hopeful expectations. This week's very rapid advance of sterling in terms of the dollar has surprised even the most hopeful financiers. The rise has in fact been so unusually swift as to arouse doubts whether the advance can be maintained.

The situation in some respects is mixed. At present the exchange rate between London and Paris is such as to make further gold withdrawals from London logical, and, according to French bankers, such a movement is not unlikely to be resumed next week, when considerable pressure on the Paris money market appears to be expected. On the other hand stands the possibility that Paris may this time draw gold from New York, a movement which would certainly benefit London by reducing the French demand for gold in this market.

The Bank's Gold Reserve.

Thus far the effect of the higher bank rate on the Bank of England's gold reserve has been altogether favorable. The gold reserve having already increased £2,589,000 during the past fortnight, there is reason to expect a further substantial influx of gold to the bank during the near future. Next week only a small quantity of gold is due to arrive in the open market from South Africa, but in the following week £1,120,000 is due and, under present conditions, the Bank of England should obtain nearly all of it.

About £700,000 gold is now on the way to London from Argentina, and £500,000 more has just left New Zealand for this market. It is possible also that Spain may decide to ship a considerable quantity of gold to London, with a view to supporting Spanish exchange; which, since abolition of official control at the end of last week, has been moving heavily against Spain.

Market for New Loans Dead.

In the disturbed condition of home and foreign markets, and with money scarce and dear, offers of new securities in London have been reduced to an absolute minimum. At the moment no public issues of any importance are being made or even contemplated. For this there are more reasons than one. Many new companies floated in last year's boom are now issuing their first reports, and as a whole they have to be described as most unsatisfactory.

Consequently, nearly every new undertaking is viewed with suspicion. The situation is made worse by floating rumors of further difficulties in connection with certain financial groups whose position has been impaired by the heavy depreciation in their securities. Naturally, the Wall Street situation does not help matters.

London Disturbed by News From Australia and Brazil

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—There have been unfavorable developments in foreign finance this week. One of them was the election of the Labor Government in Australia, which has resulted in a widespread ventilation of unfavorable views regarding Australian finance and business, which caused a sharp fall in this market in all Australian securities.

Brazilian securities have also fallen heavily, owing to the reported gravity of the coffee situation. In some cases the week's fall in Brazilian bonds amounted to a collapse, though the market at the moment looks better on the official announcement by the San Paolo Government that it has been able to raise a loan in London and New York.

Altogether, the London market is going through a trying period. Forced liquidation on a considerable scale, in connection with the collapse of the Hatry companies, took place again this week. There is a certain amount of bear pressure, but also very much voluntary liquidation in the markets.

BRITISH GOLD EXPORTS MUCH ABOVE IMPORTS

Net Loss in September Was £4,722,436, for the Nine Months £27,305,902.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Gold imports to Great Britain during September were £3,760,626, of which £3,377,144 came from South Africa, £200,000 from South America and the balance from other countries. Exports were £8,483,062, of which £4,306,824 went to France, £1,566,720 to Germany, £1,680,300 to the United States, £234,235 to Switzerland, £161,131 to India, £54,902 to Egypt, £177,851 to Australia and the balance to other countries.

In the nine completed months gold imports were £35,660,750, against £36,325,582 in the same period last year, and gold exports £62,966,652, against £37,285,649. Of the period's exports, France has taken £22,462,315, Germany £18,124,985 and the United States £12,594,684. Of the imports £27,356,719 came from South Africa.

British Living Costs Below Last Year

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The cost-of-living estimate for Great Britain, published by the Ministry of Labor for the beginning of October, shows the average to be 65 per cent. above July, 1914. A month ago the increase over the pre-war average was 64. A year ago it was 66.

EUROPE RECALLING CAPITAL FROM HERE

LONDON HAS SOLD STOCKS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The week's rapid rise of the European exchanges at New York undoubtedly reflect the very general recall of European money, which was drawn from its home markets to New York during the recent period of speculative excitement in America and abnormally high Wall Street money rates. It is not possible to obtain any reliable estimate as to the extent of this return of British credits. But there is general agreement that the movement has been large.

British capital in particular has moved homeward, partly because of London's more attractive money rate and the lower rates now obtainable in New York, but partly also because of the prevalent feeling that the Wall Street market has definitely left "boom conditions" behind it. The feeling is now strong that the trend of American security values, over the next few months, is likely to be downward. It must also be kept in mind that, for numerous reasons, London speculators in your stocks have in the last few weeks been liquidating their American holdings on a very substantial scale.

The rise in the exchanges has not been wholly due to recall of British capital, however. It is also believed to reflect in some measure withdrawal of French balances from New York. These funds were remitted to Paris through London, and their conversion on the London market into franc remittances appears to be the only explanation for this week's renewed weakness of sterling at Paris.

Transfer of funds from New York to London is regarded as having more or less definite limits. Before the movement ceases, however, it is believed by hopeful observers that at least a part of these repatriated balances will come back in the form of gold. The current rate of exchange is the highest since July, 1928, and sterling now commands a premium over dollars.

The last import of gold by London from the United States occurred with cable exchange at 4.88¼, whereas this week's rate did not reach 4.87½. It is believed by some exchange dealers, however, that under present conditions shipments of gold from the New York market might begin before the higher level should be reached. Much interest is also taken in the fact that the rate of exchange between Paris and New York is now very near the point at which direct gold shipments from America to France would be profitable.

Light and Power—Foundation Necessities of Civilization

Today the whole world pauses to pay tribute to Thomas A. Edison. To him more than to any other it is indebted for electric light and electric power

Only two generations ago there was not a single electric light in use in the world. Edison's perfection of the incandescent lamp, however, was but a part of his achievement. With no guiding precedents he conceived and put into operation a complete system for generating and distributing electricity.

More than ce ebrating the 50th Anniversary of the incandescent lamp, Light's Golden Jubilee has opened the eyes of the world to the tremendous advance made during this short span. Founder of an industry, Thomas A. Edison has probably done more to raise standards of living throughout the world than any other man since history began.

BANK PLANS CAUSE CRITICISM IN LONDON

BERLIN IS CAUTIOUS

But Bankers Consider Present Negotiations Will Produce a Practical Organization.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Pending disclosures of the finally completed plans for the establishment of the International Bank, the city's judgment on the program for the new institution may be described as virtually suspended. What criticism there is, however, is largely hostile, but since this is based on incomplete data, it need not be treated too seriously. What it seems to reflect, however, is an underlying suspicion that an attempt is being made, perhaps unwittingly, to deprive existing banks of some of their international business.

It is admitted, however, that the original proposals were more or less already drafted and that the final scheme will be considerably amended. But the burden of criticism here this week was that no institution can be formed which could hope successfully to regulate the flow of gold from one country to another and to control the exchanges sufficiently to effect that purpose. However, the objection to such possible aspects of the plan does not express the general opinion held here regarding the main project. That is altogether favorable to an international bank devoting its activities to the business of distributing German reparations.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—Berlin bankers consider that the Baden-Baden negotiations concerning the projected International Bank will produce a practicable form of organization. Most of them consider, however, that the granting of the right to any individual central bank to veto the International Bank's credit transactions will cause obstruction.

Dr. Walter of Frankfort-on-Main, discussing the outlook for the bank, holds that cautious central banks will not accept the International Bank's credits for the purpose of maintaining their exchanges. Such use of credits, he holds, would encourage countries with weak exchanges to maintain too large a home money circulation, too low discount rates and too high prices.

LONDON SENT $8,053,790 GOLD IN SEPTEMBER

Yesterday's report by the Commerce Department on gold exports and imports during September classified by countries shows that, out of $18,781,246 gold imported during last month, $8,053,790 came from Great Britain, $2,840,762 from Canada and $6,791,574 from four South American countries. Berlin's Gold Reserve Rises, But Is Far Below End of 1928

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The Reichsbank's present gold reserve of 2,211,000,000 marks shows very gratifying improvement over the 1,764,000,000 holdings reported on the third week of June. Nevertheless, the present gold holdings are 2,729,000,000 below the amount reported at the beginning of the year.

Although German imports of foreign gold have recently been large, they have not counterbalanced the heavy export movement in the year's earlier months. The official statement just published of the gold movement during the eight months ending with August shows that gold imports into Germany had been 411,603,000 marks, but that exports had been 959,731,000.

FRENCH PRICES ROSE SLIGHTLY LAST MONTH

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The index of average wholesale prices in France during September, published by the Statistique Générale, based on 100 as the average for 1914, is stated this week at 610, compared with 609 in August and 626 in July. National products average 626, as against 624 a year ago; imported products, 581, compared with 649. Foodstuffs are reckoned at 565, against 559 in August, 596 in July and 590 a year ago. Raw material is 650, compared with 671 in September last year.

Aug., 1929	609	Sep., 1927	613
July, 1929	628	Sep., 1926	804
June, 1929	623	Sep., 1925	567
May, 1929	626	Sep., 1924	496
Apr., 1929	640	Sep., 1923	490
Mar., 1929	653	Sep., 1922	380

The highest point ever reached was 854 at the end of July, 1926, when the franc touched its lowest point in the collapse of that year. In 1918 the average, for the year was 339.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The Paris Stock Exchange has reflected this week the influence of sales of French securities which Germany had been accumulating for some time past. Furthermore, speculators and even that part of the general public which usually buys for cash are discouraged by the recent slump in prices. Therefore the offerings which have been pressed on the market had difficulty in finding sufficient support. Investors also seem to be showing a distinct shifting of interest toward bonds; they are evidently avoiding shares whose net yield at recent prices has been relatively too low.

There was no special change this week in the gold reserve or the foreign exchange holdings of the bank, but the statement of Thursday, covering the position of Oct. 11, was noteworthy for reduction in nearly all credit items. This showed the extent to which the market had repaid its heavy borrowings made at the end of September. Bills discounted decreased 762 millions for the week, loans against securities 78 millions. On the other side of the balance sheet, the accounts of the Treasury and the Caisse d'Amortissement rose 364 millions, showing that this sum at least had practically disappeared from the market. In consequence of these different movements, circulation was reduced 419 millions and private deposits 609 millions, with the result that the ratio of gold cover to liabilities improved from 46.10 to 46.48.

Of the new securities issued on the Paris market during September, 552 million francs were shares, including 504 millions of capital increased by existing companies and 48 millions in shares of new companies. Bond issues for the month were 369 millions. In August the total of new security issues was reported as 621 million francs; in July, which was a high record, it reached 1,543 millions.

The Paris money market is still abundantly supplied with credit, but it is noteworthy that the open discount rate for bankers' acceptances is slightly higher than the official rate at the Bank of France. This is attributable to restrictions by the bank, which accepts only purely commercial bills for discount.

(COMPANIA LITOGRAFICA DE LA HABANA)

7% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock convertible at the option of the holder into Common Stock at the rate of three shares of Common Stock for each share of Preferred any time prior to October 15, 1934, and on or after said date at the rate of two and one-half shares of Common Stock for each share of Preferred. In case of Preferred Stock called for redemption, the conversion right may be exercised at any time up to and including the day preceding the date fixed for redemption.

Preferred stock has preference over the Common Stock as to assets and cumulative dividends at the rate of $7 a share per annum payable quarterly on the 15th day of January, April, July and October. Redeemable in whole or in part on January 15, 1930 or on any dividend date thereafter, at the option of the Company, upon not less than thirty days' notice, at $110 a share and accumulated and unpaid dividends. Upon dissolution, whether voluntary or involuntary, Preferred Stock will be entitled to $105 a share and accumulated and unpaid dividends before any distribution may be made upon the Common Stock.

The following has been summarized from a letter received from Mr. Dayton Hedges, Chairman of Board:

History and Business: Compania Litografica de la Habana (Havana Lithographing Company) was incorporated under the laws of the Republic of Cuba in 1907 as a consolidation of three leading Cuban lithographing companies then in existence. In 1922 it acquired the business and assets of its principal competitor, the firm of Estrugo and Maseda.

The Company conducts a business in both stone and photo lithography, steel die and copper plate embossing, printing and binding, and all types of commercial lithography. Its business is closely related to the tobacco industry and approximately 60% of the company's sales are in the form of cigarette boxes, cartons, cigar labels and bands, etc. Cuban tobacco is known the world over and Havana is the center of the industry. The Havana Lithographing Company is, therefore, well located to supply the elaborate type of work required by this important industry. In addition thereto, it does a diversified business in general lithographing products for candy, perfume and other manufacturers. It also does a majority of the engraving and printing for banks and institutions in Cuba, as well as advertising specialty work such as calendars and posters. It is noted for the quality of its color work which, due to a combination of excellent plant facilities and plentiful, efficient labor, is hard to duplicate in other localities. The Company numbers among its customers several internationally-known concerns.

Capitalization: The capitalization of Havana Lithographing Company, upon completion of the present financing, will be as follows:

	Authorized	Outstanding
7% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock (par value $100)	$2,250,000	$1,800,000

25,000 shares optioned to management and bankers at $11.00 per share until October 1, 1939.

Provision is made for the adjustment in certain cases of the conversion and/or option price and for the protection of the conversion privilege and stock option against dilution.

Earnings: The net profits, after depreciation and Cuban income taxes, for the five years ended December 31, 1928 as certified by Deloitte, Plender, Griffiths & Co., and for the six months ended June 30, 1929, as compiled by the auditors from the Company's records without audit, as determined after the elimination of bonuses to directors and other non-recurring items averaging $105,753 per annum, were as follows:

Year	Before Depreciation and Income Tax	After Depreciation and Income Tax

The average earnings for five and one-half years were equivalent to over two and one-third times the annual dividend requirements of $126,000 on the 7% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock to be outstanding upon completion of this financing. After the deduction of Preferred Stock dividends, the five and one-half year average earnings were equivalent to $1.48 per share on Common Stock to be presently outstanding. Earnings for 18 months ended June 30, 1929 were at the annual rate of $1.52 per share. The above earnings are after the payment of bonuses to employees averaging $24,983 per annum. The earnings for the three months ended September 30th, 1929, as compiled by the auditors from the Company's records, without audit, are at approximately the same rate as for the six months ended June 30th, 1929.

Assets: The Company's books from January 1, 1924 to December 31, 1928 have been audited by Deloitte, Plender, Griffiths & Co. The pro forma Balance Sheet at June 30, 1929, which has been adjusted to give effect to the present financing, has been compiled by the auditors from the records of the Company, without audit. Total net tangible assets amount to $1,915,448 and net current assets amount to $758,719. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities is approximately 3½ to 1. The land and buildings are carried on the books at cost and equipment at a value which is less than the appraised value as determined by independent engineers.

Management: The management will be under the direction of Angel Estrugo as President and the Board of Directors will include Jose Maseda, Ceferino Junquera and Avelino Perez, all of whom have been connected with the company for many years and are primarily responsible for its successful development during the past. In addition to the foregoing, the Board will include Mr. George Foster, who will also act as Vice-President. Mr. Foster, until recently, was General Manager of La Poesia Moderna, which company is engaged in the printing and engraving of revenue and postage stamps for the Cuban Government.

BERLIN IS HOPEFUL OF MONEY OUTLOOK

REICHSBANK VERY STRONG

Relief at Reports That Bond Issues May Once More Interest the American Investor.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The outstanding feature of the past week's Berlin money market was the rapid descent of dollar exchange, which on Friday touched 4.188 marks, the lowest of the year to date. The cause for this movement of exchange in favor of Berlin has been the withdrawal of European funds from New York since the decline of American interest rates.

Although those withdrawals have increased the supply of money in the Berlin market, money rates have nevertheless remained high. An unusually large demand for cash for mid-month settlements, coming after the quarterly tax payments, induced a sharp rise in the money market. Day loans, which had fallen to 6½@9¼ per cent a week before, advanced on Friday of this week to 8@10. Monthly loans, however, remained at the previous week's somewhat easier rate of 9@10½ per cent, and the outside discount rate was unchanged at 7¼ per cent.

On the whole, bankers regard the German outlook for short credits favorably, basing this view on the very favorable Reichsbank status shown in its report for Oct. 15, and on the improvement of the international money market. The Reichsbank's discounts are 160,000,000 marks less than a month ago and note circulation is lower by 72,000,000. These figures are considered highly satisfactory, since the financing of the crop movement is still under way.

Regarding the international money market, great interest is taken in cabled reports that the American public is paying renewed attention to fixed-interest securities, and that offerings of new bonds are likely again to be large. This, if correct, is considered to indicate not only improvement in the situation of the American money market, but a much better prospect for the capital market of the outside world.

SATISFIED AT EXPORT TRADE OF GERMANY

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—Germany's export trade in most branches still continues very satisfactory. Export of glass has risen substantially, although shipments of pottery are at present slackening. Foreign trade in footwear, which showed a large surplus of imports during the first half of the year, became enormously active in July and August, during which months the export of such goods was more than double the import.

Exports to Russia are at present light. The Soviet's trade mission at Berlin is, however, entering on a new form of contract with German manufacturers, under which the Germans bind themselves to deliver specified sorts of goods during the next three years if Russia demands them. Russia, however, reserves the right not to put in such demands.

UNEMPLOYMENT STILL LARGE IN GERMANY

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—German trade is still slowly declining. The report on unemployment for September shows that 9.6 per cent of labor union members were out of work in that month, as against 9 per cent in August. The Official Institute for Studying Trade Fluctuations foreshadows 2,000,000 unemployed during the coming Winter. This would still be less than the 2,400,000 of last Winter.

Car loadings reported by the railway corporations for September fall slightly below those of September, 1928. Net earnings for August, however, held up well; operating receipts for the month amounting to 495,000,000 marks, operating expenditure to 403,000,000 and service reparation bonds to 53,000,000. The balance was carried to various reserves.

TAX REVENUE DISAPPOINTS.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—Tax receipts for the first half of the current financial year were 4,845 million marks, as against 9,325 millions estimated for the whole year. Less has been collected, therefore during the half year than its proportion of the budget estimate.

This shortage is due to the failure of direct taxes, particularly customs and excise, to yield the expected sums. Reparation-controlled revenues yielded 1,628 million marks out of 2,970 millions estimated for the whole year. Among the controlled revenues the spirit monopoly shows the largest decline.

BANK OF ENGLAND'S GOLD.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The Bank of England took into its reserve during the past calendar week £1,103,001 gold, of which £843,300 was bullion bought from arrivals in the open market and £260,000 was coin received from South America. Withdrawals were only £7,197.

During the coming week only £250,000 gold in the form of sovereigns is expected from South Africa; this will be sent into the Bank of England.

BANK SUPPORT FAILS TO MAINTAIN PRICES

SHARES HAVE FALLEN AGAIN

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The banks have continued to act jointly in support of the Berlin stock market; during the past week they have repeatedly intervened by agreement and have bought large quantities of stocks. Nevertheless, their support has had only slight and temporary effect and the Boerse has been consistently weak and nervous.

Farbenindustrie shares have fallen again despite the company's favorable reports. At the end of the week a particularly sharp decline occurred in potash stocks. Vereinigite Glanzstoffe, the leading rayon stock, which reached last year the high price of 880, was quoted on Friday of this week at 227.

The Frankfurter Zeitung's index of average Stock Exchange prices on Oct. 20 was 114.56, as against 114.67 a week before, 117.91 at the end of September and 141.34 last Autumn.

The Low German Wage Scale.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—Wages in Germany continue stationary. The average weekly skilled wage in September was $12.08. This rate is the average of the figures fixed by collective agreement, but government inquiry has shown that wages actually paid exceed the collective agreement rate in various industries by 8 to as much as 60 per cent.

Community Water Service System

WESTCHESTER County, adjoining New York City on the north, is one of the wealthiest and fastest growing suburban districts in the world. Building permits issued in the County during 1928 aggregated more than $125,000,000—an amount greater than the individual totals of 40 of the 48 States. A sound foundation for continued enlargement of public utility services—notably the distribution of water—is thus established by the character and location of Westchester communities.

Subsidiaries of the Community Water Service Company serve important cities and towns in Westchester, including New Rochelle, Dobb's Ferry, Ardsley, Hastings-on-Hudson, Bronxville, Tuckahoe, The Pelhams, Eastchester, Scarsdale (at wholesale), Portchester and Rye; also Greenwich, Sound Beach, Cos Cob, Riverside and Glenville in Connecticut, all within the metropolitan district of New York City.

Approximately 50 per cent. of the population served by the Community System is in rapidly growing communities within 35 miles of New York City, Boston, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

The Company has an extremely simple financial structure, consisting of Bonds, Preferred and Common Stocks. The Bonds and Preferred Stock outstanding bear a fixed return without warrants or conversion privileges. The Common Stock is, therefore, in position to benefit fully from increased earnings.

EUROPE FORTUNATE IN HARVEST RESULTS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 18.—The reduction of Italy's wheat imports has been one cause for the decrease in the country's surplus of imports in the nine completed months from 5,631 million lire last year to 5,298 millions this year. It has been one reflection of the relatively favorable situation of Europe in the past year's wheat production.

As against the estimated large decrease in the yield of Canada and the United States, the season's output of wheat in nineteen countries of Europe is now estimated at 352 million quintals, which is somewhat below the 367 millions produced in 1928, but largely exceeds the 332 millions of 1927. Including production of the three agricultural countries in Northern Africa and three countries in Asia, total production of wheat, rye, barley and oats is estimated this year at 1,056 million quintals, compared with 1,046 millions last year and 975 millions in the year 1927.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The Agricultural Council, reporting on the German crop results at the harvest, describes the quality of the year's wheat crop as extraordinarily good. It is declared to be better even than that of 1928, when the quality was classed as excellent.

RELIEVED BY EASIER MONEY.

ROME, Oct. 18.—The Italian market for State securities and industrial stocks has been depressed and the country's savings are apparently increasing slowly. On the other hand, the easier money market at New York and the talk of a lower reserve bank discount rate have contributed to a better situation in the foreign exchange market.

It is believed here that continuance of the downward trend of money at New York would undoubtedly help Europe's economic situation and should render European consumers capable of making larger purchases in the American market.

DOHERTY ASKS LAWS TO CURB OIL OUTPUT

NATIONAL DEFENSE ISSUE

Cities Service Head Declares Waste of Petroleum Endangers Safety in War.

Calling for immediate Federal action to conserve American oil resources as a national defense policy, Henry L. Doherty, president of the Cities Service Company, announced yesterday that he would tender to the American Bar Association $120,000, to be used for charity should a committee named by that body fail to sustain his contention that the government has the constitutional right to legislate against further waste of oil under the present methods of production.

Mr. Doherty, who has long been a stormy petrel in the controversy over oil conservation, sent his latest utterance on the subject back from London by a special messenger after he had set forth his views in a preliminary statement prepared while he was traveling to Europe on the steamship Olympic. He is causing to be published in the newspapers of Memphis, Tenn., a series of double-page advertisements addressed to the delegates attending the convention of the American Bar Association in Memphis this week.

Seeks Impartial Tribunal.

He suggests that the American Bar Association name an impartial tribunal, composed of its own members, to thresh out the question after hearing all sides, with the view to settling the controversy as to whether the Federal Government has the right to compel, by legislation, the economical management of the country's oil resources. He contends that voluntary action by the oil companies can never be made sufficiently effective to end the "vandalistic exploitation" of the country's oil deposits, pointing out that since he first advocated compulsory cooperation many efforts have been made toward voluntary cooperation.

"What we need in the oil controversy is a decision," Mr. Doherty's statement reads. "According to the oil lawyers, neither the States nor the Federal Government are clothed with adequate powers to provide for war. This is a matter of public service. Does the American Bar Association endeavor to assist in matters of important public service and will it assist in this matter? If a definite decision is given that the Federal Government has no power in this matter, I will start a campaign immediately to amend our Constitution."

Mr. Doherty holds that the oil controversy could have been avoided except for the obstacles and confusion created by lawyers. He insists that pool operation of oil properties, under government sanction, is the only solution of the problem of overproduction.

"President Coolidge five years ago asserted that the supremacy of nations might be determined by the possession of available petroleum and petroleum products," Mr. Doherty's statement continues. "Oil is the most important munition of war. It is being wasted in the most shocking manner. What we waste today may compel us to pay tomorrow for our folly of today in a ruthless sacrifice of the blood and treasure of the nation and in ghastly magnitude.

Sees Waste Due to Laws.

"The laws under which oil is produced necessitates this colossal waste. Our laws automatically bring about depletion of our domestic resources, and automatically conduce to the conservation of oil in foreign countries. Our laws invite foreign companies to produce their oils here to supply their markets abroad, and hold their ground resources unimpaired in foreign countries. We do not know how much oil we have left. All the evidence that can be produced and that is entitled to rank as true evidence would indicate that a shortage is imminent.

"Oil is now drilled for in such a frantic manner and produced in such a frenzied way that it is impossible to make any very accurate figures on the waste of oil, or even on the waste of gas, but I think it is safe to say that we might possibly increase the oil needed for war purposes as much as twenty times by the prompt adoption of sane laws to control it.

"Nature created these oil pools as a unit and we are trying to operate them, not for the benefit of the joint owners, but as a race to see which one of the owners can get the oil first. The present laws give ownership of the oil to whoever can capture it, regardless of where it comes from. In fact, the law legalizes a robbery. The courts have said that excessive drilling cannot be enjoined and that the remedy is for the owners to offset this drilling. Under our present laws it is easily possible for one owner to get thirty times as much oil as had underlaid his property before the pool was opened."

SCHULTE GROUP QUITS MORROW CONCERNS

Indications of a definite cleavage between David A. Schulte and associates and the financial syndicate headed by George K. Morrow were seen yesterday in the announcement that the former had severed their official connection with the Union Tobacco Company, Webster Eisenlohr, Inc., and the Union Cigar Company.

Mr. Morrow and his group recently acquired control of the United Cigar Stores Company and affiliated companies from George J. Whelan and associates, with whom Mr. Schulte had been more or less closely identified. After the Whelan control passed to the Morrow group Mr. Schulte gave up his official connection with the Vadsco Sales Corporation. Now he has withdraw from three other companies in which he had a joint interest with Mr. Whelan and associates.

The announcement by Mr. Schulte yesterday said that he and his associates were getting out of Union Tobacco, Union Cigar and Webster Eisenlohr because they wished to devote their time to their major interests. The largest of these interests are the Schulte Retail Stores Corporation, the Schulte 5 Cents-to-$1 Stores, Inc., and Park & Tilford.

The Schulte retail tobacco store chain has not yet joined the United Cigar organization in advancing retail cigarette prices. United Cigar advanced retail prices from two packages for 25 cents to 15 cents straight after the principal cigarette manufacturers had increased the wholesale price of popular brands to $6.40 a thousand.

Mr. Schulte's resignation from Webster Eisenlohr, Inc., is believed to be especially significant, since he has been the leading figure in this company since he and associates obtained control. He has been president and a director. Associates of Mr. Whelan also were on the directorate. The company formerly was known as Otto Eisenlohr & Bro., Inc. Control of the company, it is believed, now rests with Mr. Morrow and associates.

Mr. Schulte has been chairman of the board of Union Tobacco.

INVESTMENT CONCERNS TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Stockholders of the Investors Equity Company, Inc., and the Motion Picture Capital Corporation have ratified the plan to consolidate the latter with the former by an exchange of stock on the basis of three shares of Investors Equity for five shares of Motion Picture.

Based on the earnings of Investors Equity from Dec. 1, 1925, to Aug. 31, 1929, the earnings of the two companies available for the 718,954 half shares of Investors Equity common stock which will be outstanding after the merger amounted to $5.04 a share. In the same period the market value of the portfolios of the two companies increased about $4,780,000, and after allowing for estimated Federal income taxes on untaken profits the net appreciation applicable to Investors Equity amounted to $5.96 a share.

The Motion Picture Capital Corporation was organized six years ago principally for financing within the motion picture industry, but later the stockholders authorized the directors to restrict or entirely discontinue the lending of money to the cinema industry. Since that time investments have been confined to securities and participation in syndicates and underwritings. Investors Equity, incorporated in 1927, is an investment trust of the general management type. John W. Hanes of Charles D. Barney & Co., who was president of both companies, will be president of the enlarged company.

STEEL PRODUCTION EBBS IN THE WEEK

Output Now Off 5 Per Cent, With the Average About 80 Per Cent.

CAR BUILDING IS HEAVY

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 19.—Without any notable change in conditions in steel consuming lines in the last few weeks, there has been notable decrease in the rate of steel production, which has lost about 5 per cent in the week, the average rate being now down to about 80 per cent. The decrease appears to have been due to a combination of circumstances and represents another of this year's divergences from seasonal precedent.

It is the regular thing for steel production to decrease in the last month or two of the year and the question now is whether this early start means that the year-end decrease will be accentuated or is already being anticipated. Probably the majority opinion is that, with steel production now at 80 per cent, December will see a rate below 70 per cent.

The price news of the week is indefinite, but it gives much support to previous views that steel prices are by no means in secure positions, with, of course, certain exceptions such as the stable lines of rails, pipe and tin plate.

Recent reports of rail and freight car buying do not represent improvement in the general situation, but are along the line of assuring a continuance of previous conditions. Purchase of 310,000 tons of rails by the Pennsylvania and 206,430 tons by the New York Central puts the season total just above 900,000 tons. Fully half the usual annual buying has now been done, and other purchases will probably extend into the new year.

Orders for 11,450 freight cars were reported this week, following a total of 7,200 cars in the two weeks preceding, and making 18,650 cars for the month to date, while there is not a little active inquiry. It is certain that this buying will forestall any substantial decrease in activity at the freight-car shops, which a few weeks ago appeared to be on the verge of running out of orders.

Official reports for Class 1 railroads, representing 90 to 95 per cent of all freight-car buying, showed maximum number of cars on order at the beginning of last May, while on Sept. 1 the number was down to 31,371 cars, and with production sustained in September and light buying in the month the number Oct. 1 was only about 25,000. This month's buying is putting the order books in good shape again. This year's freight car building has been the heaviest since 1926, but at that it has only absorbed 3 to 4 per cent of the total steel production.

This month automobile production is back to its long-range trend or below it. The trend computation would show about 405,000 for this month. Prediction of next year's production involves gauging the popular taste as to buying a new car, perhaps also with some reference to financial ability.

While rumors of price cutting in steel have had an upsetting effect, no stage of outright declines of much significance has been reached. The cutting may have been largely on freight car material, and that has been done before without affecting the general market. Nail declines of the last three months do not involve much tonnage. Sheets have been weakening in one grade or another for several months, but sheets are always a particularly fluctuating commodity. Bars, shapes and plates are of much more significance and thus far they are off only slightly.

Scrap markets in all districts are declining. Prices have not suffered as much as might be expected, indicating a lighter outcome.

STEEL LESS ACTIVE IN CHICAGO AREA

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Steel operations in the Chicago district have receded of late and are down to the lowest point in months, taking mill activity as a whole. A feature is the buying by railroad interests, with implement makers taking fair supplies. Automobile purchasers are not active. There are, however, large back logs in the hands of Western sheet mills, which will keep operating capacity at a good average.

Rail mills of the West are on an 80 per cent basis, an increase of 5 per cent for the week and 30 per cent over a year ago. It is said that about 50 per cent of the large order placed by the Pennsylvania and New York Central Systems will be rolled in the Chicago district. Structural buying is only fair. Utilities are taking good supplies of copper wire and ingots, with a larger distribution than a year ago.

The distribution of dry goods and general merchandise by wholesalers is large, but in the aggregate is only slightly above a year ago. Retail sales in Chicago have increased, while outlying districts are maintaining previous volume which exceed last year's.

Chain stores and mail order houses are making large sales, with gains over a year ago. In some instances inventories of the parent house are being distributed among the branch houses where stocks of seasonal goods were not cleaned out as close as was expected early in the season.

FRENCH STEEL PRODUCTION.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The favorable trade conditions in France are reflected by the iron and steel production figures. As reported this week, the country's iron output for August was 893,000 tons, compared with 858,000 in the same month of last year and with 776,000 in 1927. Steel output last August, 827,000 tons, compared with 793,000 in the same month last year and with 696,000 in 1927. It had been exceeded this year only in July.

Blast furnaces active at the end of August numbered 156; at the same date in 1928 they were 150 and in the preceding year 142.

LARGE STEEL OUTPUT IN GERMANY DECEPTIVE

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—Steel output in Germany, as reported for the completed nine months of the year, was 12,421,316 tons, a reasonably satisfactory improvement over the 11,761,393 tons produced in the same months of 1928. Output of rolling mills was 8,637,762, against 8,466,249. The Ruhr chambers of commerce, however, state that the large iron and coal production really means nothing, since both home and foreign sales are declining. This agrees with other reports to the effect that iron-making corporations are producing for stock.

The monthly report of the machinery manufacturers association also states that foreign orders are declining. Some manufacturers are quoted as declaring that home business has been even reactionary, owing to the suspension of foreign loans to German industry, which hampers the purchase of a new factory plant.

BRITAIN MAKES MORE STEEL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Steel output in Great Britain during September was 847,900 tons. This is a substantial increase over the 753,300 tons of August and 718,600 of September last year. Iron output in September was 664,600, against 682,000 in August and 503,900 in September, 1928.

Furnaces working at the end of the month were 168, showing a decrease of 2 for the month.

TWO ATLANTA BANKS IN BIG MERGER DEAL

Atlanta and Lowry and Fourth National to Unite to Form the Largest Institution in South.

RESOURCES OF $141,000,000

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 20. — The formation of the largest bank south of Philadelphia and in the thirteen Southern States, as a result of the consolidation of the Atlanta and Lowry National Bank and the Fourth National Bank, was announced Saturday in a statement given to the press by John K. Ottley, president of the Fourth National, and T. K. Glenn, president of the Atlanta and Lowry.

The new bank, which will be known as the First National Bank, will have combined resources of $141,102,187, and deposits in excess of $101,000,000, making it by far the largest and strongest financial institution in the Southeastern States. The resources of the affiliated companies of the two banks will bring the total resources of the new bank to more than $150,000,000.

It was announced that the new bank would be formed entirely by a combination of the Fourth National and the Atlanta and Lowry, with no outside interests represented in any way. The merger plan, which was ratified by the board of directors of each bank at a joint meeting held Saturday, will be submitted for ratification to a joint meeting of the stockholders of the banks to be held on Nov. 20. Immediately following this meeting the directors of the new bank, who will include the entire board of both the Atlanta and Lowry and the Fourth National, will meet to name officers for the new institution.

The combination, which, it was announced, was to be effected solely for the purpose of forming a larger and stronger institution which would be able to render enlarged service to Atlanta and the entire Southwest, will make even stronger than it now is Atlanta's position as the financial centre of the South, it was asserted. The new bank will rank fiftieth in size in America. With capital, surplus and undivided profits of more than $12,000,000, it will be able to meet any demand that could be made upon a financial institution in this section, it is said. In addition, it will have more than $5,000,000 of capital, surplus and undivided profits of the Trust Company of Georgia. With its affiliated companies, it will be able to render every kind of trust and bank service.

Universal Pictures Reports.

SELL IT IN NEW ENGLAND

NEW ENGLAND is known as a producer of finished goods. She created over six billion dollars of manufactured value in 1928.

New England uses in her mills nine per cent of the raw materials fabricated in this country—over three billion dollars last year. Her per capita wealth—and therefore her purchasing power—exceeds the United States average. Her per capita income is $98 more than that for the nation as a whole.

In this rich consuming region is the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, one of the largest National Banks in the United States, helping those who sell to New England and those who buy in New England.

WHEAT LIQUIDATION BRINGS PRICE BREAK

One Group of Speculators Is Said to Have Sold Fifty Million Bushels.

RECORD OPEN INTEREST

Corn Closed the Week With Net Losses and With May Near the Season's Low Mark.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Liquidating grain markets, with prices on deferred futures of wheat the lowest of the season and with large lines greatly reduced, featured the close of the week.

Net losses in wheat were 7⅞ to 8¼ cents, after a break of 10 to 12 cents from the high point of the previous week, and are around 30 cents below the high point reached on July 29 for December. At the low point December was $1.26⅝, March $1.34⅝ and May $1.38, with the close ⅛ to ⅜ cent above the inside figures.

That prices should decline so sharply, with immense holdings credited to Eastern and local interests and in the face of the most bullish news regarding the Argentine crop, showed what an overbought market can do when a liquidating movement sets in.

It was estimated that one group of speculators, who are largely interested on the bull side of the stock market, at one time had 100,000,000 bushels of wheat bought for future delivery, and within two weeks have liquidated around 50,000,000 bushels.

To absorb such a large quantity of wheat shows the capacity of the professional trade to take immense quantities. This large line is about one-half of the American visible supply. The wheat was understood to have been bought on the belief that half a crop in the American Northwest was to be followed by a similar loss in Argentina and Australia.

Latest estimates on the Argentine's exportable surplus are 150,000,000 to around 185,000,000 bushels, or nearly 50 per cent of the estimated exports for the season ending Dec. 31 this year. A shortage of 500,000,000 bushels in the world's crop is estimated by the Department of Agriculture, which also had a great deal to do with creating a bullish feeling in the last few months. Expectations of help, both financially and morally, from the Federal Farm Bureau have all been a factor in inducing buying and checking short selling.

The Canadian pool, combined with the railroad interests and farmers in that country, are not disposed to sell on breaks, believing that ultimately wheat will be worth more money. All the immense cash holdings are understood to have been hedged in Chicago, Minneapolis or Winnipeg and some in Liverpool. The latter market has been out of line with America's and so far foreigners have dictated prices to sellers.

Open interest at the close was the largest known, being above 246,000,000 bushels at one time, and was 243,400,000 bushels at the finish, or the same as the previous week. Aggregate sales of wheat futures in the Chicago market for the week were 481,670,000 bushels, compared with 208,603,000 bushels the previous week and 125,325,000 bushels last year.

Primary receipts of wheat for week this year were 9,379,000 bushels, previous week 7,675,000 bushels, last year 18,728,000 bushels. Primary shipments for week this year 6,158,000 bushels, last week 5,077,000 bushels, last year 12,714,000 bushels.

December corn, declining to 90¼ cents on Saturday, showed a drop of 13 cents from the season's high, while May was down to within 1 cent of the season's low, with a close at 98¾ to 98⅝ cents. December closed 90¾ to 90⅝ cents. Net losses for the week of 3⅞ cents to 4 cents were made.

Primary receipts for week this year 4,597,000 bushels, previous week 3,096,000 bushels, last year 3,127,000 bushels. Shipments corn this year 2,894,000 bushels, against 1,857,000 bushels the previous week and 2,042,000 bushels last year.

The open interest in corn futures is small, especially as compared with wheat, being 43,450,000 bushels at the close, as compared with 43,316,000 bushels a week ago. Sales for the week of 90,000,000 bushels compared with 106,375,000 last year.

The oat market has acted better than other grains. The close was at net losses of 2¼ cents for the week. December was 49¾ to 49⅞ cents, March 53½ cents and May 98¾ to 98⅝ cents.

Rye futures are 3¾ to 4¼ cents lower for the week, December finishing at $1.04¼, March $1.09¾ and May $1.11.

STOCK AVERAGE LOWER.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 18.—Professor Irving Fisher's index number of Stock Exchange prices, based on the 215 most important stocks on the market, reckoned on their average of 1926 as 100, shows an average of 200.0 for the past week, as against 200.7 a week ago, 197.0 two weeks ago, 203.7 three weeks ago and 209.1 four weeks ago. The average of Sept. 6, 209.7, was the highest for the year to date. The average of May 31, 175.7, was the lowest of the year.

Another index number compiled by Professor Fisher and based on the fifty most active industrial stocks of the week is 1,085.5. This compares with 1,055.3 a week before, 1,060.5 two weeks before, 1,114.2 three weeks before and 1,181.7 four weeks before.

EXPECTS NATURAL GAS TO WIDEN ITS FIELDS

E. G. Diefenbach Says Distant Markets Will Be Reached With Industrial Fuel.

The growing natural gas industry is entering upon the most important phase of its development—the formation of interconnected "super-gas" systems extending over thousands of miles—according to E. G. Diefenbach, vice president of the United Gas Company and of G. E. Barrett & Co. Such systems will effect far-reaching economies and afford improved service to communities both near to and far removed from the natural gas reserves of the country, he said.

"These vast natural gas networks or 'super-gas' systems will open up distant new markets, such as Omaha and Chicago, which only recently have been made accessible through improvements in the manufacture of large diameter pipe. They will extend to every electric power plant of the Middle and South West," Mr. Diefenbach said. "Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Atlanta and other important cities eventually will burn natural gas as fuel for the generation of power.

"Already the Electric Bond and Share System, the Stone & Webster and the American Power and Light properties in Texas and Louisiana use natural gas fuel to provide light and power for such cities as Houston, San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth, El Paso and Beaumont, Texas.

"Electric power plants in this country consumed more than 77,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas for fuel in 1928. Petroleum refineries, for which natural gas is particularly adaptable as fuel, substantially increased their consumption. The huge refineries of Standard of Louisiana and Humble Oil and Refining, both subsidiaries of Standard of New Jersey, as well as the refineries of the Magnolia Petroleum Company, a subsidiary of Standard of New York, use natural gas for refining petroleum in Texas and Louisiana."

FINDS GAIN IN BUSINESS.

Producing and distributing lines are showing a higher average of activity than at this time last year, according to the October report of the Conference of Statisticians in Industry, operating under the auspices of the National Industrial Conference Board.

The report notes some recession in the iron and steel and automobile industries. This was balanced, however, by an increase in several divisions of the textile group and in coal mining, the latter being ascribed to seasonal influences. Improved demand for railroad equipment is also cited. Bituminous coal production has been larger since Aug. 1 than in the corresponding period of any recent year except 1926, the report says.

Stocks on hand are greater than normal in some of the heavier industries, it is pointed out, but this is attributed to conservatism on the part of buyers. This situation, it is held, has obviated the danger of commodity price inflation.

R. N. BALL, 38, HEADS BANK IN ROCHESTER

Treasurer of University Will Assume Post Today With the Lincoln-Alliance.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 20 (AP).—Raymond N. Ball, treasurer of the University of Rochester, tomorrow will become president of the Lincoln-Alliance Bank and Trust Company, it was announced here today. Mr. Ball, who is 38 years old, will be the youngest bank president in Rochester. The bank is in a flourishing condition with resources of $116,000,000.

President Thomas E. Lannin, who has been in the banking business in Rochester for forty years, starting as messenger boy, will become vice chairman of the board.

Mr. Ball has gained wide attention by his administration of the $62,000,000 funds of the university. He is credited with expending $7,000,000 for the new men's college on profits on investments without touching the principal.

Born in Wellsville, he was graduated from the University of Rochester in 1914. He first became associated with Kingman N. Robins, then university treasurer, in Associated Mortgage Investors, served as Captain in the war, returned to become alumni and executive secretary of the university, controller and then treasurer on the death of Mr. Robins in 1923.

COTTON PRICES SAG UNDER SPOT SALES

Rush of Staple to Market So Heavy That Buying Demand Is Inadequate to Absorb It.

PEAK OF PRODUCTION NEAR

Outside Speculative Interest Lacking, but Spot Houses Are Storing Tenderable Grades.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 20.—The cotton market drifted to lower levels last week, reaching the lowest levels of the season. The decline was orderly but persistent, and both December and January broke through the eighteen-cent line, ending the week with losses of about $2.50 a bale.

The downward trend of prices was due mainly to the excellent weather for picking and ginning the crop, resulting in the largest movement of cotton into sight for a single week on record, the total, according to Secretary Hester of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, exceeding 1,000,000 bales. In the face of this enormous movement it was impossible to stimulate any sort of speculative buying, and prices gradually receded as the volume of offerings exceeded the immediate demand.

Hedge selling continued heavy, and there was no lack of speculative short selling. To absorb this volume of offerings the main dependence was trade buying. This developed in fairly large volume, but it was generally on the scale down; hence the hedge and other offerings were absorbed only at constantly dwindling prices.

Little Top-Crop Making.

As a result of the excellent weather all over the South last week picking and harvesting went forward rapidly, yet there were few reports of any top-crop making. Texas reported some increase in the size of bolls, but no gain in the number of bolls developing. At the same time the absence of any indication of a sudden change to cold weather caused some fear that estimates of the crop would have to be increased.

The extent of the damages to the crop from the weather is only now becoming really evident. In the eastern belt much low-grade cotton has resulted from the last tropical storm. Bolls have rotted and the volume of untenderable cotton has been increased measurably. In Texas there is much short staple cotton which likewise is untenderable on contracts. This volume of low grades will tend later to enhance the value of the good grades by hardening the basis. The belief that there will be an urgent demand for good cotton has induced much speculative buying of spot. Large spot houses have been buying desirable cotton and storing it, hedging the purchases in the contract market where there is a fair carrying charge.

These buyers know that domestic spinners, and probably foreign spinners, are following a hand-to-mouth policy, that their stocks will have to be replenished and that desirable cotton will bring a price. Meantime producers are taking advantage of the demand and are selling their cotton as fast as it is ginned.

Smaller Carryover Forecast.

While there is some tendency to increase crop ideas, it is believed that consumptive requirements of the season will exceed production, leaving a carryover smaller than at the end of last July.

So long as the crop movement is as heavy as it is, outsiders do not regard cotton as a good speculation, hence the contract market is dependent upon trade buying to absorb the hedges, although covering by satisfied shorts as prices ease affords a certain amount of support. That speculation eventually will enter the market, most traders are convinced, but not until it is apparent that the movement of the crop to market has passed its peak.

Accounts from the interior indicate that this peak in the movement will soon be passed. Picking and ginning are going ahead rapidly and in many sections are near completion.

While exports have increased of late, the daily clearings must for a time compare with unusually heavy shipments on corresponding dates last year. So far the exports are running about 100,000 bales behind those of last season, but stocks at ports are nearly 200,000 bales larger and cotton is accumulating at the ports more rapidly than last year. It therefore is expected that the comparatively small excess of last season over this will give place soon to an excess for this season.

FLAX CROP FAILURE AFFECTS BUILDING

PRICE QUOTATIONS STOP

Paint, floor covering and other linseed oil using branches of the building industry face a difficult situation as the result of an inferior and practically failed flaxseed crop at home and abroad, according to Allen E. Beals, writing in the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports.

"Flaxseed that fluctuates in transit 20 to 30 cents a bushel in a single day is in a sick market," Mr. Beals writes. "In fact, the market is so distressed that all quotations in the Architects' Weekly Building Material Price Supplement have been withdrawn by the leading linseed oil distributers, for reasons supplied below:

"Since linseed oil is the product of the mucilaginous seed of the soft-fibered plant called flax, any major disarrangement in the physical well-being of the national or international sources of flaxseed supply at once affects not only the cost of building more or less, but of building maintenance as well.

"The trouble in this part of the building trade began with the discovery that this year's American planting of flax in the three largest producting States of North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana will yield only 15,000,000 bushels instead of a normal 26,000,000 or more.

"At that point the trade turned toward Argentina with a plan to import enough to take up the slack, but Argentina also has been short of rain and subsoil moisture during June, July and August, so that its crop of flax, planted on 15 per cent less acreage than normally would have been set out, probably will yield only 57,000,000 bushels, from which the United States will require about 24,000,000 to keep itself even fairly well supplied, leaving only 33,000,000 bushels for all the rest of the world to use in painting its houses, feeding its cattle, making its imitation butter, manufacturing linoleums, soap, &c., whereas in normal world requirements could easily absorb all the flaxseed Argentina, the world's largest producer of flax, could spare.

"'During the month of July, when it became apparent that the production of our domestic flaxseed crop would be considerably smaller than in previous years on account of lack of sufficient moisture and when complaints from Argentina regarding droughty conditions became more numerous, interfering with the sowing of the new crop, linseed markets rose sharply. After having advanced about 40 cents per bushel, it was felt that for the time being this discounted the bullish developments both here and in Argentina and the markets reacted somewhat from the high levels to the extent of about 15 cents per bushel.

"'However, the drought in Argentina continued then seriously interfering with sowing and retarding the germination of the early sown seed. As a consequence, the advance in flaxseed prices was resumed and a rise of 60 cents per bushel was registered, reflecting the very serious developments in Argentina, which now became the dominating market factor.

"'Good general rains commencing Sept. 12 in all the linseed provinces of Argentina brought the much-needed relief, checking further deterioration, but arriving too late to permit of additional sowing of any importance. Prices dropped precipitately, but reacted upward again very quickly when it was realized that a few days of good rains could not bring the crop back to normal.

"'In order to arrive at an estimate of production we have to consider two factors: viz., acreage and yield.

"'The sowing period has passed, but no reliable official acreage estimate has been issued. In the absence of such figures and taking into consideration the fact that the linseed harvest there does not begin until the middle of November and continues through December and January, one can only make a guess as to how much linseed Argentina will raise this season.'"

CALLS FOR SOCIAL REBELS.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—A call for "rebels against the standardization and stupidity of the twentieth century" was voiced by Dr. Bernard I. Bell, warden of St. Stephen's College of Columbia University, in an address delivered before Bryn Mawr College students this evening. He declared that America was in danger of becoming obsessed with the idea that youth only mattered.

"We seem to assume that the only pleasures worth cultivating are those which appeal to adolescence or at the most to people under 35 years of age," said Dr. Bell.

"Our arts become daily more and more either utilitarian or imitative. Our literature tends more and more to be photographic or neurotic. We need rebels; people who will refuse to conform to the social and mechanical pressures all about us, who will insist that manhood is more than youth."

The Peerless Operating Company, Inc., sold its leasehold of the property at 740 to 746 Third Avenue, northwest corner of Forty-sixth Street. The lease is for sixty-three years and was bought by the Prime Properties Corporation, Samuel Lautenberg, president. The site is 100 by 100 feet. William S. Sussman, Inc., acted as broker. A total rental of $1,000,000 is involved in the deal and will call for an additional outlay of $3,000,000 for improvement.

DEALS IN NEW JERSEY.

The three-story building at 639 Anderson Avenue, Grantwood, N. J., has been sold by the Bergen County Holding Company to the Equity Holding Corporation of New Jersey, Charles Feist, president. The purchase was made through J. B. Wolfe, broker, for investment.

Mary and Hugo Baer purchased from Gertrude Arms, Inc., the business property at 955 Broadway, Union City, at the southwest corner of Forty-seventh Street.

The parcel consists of a three-story frame structure, with a store on the ground floor, four apartments above, and two garages, on a lot 25 by 100 feet. The seller took as part payment in exchange two two-family brick dwellings of similar type and construction at 817-19 Twenty-seventh Street, Union City, on a plot 40 by 100 feet. The broker was J. I. Kislak, Inc.

WAVERLY PLACE RENTALS.

New Apartment There Will Be Opened Next Month.

H. S. Hillyer & Co., agents for the new twelve-story apartment house at Waverly Place, northwest corner of Mercer Street, report that the house is 80 per cent rented and that it will be ready for occupancy early next month. The building was erected by Louis Jakobson and he is planning to start work before the close of the year on a similar house at Greene Street and Washington Place.

The 1 Waverly Place apartment house is the first modern residential building erected in the old loft centre in the area between Washington Square and Broadway. To the north the Sailors' Snug Harbor has erected modern apartments in Ninth and Tenth Streets between University Place and Broadway, and the Brittany Apartment Hotel, on the northwest corner of Broadway and Tenth Street, was completed a short time ago by Henry Mandeal. The new Waverly Place building is practically limited to one and two room suites.

DOUGLASTON HILLS GROWS.

New Families Reported as Settling in Queens Community.

The Douglaston Hills section in the northeastern part of the Borough of Queens, near the Nassau County line, has shown considerable growth in recent months, according to H. A. Lockwood & Co., developers of suburban home properties. A number of new families have acquired homes and settled in Douglaston Hills East due to the increasing accessibility of the property, it was stated. Another factor in the development has been the rugged character of the region, commanding a view of the hills of Nassau County.

In addition to service by the Long Island Railroad, the community now has available buses connecting with the L. I. R. R. and B. M. T. lines at Flushing, Mr. Lockwood points out. Northern Boulevard passes through Douglaston.

CIGARETTE INCREASE SHOWN IN TAX RISE

STEADY GAIN SINCE 1926

Receipts Nearly $32,000,000 More Than for the Same Period of Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The rapid increase in the use of cigarettes in the United States was strikingly illustrated by figures made public tonight by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which showed that the manufacturer's taxes collected on cigarettes by the government, for the first nine months of the calendar year 1929, totaled $271,671,338.39, as compared with $239,589,571.27 for the same period one year ago.

The total for the nine months of this year also was greater by more than $3,000,000 than the collections from this source in the entire year 1926, only $20,000,000 less than for the twelve months of 1927, and but $41,000,000 under the twelve months of 1928.

Another interesting point was that the tax collected on cigarettes in the nine months of 1929 represented nearly 80 per cent, or all but $69,776,649.08, of the total of $341,447,987.47 collected on all forms of tobacco products during the period.

The bureau gave out figures on the the taxes paid by States, which showed that North Carolina was far in the lead with a payment of $166,497,536.95 for the nine months on cigarettes, and Virginia second with $51,082,350.07.

The statistics also showed the relationship of the taxes paid on various tobacco products for the nine months to the tax paid by cigarettes to be as follows:

CIGARETTES—$271,671,338.39.
CIGARS—$10,380,886.83.
CIGARETTE PAPERS AND TUBES—$1,011,632.57.

The following table shows by States the taxes paid on cigarettes and on all tobacco products during the first nine months of 1929:

States.	Cigarettes.	Total (all sources).
Delaware	96.99	97,260.14
Florida	2,800.07	2,119,804.00
Indiana	31.16	489,571.47

ASKS HOOVER TO ACT ON HOBOKEN PIERS

SAYS PEOPLE FAVOR MOVE

Ramon B. Harrison, editor of The Newsette, a Hudson County (N. J.) weekly, has sent to President Hoover and the Senate Committee on Commerce copies of a letter addressed to T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the United States Shipping Board on the question of returning the old North German Lloyd and Hamburg-American steamship piers to their former operators.

These piers in Hoboken, representing, Mr. Harrison points out in his communication, one-third of the waterfront of Hoboken, are not being used to capacity at the present time. He contends they were seized as enemy-owned property during the war and have been held "over the protest of the citizens of Hoboken" ever since.

Mr. Harrison forwarded his letter to Chairman O'Connor on Oct. 10. He told Mr. O'Connor that, in the event the letter received no reply, copies of it would be sent to the President and the chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce. Mr. Harrison got no reply, he said, and consequently has forwarded the material to Washington.

In the letter he points out that the North German Lloyd Line has been unable to complete an arrangement by which it could dock its ships at the piers in use before America entered the World War. As a result, he says, the steamers of this line are being docked at a subleased pier in the Army Base, South Brooklyn, a location much less desirable from a commercial standpoint.

Says People Favor Return.

Mr. Harrison declares the letter was occasioned by efforts of citizens of Hoboken to get some relief from the "intolerable burden of taxation imposed upon it by the retention of the Hoboken piers." The government, he charges, is either unwilling or unable to utilize these properties to their normal extent and is unwilling to permit the return to the port of Hoboken of the former operators.

The result is an unnecessarily heavy tax on the citizens of the New Jersey community, as the waterfront portion represents about 7 per cent of the "tax ratables," he charges, and suggests an act authorizing the sale of these properties so that they may be returned to the city as private property, taxable as such.

Mr. Harrison specifically requested the chairman of the Shipping Board to answer questions pertaining to the lease of Piers 3 and 4 of the Army Base at Brooklyn to the Atlantic Tidewater Terminals, a private concern, in the years 1923 to 1928, with a five-year renewal option. He also asks if the lease was renewed under the option and if the North German Lloyd, now berthing her larger ships there, has a sublease from the Atlantic Tidewater people.

Wants Stockholders Named.

He also asked Mr. O'Connor to affirm or deny that several stockholders in the lessee corporation held government positions or were relatives of high officials of the Shipping Board with offices at 45 Broadway, where the Shipping Board has headquarters; to affirm or deny that the North German Lloyd has made repeated unsuccessful efforts to obtain use of its old piers in Hoboken, and to state if he believed the lease of the Army Base pier to be the best possible commercial arrangement for the government.

The objection among shipping men to the rental of large piers to small steamship lines is part of the general question of available terminal facilities for steamship companies with large liners. While the city is making every effort to obtain adequate docking space for the giant liners of the Atlantic, bigger ships are being planned or are under actual construction in foreign yards.

Unless some arrangement is made in the near future, these big ships will have to go to some out-of-the-way terminal, as the North German Lloyd has done, shipping experts have pointed out.

BAYONNE TO IMPROVE PIERS.

Harbor Engineer Favors Project to Develop Newark Bay.

The New York Harbor Line Board has informed Mayor Bert Daly of Bayonne that its acting chief of engineers has "indicated approval of the proposed modification of harbor lines in Newark Bay as applied for by the city of Bayonne, excepting the converging lines between the Central Railroad of New Jersey and West Eleventh Street, Bayonne."

The extension of the bulkhead lines into the bay and other changes which are proposed will be the first moves in a program of expansion of the harbor, it was announced yesterday by the City Plan Commission of Bayonne. Development of the city's park plan and residential districts will attend the harbor changes, the commission declared.

WOMAN IN SWIMMING TEST.

Mrs. Schoemmell Covers 6 Miles in Handcuffs, Feet Tied.

Lottie Moore Schoemmell, holder of a number of records for long distance and endurance swimming, swam from Eighty-first Street and the North River to Pier A, at the Battery, yesterday afternoon handcuffed and with her feet tied together. She covered the distance, which is approximately six miles, in two hours and eighteen minutes and left the water in excellent condition. The temperature of the water was between 48 and 50 degrees.

CROWDS SEE MRS. HART IN BELEAGUERED HOME

But She Gets Only $1 Toward $600 Back Rent—Says She May Give Benefit Show.

If her fight against eviction has done nothing else for Mrs. Tillie Hart, who is barricaded in her home at 429 West Twenty-third Street against contractors who would raze the building in which she is living, it has brought her plenty of visitors. Several hundred persons gathered yesterday about the house to take snapshots and to greet Mrs. Hart's every appearance on her small porch with bursts of applause.

Mrs. Hart, however, is bewailing the loss of flowers, shrubs and benches from her garden. Nearly everything portable has been taken by souvenir hunters. And while scores of persons congratulated Mrs. Hart upon her fight against "encroaching landlords," there was only one answer to her recent appeal for funds to pay $600 back rent due Wednesday.

The woman who alone prevents the real estate associates of Henry Mandel from building on the site she now occupies has another string to her bow, however.

While she has received only $1 in response to her appeal, she may sponsor a theatrical benefit. An agent has promised to provide her with artists if she can engage a hall. Details have not yet been settled.

Meanwhile she regards the removal of the steam shovel from the vicinity as an indication of victory.

FEDERATION BEGINS DRIVE FOR MEMBERS

Jewish Charity Organization Hopes to Put 50,000 New Families on Its Rolls.

WOULD DEMOCRATIZE WORK

2,000 Attend Opening Dinner at Which Organization's Five Presidents Are Honored.

The first membership extension campaign in the history of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies was started last night in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Commodore at a dinner in honor of Felix Warburg, Arthur Lehman, Joseph L. Buttenwieser, Sol M. Stroock and Dudley D. Sicher, the five sucessive presidents of the federation since its organization in 1917.

More than 2,000 men and women, representing professional, business, fraternal and industrial life and including Jewish leaders from every field of activity, were at the dinner. Addresses were made by David Sarnoff, executive vice president of the Radio Corporation, and other speakers, including four nationally known leaders of philanthropy who spoke to the gathering from studios in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Cincinnati over radio circuits wired to the ballroom.

The aim of the drive, on which 4,500 volunteer workers will start work this morning, will be to democratize the support of the federation's ninety-one constituent agencies, which in the past have been mainly financed by gifts of large sums. The appeal will be for smaller sums from the average merchant and professional man and an effort will be made to enroll at least one member from each of 50,000 additional families.

Discusses Commerce and Peace.

Mr. Sarnoff, in the principal speech of the evening, discussed the problems of world peace and stressed the responsibility which rests upon the business man for its preservation. Many wars, he said, have had their foundations in commercial rivalry and economic friction. Business men, he declared, must recognize what is right and equitable between nations and must discourage those who would disregard that which is fair and just.

The work of the federation, he explained, was dedicated to a practical program in line with the ideals of world peace inaugurated by President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald.

"Federation strives to remove at its source the suffering, hardship and misunderstanding which so often find their expression in discontent and jealousy," he said. "There can be no world-wide appreciation by the individual of the implications of world peace until in his relations with his immediate neighbor he has learned the lesson of neighborliness and social justice."

In referring to the five guests of honor and their philanthropic work, Mr. Sarnoff declared that it took occasions such as the present one to show the world how men who had succeeded in the machine age have had none of their humanities limited, but rather expanded. The honor guests were also felicitated by the four speakers, who were heard for three minutes each over the radio circuits wired to the room for the occasion.

The Radio Speakers.

These speakers were Louis E. Kirstein, president of the Jewish Training School for Social Work, who spoke from Boston; William E. Schroder, former president of the National Conference of Jewish Social Service, speaking from Cincinnati; Judge Horace Stern of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, speaking from that city, and Alfred A. Foreman, president of the Chicago Federation of Jewish Charities, who spoke from Chicago.

Judge Joseph M. Proskauer of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York acted as toastmaster and introduced the honor guests as they received medals "for their communal leadership" from Frederick Brown, chairman of the citizens' committee sponsoring the dinner. Other speakers who addressed the gathering included Dudley D. Sicher, now president of the federation; Sam A. Lewisohn, chairman of the campaign, who will direct the drive with S. W. Straus, chairman of the membership extension division of the federation, and Mr. Warburg.

The program closed with a dramatic allegory on the subject of philanthropy presented by unseen actors under the direction of Samuel L. (Roxy) Rothafel. The allegory was staged in a room adjoining the ballroom, the voices of the actors being carried into that darkened chamber by an amplifying system. The entire program was broadcast over Station WNYC.

Among those seated on the dais were Mrs. Sidney C. Borg, chairman of the woman's division of the federation; Dr. Solomon Lowenstein, executive director, and Lieut. Gov. Herbert Lehman. Other prominent guests included Samuel Untermyer, Borough President Julius Miller, Percy S. Straus, Jesse Straus, Franklin Simon and Samuel J. Bloomingdale.

WHALEN TELLS OF NEED FOR CRIME PREVENTION

Bureau for That Purpose Will Reform Incipient Criminals, He Says in Church Address.

Police Commissioner Whalen explained "the need for a crime prevention bureau in this city and lauded the efficiency of the present police force in a talk last night before the congregation of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, at 218 West Eleventh Street. He declared that such a bureau would be the most logical adjunct to the present "police army of 19,000 men."

In considering the many problems facing police officials today Mr. Whalen said that the correction of incipient criminals is the most vital, with such correction being accomplished through study of social conditions by a bureau of experienced men. Approval of a Bureau of Crime Prevention was given by the Board of Estimate on last Friday.

Mr. Whalen cited as an example of dire conditions here the case of a young girl recently taken in Brooklyn for aiding in a series of hold-ups after she had been turned out of home as a "bad girl." Sympathetic officials, he said, would be able to assist such a girl to see the error of her ways and perhaps restore her to the good graces of her family. He also spoke of the case yesterday wherein a father and his six children were suffocated to death for want of proper surveillance as evidence of unfortunate social conditions.

In a plea for the approval by citizens of the proposed pay increase for policemen, Mr. Whalen said: "It is a very necessary thing to keep our force of men in a happy frame of mind, and we can be assured of this only when they are free from worries. Increased salaries is our surest method of maintaining an efficient force."

Mr. Whalen praised the spirit of Patrolman Charles Sauer of the Hamilton Avenue police station, who was killed by hold-up men in Brooklyn on Saturday night while attempting to make an arrest. He said that such loyalty to duty is the same which animates the entire force.

"We have made an effort to encourage courtesy in patrolmen, at the same time," said Mr. Whalen, "in the certain conviction that the little things done well will mean that the big things will take care of themselves. Our police force is our finest investment, and our police force is the finest in the world."

In an incidental comment upon the problem of prohibition in this city, Mr. Whalen said, "I see in my experience that the coming generation is being severely challenged by the Eighteenth Amendment, and it is a happy thing that President Hoover has appointed a committee to study the problem with an eye to remedying a difficult situation."

H. S. Black Recovering Rapidly.

Harry S. Black, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Realty and Improvement Company, who was found unconscious in his bathtub with his head under water in his suite at the Hotel Plaza Friday evening, was reported greatly improved yesterday. Although still confined to his bed by the orders of his physician, Mr. Black, whose life was saved by a pulmotor crew which worked over him for nearly nine hours, was said to be in excellent spirits, and he hopes to resume his business duties in another day or two.

Dr. Lurie Heads Shalleck Workers.

Dr. Max Lurie, Professor of Languages in the College of the City of New York, was selected yesterday as chairman of the Non-Partisan Collegiate League for the election of Municipal Court Justice Benjamin Shalleck, Democratic candidate for re-election in the Fifth District. Other members of the league are Oscar L. Meyerson, John Owen, Frank H. Egdol, Walter H. Roberts and Arnold Eckdahl.

NEW YORK WOMAN KILLED AT CAPITAL

Mrs. Aurelia F. Dreyfuss Falls Mysteriously From Porch of Boat Club During Dance. .

HER ESCORT HELD BY POLICE

E. J. McBrien, Stock Salesman, Also of New York, Facing Inquiry, Says He Had Left Her Alone.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Another death mystery developed here today when Mrs. Aurelia Fisher Dreyfus, a 29-year-old divorcee of New York City, died in Emergency Hospital of injuries received earlier in a fall from an upper porch of the Potomac Boat Club, where she and friends had been attending a dance given by the Colonial Canoe Club.

Edmund J. McBrien, 30, who told the police that he was a stock salesman of New York City, is being held at the Twelfth Precinct Police station as a witness for questioning tomorrow at the coroner's inquest.

Joseph Waldron of the homicide squad said a preliminary investigation revealed that McBrien was the last person to see Mrs. Dreyfus before her unconscious form was found on the boat landing below the balcony.

Mrs. Dreyfus and McBrien went to the dance last night, accompanied by the dead woman's sister, Miss Freida Fisher, and her brother, William Fisher of this city, secretary of the Colonial Canoe Club.

The police say that McBrien's story is that he, Mrs. Dreyfus and her brother and sister were standing on the platform.

Freida and William Fisher stepped from the balcony to the dance hall to have the last dance, and when they left, according to the police, McBrien was the only person with their sister. He told the police that he excused himself from her to obtain the hats and coats of the party to avoid the rush after the last dance.

According to the police, several persons saw him leave the balcony and go to the cloak room. McBrien said he returned and heard some one shout that a woman had fallen from the porch. He rushed to the lower platform and, after friends grouped about the inert form of Mrs. Dreyfus.

Mrs. Dreyfus had been living in New York for several years. Her home was at 128 West Fifty-ninth Street. McBrien lived at 120 West Fifty-ninth Street.

Mrs. Dreyfus came to Washington on Tuesday to see her sister, Freida, who came here from Cleveland, Ohio, to visit her family.

At 128 Central Park South last night building attendants said that Mrs. Dreyfus had maintained an apartment there for the last three years and had made frequent trips to Washington. No. 120 Central Park South is the Catholic Club, the home of Mr. McBrien. It was said there that Mr. McBrien left three days ago for a short absence.

MRS. PECK PLANS AIR TOUR.

Explorer to Sail for South America Oct. 30 to Start Trip.

Mrs. Annie S. Peck, explorer, author and lecturer and an authority on South America, will soon make an airplane tour of most of South America, she said last night at her home, 71 West Eighty-ninth Street. Miss Peck will sail from New York on Oct. 30 to Colombia and take off from Barranquilla on the first leg of a journey which will take her into practically every country. It will be her tenth visit to South America.

Miss Peck, no longer a young woman—she graduated from the University of Michigan in 1878—won world-wide note in 1908 when, after many attempts, she climbed Mount Huascarán, in Peru. This mountain is 21,812 feet high and is the highest point in this hemisphere thus far reached by an American. Subsequently the Peruvian Government named this peak after her. Miss Peck made many other explorations in South America and is the author of several books, the best known being "Commercial and Industrial South America."

Yoon represented Korea at the Portsmouth peace conference during President Roosevelt's Administration. He said he wished to provide immediately three medical and three scientific scholarships a year at leading medical and technical institutions.

FIRE DESTROYS HOTEL AT BURLINGTON, VT.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Oct. 20 (AP).—Fire swept the La France Hotel on Main Street here today and spread to two restaurants adjoining the four-story brick structure before it was brought under control, with a loss estimated at $200,000.

The fire had gained great headway before it was first noticed. An employe at the cigar counter saw flames burst through the floor in front of where he was standing. Guests, fifteen in all, were notified just in time for them to escape with what they could snatch up in their hands.

By the time firemen arrived the interior was a furnace. For five hours the fire departments of Burlington and Winooski fought the blaze, aided by men from Fort Ethan Allan and Essex Junction, Conn. Late dinner guests at the Park Café and Acadia Restaurant were forced to abandon their tables for the street, although the damage there was caused largely by smoke and water.

Several firemen were overcome by heavy smoke.

HERE'S THE "ANTI-KNOCK" TYPEWRITER

The kind that goes slap! slap! slap! Each key whanging the paper with a resounding whack. (That's a hammer-blow typewriter!) And the other kind . . . . . the pressure-printing typewriter, each key kissing the paper with a smooth, swift and utterly noiseless contact.

(That's a REMINGTON NOISELESS.)

In its standard 4-row keyboard, the REMINGTON NOISELESS is similar to other typewriters. But there the similarity ends!

It is utterly different in its lighter touch, its faster action, its finer and greater output, its real and abiding noiselessness.

For a thorough demonstration without cost or obligation simply write or phone REMINGTON RAND BUSINESS SERVICE INC., Typewriter Division, 374 Broadway, New York City. Phone WORth 7500.
